CORN. The origin of its cultivation is attributed to Ceres, who, having taught the art to the Egyptians, was deified by them. 2490 B.C. Arundel Marbles. The art of husking, and the method of making bread from wheat, and wine from rice, is attributed by the Chinese to Ching Nung, the successor of Fo Hii, and second monarch of China, 1998 B.C. Univ. Hist. Corn provided a common article of food from the earliest ages of the world, and baking bread was known in the patriarchal ages; see Ezek. 13, 15. The earliest importation of corn, of which we have a note, was in 1347. A law restricting it was made in 1561, and similar legislation followed. Bounties were granted on its importation into England in 1869. See Wheat.

CORN LAWS.

The restrictions on the importation of corn fell, in consequence of the increase of manufactures, about 1770; relaxed 1773. Mr. Robinson's act passed, permitting importation when wheat is 3s. a quarter 28 April 1815. During the discussions on this bill, mobs assembled in London, and many of the houses of its supporters were damaged, 28 Jan. and a riot in Westminster continued 6-9 March.

A corn bill, after passing in the commons, defeated in the lords, by a clause proposed by the duke of Wellington, carried by a majority of 3 to 1, June 1827. The act (called the sliding scale act), whereby by wheat was allowed to be imported on payment of a duty of 1s. 5s. 3d. per quarter, whenever the average price of all England was under 62s.; from 62s. to 63s., 1s. 4d. 3d.; and so gradually reduced to 2s., when the average price was 73s. and upwards, passed 15 July, 1827.

The act 5 Viet. c. 14, the second "sliding scale act," regulating the duty on wheat, with similar duties, also, on other articles of corn, passed 29 April, 1842.

See Anti-Corn Law League.

The Corn Importation Bill (introduced by sir Robert Peel) passed, and it was resolved March 27, 1846. The 3s. a quarter on wheat was reduced to 2s., when imported at or above 53s., 1st Feb. 1849; after which day the duty became 1s. per quarter only, on all kinds of grain imported into the United Kingdom, at any prices), received the royal assent 26 June, 1846. Jubilee address to right hon. C. P. Villiers, an early earned advocate for the repeal, 27 June, 1856.

CORN EXCHANGE, Mark-lane, London, erected at an expense of 90,000L. (replacing one established in 1773) was opened June 1828. Corn Exchange Benevolent Society founded 1824. The Society of Arts gave a prize to Mr. W. A. Gibbes for his essay on harvesting corn in wet weather 2 Nov. 1828.

The 3s. duty repealed by act passed 24 June, 1846. Duty on imported corn, 3s. per cwt., and flour, 5s. per cwt., passed; see Budget 4 July, 1892.

Duty limited; see Budget 19 June 1893. 7,023,058 acres of land were devoted to the cultivation of corn in Great Britain and 1,157,794 acres in Ireland 1899.

Ithaca, New York: for the study of the applied sciences, agriculture, culture, engineering, &c.; (courses for journalism and forestry instituted in 1898), partially on a self-supporting system; founded by Ezra Cornell in 1868, that "any person may find instruction in any study." He had risen from poverty to wealth by patenting his inventions. The university includes Sage college for women. See Fires, 7 Dec. 1899.

CORNER, a term applied in America to the paralysis of trade and manufactures, produced by speculators purchasing in anticipation grain, potatoes, flax, cotton, &c. (term-cotton corner). A "cotton corner" at Liverpool in Sept. 1881 led to the stopping of looms in Lancashire, &c., by way of counteraction. The corner ended 30 Sept. 1881.

Another "cotton corner" proposed in June 1837 was resisted by the joint action of the manufacturers and operatives. A "cotton corner" in Liverpool was resisted and closed 30 Sept. 1892. See Trusts. A "wheat corner" in Chicago since 1845, collapsed June, 1863. "Cotton corner," New York, 1893. "Wheat corner" in Chicago, April, 1896.

CORNWALL, S. W. extremity of England. On the retreat of the ancient Britons after the Saxon conquest, Cornwall was said to have been formed into a kingdom, and to have existed many years under different princes, among whom were Ambrosius Aurelius, and the celebrated Arthur. Cornwall is said to have been made an earldom by Alfred. The eldest son of the British sovereign is born duke of Cornwall. See Stannary Courts. CORONET.

CORONERS.

Coroners in England were first appointed by statute of Westminster, Edw. I., 1275. The jury of coroners is still a body of freeholders, and their duty is to inquire into the cause of any unnatural death and present the coroner with a report of their findings.

CORPORATE UNION. See Order.

CORPORATIONS (Law). — The term "corporation" is derived from Latin corporatio, meaning "body." A corporation is a legal entity that is granted certain rights and powers by the government. The term is often used to refer to businesses and other organizations that are granted legal personality. The nature of corporate law varies significantly from country to country, but in many jurisdictions, corporations have the ability to enter into contracts, own property, and take legal action in their own name.

CORPORATIONS (Defendants). — The Court of Chancery was a court of equity in England, established in 1557. It was abolished in 1873. The jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery was over certain civil matters, including cases involving property, trusts, and estates.

COSSACKS.

COSSACKS.

During the Napoleonic Wars, the Tsar of Russia, Nicholas I, feared that his vassals would be tempted to join the French side. After the defeat of France, he abolished serfdom, which had been the basis of Russian society. The Cossacks, who had been a powerful force in Russian history, were freed from serfdom and given the right to participate in government. However, they continued to resist Russian control, and the Cossack army was put down by the government in 1877.

The Cortes were assembled after a long interval of years, 24 Sept. 1810; and settled the new constitution, 16 March 1812, which was set aside by Ferdinand VII., who banished many members of the assembly in May, 1814. The cortes were reopened by him March, 1820, dissolved Oct. 1823, again assembled April, 1834, and have since been regularly convened. The cortes of Portugal assembled by virtue of Don Pedro's charter, 30 Oct. 1826; they were suppressed by Dom Miguel in 1828, and restored in 1833.

CORUNNA (N. W. Spain). The British army, about 15,000 men, under the command of sir John Moore, had just accomplished their retreat when they were attacked by the French, whose force exceeded 20,000; the enemy were completely repulsed. British loss estimated 800, French, 3,000, 16 Jan. 1809. Sir John was struck by a cannon-ball, which carried away his left shoulder and part of the collar-bone, and he died in universally lamented. The remains of the army embarked at Corunna, under sir David Baird, 17 Jan.

COSMOGRAPHY. see Astronomy and Geography.

COSSACKS, warlike people inhabiting the confines of Poland, Russia, Tartary, and Turkey. They at first lived by plundering the Turkish gauleys and the people of Anatolia, but were formed into a regular army by Stephen Batu, about 1276, to defend the frontiers of Russia from the Tartars. They joined the Russians in 1634, and in the great war against France (1813-15) formed a valuable portion of the Russian army; and also in the Russo-Turkish wars of 1853-56; 1877-78. Employed in the Russo-Japanese war, 1904-5. During Russian disorders 1845 (obs'd 26 Apr.), Cossacks were employed to restore order. Greatly excorated for their brutality.

"CORRELATION OF THE PHYSICAL FORCES," a book by Mr. (afterwards sir) W. H. Grove, F.R.S., who in 1842 enunciated the theory of the mutual dependence of the convolutions into each other of all the forces of nature (viz., heat, light, electricity, magnetism, chemical affinity, and motion). This theory has been fully established by experimental researches, see Heat, Electricity, &c. Sir W. H. Grove was present at the Faraday Centenary, which see, 17 June, 1891.

CORRESPONDING SOCIETY OF LONDON, was formed about 1761, to spread liberal opinions and check the severity of the British government, then much alarmed by the French revolution. Horne Tooke and other members were tried for treason and acquitted, Oct. 1794; see Trials, 1794. The meetings of the society at Copenhagen-fields and elsewhere, in 1792 and 1796, were termed treasonable. —On 21 April, 1798, Messrs. O'Connor, O'Coigley, and others, were tried for corresponding with the French directory; and James O'Cogley was executed as a traitor (protesting his innocence) on 7 June.

CORROSIVE SUBLIMATE, see Mercury.

CORRUPT PRACTICES ACTS, respecting elections for members of parliament, were passed in 1854, and continued in following years. An act relating to Scotland was passed in 1890. See Bribery at Elections and Corporations.

By an act passed in 1832 elections at Boston, Canterbury, Chester, Gloucester, Macclesfield, and Oxford, were temporarily suspended; and Messrs. May and Main (Macclesfield), Mr. Edwards (Decili), Mr. O'ds (Sandwich), and others were sentenced to imprisonment varying from 2 to 9 months, 1833.

Petition for the release signed (in vain) by 43,841 persons about 25 Dec.

The act 46 & 47 vict. c. 51, passed 25 Aug. 1837, strictly prohibits hiring carriages and illegal payments; amended 6 July, 1838. In 1836 the act by 5,670,000 votes, and in 1837 by 7,262,000 votes. Prevention of corruption bill; royal assent, 1 Aug. 1836.

CORSICA, an island in the Mediterranean Sea (called by the Greeks Cynora), held by the French. The ancient inhabitants had the character of robbers, liars, and atheists, according to Seneca. Corsica was colonised by Phocceans 564 B.C., and afterwards held by the Carthaginians, from whom it was taken by the Romans, 238 B.C. It was held by Vandals, A.D. 456; by Saracens 852; by Persians, 1077. It was dependent upon Genoa from 1559 till 1768, when it was ceded to France.

During a revolt erected into a kingdom under Theodore Neufeld, its first and only king.

He came to England, was imprisoned in the King's Bench, and suspended, and long solicited on private friends, but released; he gave in his schedule the kingdom of Corsica to his creditors, and died in Solor.

Of Orleans wrote the following epitaph, for a tablet near his grave in St. Anne's church, Deal.

"The grave, great teacher! to a level brings His heroes and beggars, gauleys and kings. But Theodore this moral heard o'er dead; Fate pour'd its lesson on his living head, Bestow'd a kingdom and denied him bread."

Passeil Paoli chosen for their general by the Corsicans.

Defeated by the count de Vaux, he fled to England 1793. Napoleon Bonaparte born at Ajaccio (5 Feb. 1768), baptismal register; doubtful 12 Aug.

The people acknowledge George III. of England for king 17 June 1794.
COSTA RICA, a republic in Central America, part of Guatemala, declared independent 21 Sept. 1821. Area, 23,090 square miles. With the other republics of Central America formed a single state 1 July, 1823; compact dissolved 1810; constitution of 22 Dec. 1821 adopted 24 April, 1822. It was much disturbed by the American filibusters, see Nicaragua and America, Central. Population, 1914, 351,310; estimated 1917, 351,740. Capital, San José; population, 1914, 21,440; 1920, 26,682. Constitution, 22 Dec. 1824. On 11 Aug. 1859, the president Juan Mora was suddenly deposed, and Dr. José Montenegro made president; Dr. J. Jimenez president 3 April, 1863, was succeeded by Dr. Joseph Castro, 8 May, 1866, deposed; J. Jimenez, governor, Nov. 1868; Vicente Quadra, proclaimed president 12 March, 1871; Dr. M. Guardia, 1874; Aniceto Esquivel, 8 May, 1876; Vicente Herrera, 31 July, 1879, resigned; succeeded by Thomas Guardia, Oct. 1877; died July, 1882, succeeded by Prospero Fernandez; died March, 1885, succeeded by Bernardo Soto 12 March, 1885; by J. J. Rodriguez, 8 May, 1893; G. González Vizquez, 1906; Ricardo 1910. President Rodriguez declares himself dictator and arrests opponents; 11 Sept. 1912.

COSTOMONGERS, itinerant dealers in fruit, vegetables, fish, &c., deriving their name, it is said, from costard, a favourite apple. The London costomongers are useful in relieving the markets when glutted; and it was said in 1806, that 30,000 bushels passed through their hands annually. Preceding fast and thanksgiving days, they always sold the appointed forms of prayers given in numbers. On 22 Nov. 1850, they held a meeting in order to represent to the city authorities the hardships they felt by the police restricting their means of livelihood, and the Metropolitan Streets Act was modified, 7 Dec. 1857.

Their moral and physical condition was much improved through the instrumentality of the Earl of Shaftesbury, who acted himself as a costomonger, and owed a barnow in 1774.

COSTUME, see Dress.

COTTAGE. The term was originally applied to a small house without land, 4 Edw. 1. 1275. "No man may build a cottage, except in towns, and not more than five acres of land therto," &c., 31 Eliz. 1389. This statute was repealed, 14 Geo. III. 1775. By returns to the tax office, in 1786, the number of cottages was 284,459. The number in 1800 was 328,214; the number in 1830 was about 750,000. In 1850 the public attention was much drawn to the deplorable state of cottages in many parts of the country; and the law of settlement was altered in 1865. Mr. Disraeli (afterwards Lord Beaconsfield) said that "every cottage should have a tank, an oven, and a porch."

See Garden Cities.

COTTAGE HOSPITALS: much advocated by Dr. Horace Swete in 1870. Many since then have been established: including one by the baroness Burdett-Coutts, 1878; one at Wood Green, erected by Mr. J. Passmore Edwards, opened 15 June, 1868; one at Catherwood, Queen Victoria memorial, 2 June, 1892; others since.

COTTON, a vegetable wool, the produce of the Gossypium, a shrub indigenous to the tropical regions of India and America. Indian cotton cloth is mentioned by Herodotus, was known in Arabia in the time of Mahomet, 621, and was brought into Europe by his followers. It does not appear to have been in use among the Chinese till the 13th century; to them we are indebted for the cotton fabric termed muskets. Cotton was the material of the principal articles of clothing among the Americans when visited by Columbus. It was grown and manufactured in Spain in the 10th century; and in the 14th century it was introduced into Italy. Indian muslins, chintzes, and cottons were so largely imported into England in the 17th century, that in 1700 an act of parliament was passed, prohibiting their introduction. Cotton became the staple commodity of England in the present century. About 1841 the "cotton" or "Manufactory" interest began to obtain political influence, which led to the repeal of the corn laws in 1846. Cotton manufacture, introduced into Bombay about 1868, gradually becomes very successful, reported Dec. 1889. See Cotton, Muslin, Canvas, Stripes.

Failure of Mr. Morris Ringer, a great cotton spinneir, and others, at Liverpool 31 Oct. 1835 in Lancashire and Cheshire the mills put on half time, to limit the production and check speculation to raise the price of cotton, &c., about 15 July, 1839.

Strike and lockout of cotton-spinners throughout Lancashire (not Manchester), 15 April et seq.; dispute settled by compromise 6 May, 1892.

Depression in the cotton industry caused by the American " cotton" corner 1893.

Cotton and Melon made of cotton, about 1641.

Cotton shedding, &c. The fly-shuttle was invented by John Kay, of Bury, 1733; the drop-box by Robert Kay, 1723; spinning by rollers (also attributed to John Watt) patented by Louis Paul, 1738; the spinning jenny, by Hargreaves, 1767; the water-frame, by Arkwright, 1765; the power-loom, by Rev. Dr. Edmund Cartwright, 1785; the dressing machine, by Johnson and Reddell, 1800; another power-loom, by Hornsby, 1804. A combing machine was patented by Joshua Hilton, in 1825.

British web and Dobby-superseding that of India is due mainly to the invention of the Mule (which see) by Samuel Crompton, 1774; and to the self-acting mule of Mr. Roberts, 1825.

Cotton, American, commenced 1774.

The steam-engines first applied to the cotton manufacture by Boulton and Watt, 1775.

Bleaching by means of chlorine of lime introduced by Mr. Tennant, of Glasgow, 1783.

Stockings. The stocking-frame was invented by William Lee, in 1587. Cotton stockings were first made by hand about 1780; Jedediah Strutt obtained a patent for stocking machines, 1803; and271 Horrocks, patented his stocking frame in 1776; Crompton's mule was employed in making thread for the stocking manufacture about 1778.

Cotton-Lace, Bobbin-net. The stocking-frame of Lee was applied to lace-making by Hammond, about 1788; the process perfected by John Heathcoat, 1809. See Factory system.

COTTONIAN LIBRARY, formed by sir Robert Bruce Cotton, 1600 et seq. He died 6 May, 1631. It was rescued from the republicans during the protectorate, 1659-60, and was secured to the public by a statute in 1700. It was removed to Essex-house in 1712; in 1730 to Dean's-yard, Westminster (where on 23 Oct. 1731, a part of the books sustained damage by fire); to the British Museum in 1757.

COTTON, 371
COUNCILS OF CONCILIATION.

COTTON-WOOL., see Respiration. Dr. Percy, in 1874, applied cotton-wool to filter the air for ventilating the houses of parliament.

COUNCILS, a village ten miles west of Orleans, central France. Here the Baravians, under general Von der Tann, were defeated by the French army of the Loire, under general d'Aurelle de Paladines, who took about 2000 prisoners, 9 Nov. 1870, and regained Orleans.

COUNCILS, of Officers of the army, constituted by Cromwell and termed “New Model” 1642, abolished by Charles II. 1660.

COUNCILS. King Alfred, in about 880, is said to have so arranged the business of the nation, that all resolutions passed through three councils. The first was a select council which considered all affairs to be laid before the second council, bishops and nobles appointed by the king, like the present privy council. The third was a general assembly of the nation, called, in Saxan, Wittenagemond, in which rank and offices gave a right to sit. These three councils were the germ of the cabinet, privy councils, and parliaments; see Cabinet, Councils and Privy Councils, &c.

COUNCILS, French. The Council of Anciencia, consisting of 250 members, together with five cardinals, instituted at Paris, 1 Nov. 1795: the executive was a Directory of Five. Bonaparte dispersed the council of Five hundred at St. Cloud, 9 Nov. 1799, declaring himself, Roger Ducos, and Sieyes, consuls procurers; see France.

COUNCILS OF THE CHURCH. The following are among the most memorable. Those numbered are the Ecumenical or General Councils. Sir Harry Nicolas, in his “Chronology of History,” enumerates 1604 councils, and gives an alphabetical list.

Of the church at Jerusalem (Acts xv) . . . 59

Of the western bishops at Ales, in France, to support the Donatists; three fathers of the English church attended . . . 244

There were held four public sessions, and between 90 and 150 ecclesiastics, and seven congregations. Six canons were issued 24 April, 1566, and after much discussion and opposition, the infallibility of the pope as head of the Church was affirmed by 357 places against 2 non-places, and promulgated 18 July, 1570

Many bishops withdrew from the discussion. The council then adjourned to 11 Nov. (see Rome) See under Church of England, 1663.

COUNCILS OF CONCILIATION, to adjust differences between masters and workmen, established by licence of the secretary of state, by virtue of an act passed 15 Aug. 1867; and by the Arbitration of Masters and Workmen act, passed 1872. Both these acts were repealed by the “Conciliation act,” passed 7 Aug. 1899; in pursuance of which conciliation and arbitration boards may be constituted and registered as such, by intervention of the board of trade.

The labour conciliation board of the London chamber of commerce, constitutes promulgateable methods of settling labour disputes, &c.

London conciliation board with separate committees to wait upon 6,000 skilled men, on 6 March, 1880. Successful conciliation conferences in Yorkshire mining districts.

Annual meetings: from . . . 15 April, 1896

See Coal, 1875-94 and Strike.
COUNSEL are supposed to be coëval with the curia regis. Advocates are referred to the time of Edward I., but are mentioned earlier. Counsel who were guilty of deceit or collusion were punishable by the statute of Westminster, 13 Edw. 1. 1285. Counsel were allowed to be proscribed and charged with treason by act 8 Will. III. 1696. An act to enable persons indicted for felony to make their defence by counsel, passed Aug. 1836; see Barristers and King's Counsel.

COUNTERPOINT (in music), the art of combining melodies in harmony. The earliest known specimen of contrapuntal writing is by Adam de la Halle in the 12th century.

COUNTESS OF HUNTINGDON'S CONNEXION; see Whitefieldites.

COUNTIES or SHIREs. The division of this kingdom into counties began, it is said, with king Alfred; but some counties bore their present names above a century before. The division of Ireland into counties took place in 1592. Lord-lieutenants were appointed in 1549 in England, and in 1587 in Ireland. Counties first went out of parliament, before which period knights met in their own counties, 1285. CHANDOS CLAUSE, Sect. 20 of the Reform act, 2 Will. IV. c. 45 (1832), inserted by the motion of the marquis of Chandos. By it occupiers as tenants of land situate in a borough, paying an annual rent of 50/-, became entitled to a vote for the knights of the shire. It increased the number of Tory voters, and in consequence several attempts were made to repeal it. It was superseded by the Reform act of 15 Aug. 1867.

By the Winter Assizes Act, 1876, certain counties were united (by order in council, first time, 23 Oct. 1876) to facilitate more speedy conduct of business. The Victoria History of the Counties of England, began 1900.

COUNTY ASSOCIATIONS, see Army, 1807.

COUNTY CONVENTIONS, see Ireland, 1885.

COUNTY COUNCILS, see Local Government Act. At the first elections in Jan. 1889, a large number of the nobility, gentry, and justices, were elected. The Councils assumed their powers April, 1889; see London County Council. The time of election was changed from Jan. to March, by act passed 5 Aug. 1891.

COUNTY COURTS or shire-remotes, in the time of the Saxons, were important tribunals. Alfred is said to have divided England into counties, and counties into hundreds; but county-courts seem to have existed much earlier.

County-Courts, for the recovery of debts under 20l., superseding courts of requests, instituted by 23 & 24 Geo. 3, c. 55. 26 Aug. 1846. The counties of England and Wales are divided into six judicial circuits, each district having a county-court, with a barrister as judge, and juries when necessary. Their jurisdiction extended by 15 & 16 Vict. c. 61, to sums not exceeding 50l.

Their proceedings facilitated in 1852 and 1854. In 1850 plaintiffs entered at the courts of the six circuits were 366,721. In 1896, 1,955,910 plaintiffs under 20l.; 12,573 over 20l. to 50l.; 2,616 above 50l., making the total exceed 400,000. In 1897, 1,526,615 plaintiffs under 20l.; 1,663 over 20l. to 50l.; 2,200 above 50l. to 100l.; and 571 for sums exceeding 100l. for 3,759,907. In 1905, 1,235,659 plaintiffs under 20l.; 1,663 over 20l. to 50l.; 2,200 above 50l. to 100l.; 571 for sums exceeding 100l.; for 4,787,282. In the City of London court, 1908, the figures are respectively 41,074; 784; 426; 149; for 21,671.

COUNTY FRANCHISE, a bill for giving votes to labourers and others, annually brought in by Mr. (afterwards sir) G. O. Trevelyan. The object was effected by the reform acts of 1884-5. See Household Suffrage.

COUNTY OFFICERS AND COURTS, Ireland: an act to amend the law respecting them passed 14 Aug. 1877.

COUP D'ETAT, in France (see France, 2 Dec. 1851); Pronunciamento in Spain; changes in the government effected by force, either by the ruler, the army, or the populace. The Speaker's Coup d'etat, see Parliament, 2 Feb., 1881. See Brazil, Nov. 1899; Servia, April, 1893; and 10 June, 1903.

COURIERS. Xenophon attributes the first to Cyrus; and Herodotus says that they were common among the Persians; see Esther iii. 15, about 510 B.C. The Greeks and Romans had no regular couriers till the time of Augustus, when they travelled in cars, about 24 B.C. Couriers or posts are said to have been instituted in France by Charlemagne about A.D. 800. Couriers for letters were employed by Louis XI. of France, 1475. See Post-office.

COURLAND, a duchy of Livonia, conquered by Dames, 1218; by Teutonic knights, 1291; subjected to Poland in 1501, conquered by Charles XII. of Sweden in 1701; Ernest of Saxe, 1737; his son, Peter, 1779; annexed to Russia, March, 1795. Population, 1910 (est.), 900,000. Libau, on the Baltic, was constituted a military and commercial port; the first stone was laid by the czar, 21 Aug. 1893.

COURSING, see Hounds.

COURT BARON, an ancient court which every lord of a manor may hold by prescription. In it duties, heriots, and customs are prescribed, and estates and surrenders are passed. Its jurisdiction was restricted in 1747 and 1833. By the Small Debts Act, 1836, lords of the manor may give up holding these courts.

COURT JOURNAL, established 1820.

COURT LEET, an ancient court of record, belonging to a hundred, instituted for punishing encroachments, nuisances, fraudulent weights and measures, &c. The steward is judge, and all residing within the hundred (peers, clergy, &c., excepted) are obliged to do suit within this court.

COURT OF HONOUR. In England the court of chivalry, of which the lord high constable was a judge, was called Curia Militaris, in the time of Henry IV., and subsequently the Court of Honour. In Bavaria, to prevent duelling, a court of honour was instituted in April, 1819.

COURT OF JUSTICIARY, HIGH, in Scotland, constituted by a commission under the great seal, 1671, ratified 1752. The procedure in this court was amended by an act passed in 1868. See Court of Session.
COURT OF REQUESTS. 334
COURT OF REVIEW, see Bankruptcy.

COURT OF SESSION, the highest civil tribunal in Scotland, was instituted by James V. by statute, 15 July, 1532, its origin being ascribed to the regent, duke of Albany. It consisted of 14 judges and a president, and replaced a committee of parliament. In 1589 the number of judges was reduced; and the court now consists of the lord president (termed lord justice general), the lord justice-clerk, and 11 ordinary judges. In 1867 the necessity of renovating this court was asserted by high local authority; and an act to amend its procedure was passed 31 July, 1868. The lord president, the right hon. John Inglis, appointed Feb. 1867; died 20 Aug., succeeded by James P. Robertson, Sept. 1891; by John Blair Balfour (Baron Kinross), 1897 (died 1895); and by Andrew Graham Murray (Lord Dunedin), 1895.

COURT PARTY—COUNTRY PARTY, politicians in the parliaments of England, beginning about 1620. At the end of the 17th century the latter embodied Toryism and high church principles, maintained the rights of the "land," as opposed to whiggism and the trading interests. Its most distinguished statesman was Sir Thomas Hamner (the "Monats of Pope's Satires"), who died in 1746. A.S.C.

COURTRAI (Belgium). Here Robert, count of Artois, who had defeated the Flemings in 1297, was defeated and slain by them, 11 July, 1302. The conflict was named the "Battle of Spurs," from the number of gilt spurs collected.

COURTS MARTIAL, are regulated by the Mutiny act, first passed in 1665. The powers of these courts were much discussed in 1697, in consequence of the measures used to suppress the negro insurrection in Jamaica, Oct. 1866. There are three grades of Courts Martial: 1. Regimental. 2. District. 3. General. The first is composed of the officers of one regiment, and try minor offences in their own regiment; the second is composed of officers of various regiments in the district and deal with more serious offences; the third is the highest military tribunal, and has the power to commit an offender to penal servitude. See Army and Navy.

COURTS OF JUSTICE were instituted at Athens, 1579 B.C. (see Areopagites), by Moses, 1491 B.C. (Exod. xxviii. 25) and in Rome. For these realms, see Chancery, Common Pleas, Exchequer, King's Bench, &c. The citizens of London were privileged to plead their own cause in the courts of judicature, without employing lawyers, except in pleas of the crown, 41 Hen. III. 1257. See. The rights of the Irish courts were established by the British parliament in April, 1753. See Supreme Court.

COURTS OF LAW FEES ACT, passed 20 Aug. 1867, directs the application of surplus fees towards providing new courts of justice. Acts for building these courts were passed in 1865 and 1866. See Law Courts.

COURTS OF SURVEY, consisting of a judge and two assistants, for appeals respecting unseaworthy ships, were directed to be appointed in certain ports and districts by the Merchant Shipping Act 3 & 40 Vict. c. 80 (15 Aug. 1876). They sat in 1877.

COURT THEATRE, Chelsea, opened 25 Jan. 1871.

COVENTRY.

COVENANTERS, those persons who in the reign of Charles I. having signed the solemn league and covenant, engaged to stand by each other in opposition to the projects of the king in 1638. The covenant or league between England and Scotland (the preceding one modified), solemnly adopted by the parliament, 25 Sept. 1643; was accepted by Charles II. 16 Aug. 1660, but repudiated by him on his restoration in 1661, when it was declared to be illegal by parliament, and copies of it ordered to be burnt. See Cameronians and Bothwell Bridge.

The covenant consisted of six articles:
1. The preservation of the reformed church in Scotland and the information of religion in England and Ireland.
2. The extirpation of papery, prelacy, schism, &c.
3. The preservation of the liberties of parliament and the king's person and authority.
4. The discovery and punishment of all malcontents, &c.
5. The preservation of "a blessed peace between these kingdoms;"
6. The assisting all who enter into the covenant: "This will we do as in the sight of God."

COVENT GARDEN (London), corrupted from "Covent Garden," having been the garden of St. Peter's Covent where the present garden was built about 1613, and the piazza on the north side and the church were designed by Inigo Jones. The fruit and vegetable markets were rebuilt in 1829-30, from designs by Mr. Fowler (the ground belonging to the duke of Bedford). In the 17th century, Covent Garden was a very fashionable quarter of London. Frequent allusions are made to it by the playwriters of the time of Charles II. and Dryden lays a scene of one of his plays here. It is depicted also by Hogarth.

COVENTRY GARDEN THEATRE sprang out of one in Lincoln's-inn-fields, through a patent granted 14 Chas. II. 1662, to Sir William Davonant, whose company was denominated the "duke's servants," as a compliment to the duke of York, afterwards James II.; see under Theatres.

COVENTRY (Warwickshire). Leofric, earl of Mercia, lord of Coventry, is said to have relieved it from heavy taxes, at the intercession of his wife Godiva, on condition of her riding naked through the streets, about 1057. Processions in her memory took place in 1851; 23 June, 1862; 4 June, 1866; 20 June, 1870; 4 June, 1877; 6 Aug. 1883; and 2 Aug. 1892: La Mille, revived, 7 Aug. 1897."
COVENTRY ACT. 375

The body of Adam Mickiewicz, the Polish poet, brought from France, re-interred here 4 July, 1829. See Austria, 1829.

CRANES are of very early date, for the engines of Archimedes may be so called. In 1857 a crane had been erected at Glasgow capable of lifting 50 tons. One in Woolwich arsenal in 1881 lifted 400 tons. See Derrick.

CRANIOLoGY (or PHRENOLOGY), the study of the external form of the human skull, as indicative of mental powers and moral qualities. Dr. Gall, the proponent, was a German physician, born March, 1758, and his chief works are among his school fellows. Afterwards he studied the heads of criminals and others, and eventually reduced his ideas to a system, marking out the skull like a map. His first lecture was given at Vienna in 1794; but in 1802 the Austrian government prohibited his teaching. In 1806 he was joined by Dr. Spurzheim, who divided the mental and moral faculties of Gall into two orders, "feelings and intellect," and in 1810-12 they published at Paris their work on the "Anatomy and Physiology of the Nervous System, and of the Brain in particular." Gall died in 1828. The researches of Gall and Spurzheim led to increased study of the brain. Combe's "Phrenology" was first published in 1819. Phrenological societies were formed by Dr. Daniel Derricks and Edinburgh, and in 1832, there were in existence some 30 phrenological societies, and several journals devoted to the subject. Various modifications in the localization of the faculties were made by pupils of Gall, among them the American phrenologists, the Fowlers, and S. R. Wells.

Phrenology was refuted by Lord Jeffrey in the Edinburgh Review, in 1829, and later by Mr. Derricks. Professor David Ferrier reported the results of researches tending to prove localization of certain faculties in the brain to the British Association, Sept., 1873.

"Brain," a quarterly journal, began in 1840. The British Phrenological Society was founded in 1856, and incorporated in 1859 as a scientific society. Its objects are the investigation and promulgation of phrenology, &c., &c. There are on the list of officers of the society the names of thirteen past presidents.

CRANMER, LATIMER, AND RIDDLE, martyrs of, see Protestants, note.

CRANNON or CRANNOX. Thessaly, N. Greece. Near here the Macedonians under Antipater and Cratesus defeated the confederated Greeks, twice by sea and once by land, 332 B.C. The Athenians demanded peace, and Antipater put their orators to death, among whom was Hyperides, who, that he might not betray the secrets of his country when under torture, cut out his tongue, and Demosthenes is said to have taken poison shortly after.

CRANWORTH'S ACT. LORD, to simplify the practice of conveyancers, 23 & 24 Vict. c. 145 (1860).

CRANX (X. France). Here Victor and Ney defeated the Prussians under Bülow after a severe contest 7 March, 1814.

CRAPE. It is said some crape was made by Ste. Badour, queen of France, about 1680. It is said to have been first made at Bologna.

CRAYFORD (Kent). Hengist the Saxon is said to have defeated the Britons here 457.

CRAYONS, coloured substances made into paste, and dried into pencils, were known in France about 1422; and improved by L'Oriot, 1748.

CREASOTE, or KEASOTE (discovered by Reichenbach about 1833), a powerful antiseptic and creatable of albuminous tissue, is obtained by the destructive distillation of wood and other organic matter. It has been used for the preservation of meat, timber, &c.

CREATINE (from the Greek kreas, flesh), the chemical principle of flesh, was discovered in 1835 by F. Chevreul, and has been investigated by Liebig, Gregory, and others.

CREATION OF THE WORLD. The date given by the English bible, stated by Usher, Blair, and others, is 4004 a.c. There are about 70 different dates assigned to the Creation, varying from 3016 to 6692 a.c. Dr. Hales gives 5411; see Eras.

Haydn's Creation (oratorio), composed 1766-8; first performed in London, at Covent Garden Theatre, 23 March, 1762; in Paris, 24 Dec. same year.

CRECHES, establishments for temporarily receiving the young children of working mothers begun at Paris, about 1844; in London (in Rathbone-place, &c.) about 1863; others since.

CRECY, or CRESNY (N. France), where Edward III. and his son, Edward the Black Prince, and an army of 30,000, obtained a great victory over Philip, king of France, with about 13,000, 20 April 1346. King of Bohemia (nearby blind); James, king of Majorca; Ralph, duke of Lorraine (sovereign princes); and a number of French nobles, together with 30,000 private men, were slain, while the loss of the English was very small. The crest of the king of Bohemia (three ostrich feathers, with the motto Ich diene—in English, "I serve") has since been adopted by princes of Wales.

CREDIT FONCIER, &c. A plan of providing loans to landowners was introduced by Frederick the Great of Prussia, in 1763, in some of the Prussian provinces, as the best method of alleviating the distresses of the landed interest caused by his wars. The system consists of lending money to landowners on the security of their estates, and providing the loan capital by the issue of debentures charged upon the aggregate mortgageed estates. There are two modes of carrying out this scheme: (1) by means of an association of landowners; (2) by means of a proprietary public company. The former obtains, in Eastern Prussia, but the latter is exclusively found in Western Europe.

Credit Foncier companies have been founded in Hamburg (1762), Western Prussia (1757), Belgium (1831), France (1832), etc. Similar companies were formed in all the states of Europe, in India, and in our colonies and dependencies. A. G. Honoré. See France, May, 1890.

CREDIT MOBILIER: a joint-stock company with this name was established at Paris by Isaac and Emile Pèreire, and others, 18 Nov. 1852. It took up or originated trading enterprises of all kinds, applying to them the principle of commodity, or limited liability, and was authorized to stop or pay in any other companies (replacing their shares or bonds with its own script), and also to carry on the ordinary business of banking. The funds were to be obtained by a paid-up capital of $2,000,000, subject to the issue of obligations at not less than 45 days' date or sight, and the receipt of money on deposit or current account. The society apparently prospered; but was examined by an evicted persons a near approach to law's bank of 1776. Several of the directors failed, Sept. 1857, no dividend paid.

Many similar companies estab. in London 1853.

Emile and Isaac Pèreire withdrew from the management; the company failed, and the capital was said to have disappeared.

Oct. 1867

The high court of appeal decided that MM. Péreire and other directors were responsible for their acts, and that damages should be given to the shareholders.

CREMERA. BATTLE OF, see Fabii.

CREMONA (N. Italy), a city founded by the Romans, 221 B.C. It became an independent republic in 1767, but subsequently subjugated by its neighbours, Milan and Venice, and partook of their fortunes. In Nov. 1859 it became part of the kingdom of Italy. Cremona was eminent for violin makers from about 1550 to 1750.

CRESONTE, see Cresent.

CRESCENT, a symbol of sovereignty among the Greeks and Romans, and the device of Byzantium, now Constantinople, where the Turks adopted it. The Crescent has given name to three orders of knighthood; founded by Charles 1. of Naples, 1268; by René of Anjou, in 1448; by the sultan Selim, in 1801.

CRESPY (N. France). Here was signed a treaty between Charles V. of Germany and Francis I. of France, 18 Sept. 1544. The former renounced Burgundy, and the latter Italy.

CRESTS are ascribed to the Carians. Richard I. (1189) had a crest on the helmet resembling a plume of feathers. The English kings had generally crowns above their helmets; that of Richard II. 1377, was surmounted by a lion on a cap of dignity; see Crew. Alexander III. of Scotland, 1249, had a plume of feathers, and the helmet of Robert I. was surmounted by a crown, 1306; and that of James I. by a lion, 1424. In the 15th and 16th centuries, the crest was described to be a figure placed upon a wreath, coronet, or cap of maintenance, Gueules. The badge of the Red Dragon added to the prince of Wales's crest, Dec. 1901.

CREVANT-SUR-YONNE (N. France), was besieged by John Stuart, earl of Buchan, with a French army, June 11, 1423, and relieved by the earl of Salisbury with an army of English and Burgundians. After a severe contest, the French were totally defeated.

CREVELDIT, near Cleves (W. Prussia). Here, on 23 June, 1758, Prince Ferdinand of Brunswick defeated the French under the count of Clermont.

CREWE, Cheshire, the site of a great junction and works of the London and North-Western railway since 1849. The company presented a beautiful park to the town in 1857-58. Crewe was incorporated in 1877. Population, 1901, 53,958.

CRICKET, an ancient English game, said to be identical with the "club ball" of the 14th century; mentioned in 1598. Rules were laid down in 1774 by a committee of noblemen and gentlemen, including the duke of Dorset and sir Horace Mann. The first club founded in England was the Hambledon (Hampshire) club, which lasted from 1750 to 1791. Its playing fields were at Broad Halfpenny and Windmill Dows, and the club frequently met and defeated teams representing All England. The game rapidly grew in favour, until at the end of the 18th century it was well-established. The leading club in England and the authority on the game is the Marylebone club, which was founded under its present title in 1787. It sprang out of the Army Club, which was established at Finsbury till 1750, and then moved to White Conduit Fields, becoming the White Conduit Club. The Marylebone club's first head-quarters were at old Lord's ground, now Dorset Square, then (1824) at Middle Lord's ground, and finally, in 1827, to the present Lord's ground, which became the club's fixed property in 1834. The Marylebone club frames and revises the laws of the game, and arbitrates on all disputes.

ENGLAND AND AUSTRALIA.

An English eleven visited Australia in 1862; one, captained by George Parr, in 1864; one, by Dr. W. G. Grace, in 1873, and another, of professionals, by James Lillywhite, in 1876, in this tour the Australians first played on level terms, and were victorious in one of the two matches played. The first international Australian team to visit England arrived in 1882. Since then English teams and Australian teams have on many occasions exchanged visits. Summary of results of test matches between England and Australia. In August 1896, 1897, 1898, 1899, 1902, 1903, 1904, and 1905.

Wickets—England won twice, Australia once, drawn twice, and one result was unknown.

Other Victories.

England v. Australia, at Melbourne, March 5, 12, 19, and 23, 1898, scored 932, the highest authenticated total ever obtained in any match.

The Eleven played against the Rickling Green Club at Rickling Green, in August, 1832, scored 390, which is the third highest total properly authenticated ever scored in any match. Against Break-O-Day scored 421 against Wellington at Hobart, March 2, 15, 22, and April 5, 1898.

New South Wales made 473 in one innings against South Australia at Sydney in Jan., 1907, but this broke the highest total ever obtained in a first-class match. In the innings of New South Wales five players exceeded the century, S. E. Gregory making 165, M. A. Noble 133, L. O. S. Fields 110 not out, R. A. Dunn 89 not out and F. A. Hadlee 71. In the second innings, 135 were obtained for 50 runs during the innings.

Yorkshire against Warwickshire, at Birmingham on May 7, 8, 9, and 10, 1896, scored 911 in the second innings, in a record for a first-class match. In this innings of Yorkshire, four separate hundreds were scored, M. F. S. Jackson 117, Wainwright 120, Peel 210 not out, and Lord Headley 196. The first of four separate hundreds being scored in one innings in a first-class match was repeated at Derby in August, 1893. Playing against Hampshire for Dorsetshire, Mr. L. G. Wright made 134. Scored 190. Chatterton 117. and George Davidson 107. For Lancashire against Somerset at Manchester in June, 1894, Mr. A. M. MacLaren scored 156. Teylbsay 136. Mr. A. H. Hornby 114, and Cottrell 106.

Surrey scored 311 against Somerset at the Oval in May, 1899, the second highest total ever obtained in a county match.

Highest Aggregate.

In a match between New South Wales and Victoria, played at Sydney in Jan., 1886, 1,738 runs were scored for the loss of 21 wickets, the highest aggregate in first-class cricket.

At Sydney in Feb., 1891, in a match between Mr. Stoddart's Eleven and New South Wales, 1,738 runs were scored.

The largest aggregate in a first-class match in England is 1,462 for 11 wickets, scored in the match between Worcestershire and Oxford University, at Worcester, in July, 1904.

The second highest aggregate in first-class cricket in England is 1,477 for 21 wickets, obtained in the match between Surrey and Sussex at Hastings, in July, 1903.

The following is a list of the highest aggregates on record:—1,612 for 34 wickets. N. S. W. v. Victoria, 1900; 1,700 for 46 wickets, N. S. W. v. Mr. A. E. Stoddart's XI., 1892; 1,716 for 47 wickets, N. W. v. N. S. W., Mr. A. E. Stoddart's XI., 1891; 1,912 for 52 wickets, N. S. W. v. Mr. A. E. Stoddart's XI., 1894; 1,953 for 53 wickets, Australian XI. v. Rest of Australia, 1896; 1,961 for 52 wickets, Australia v. England, 1934; 2,114 for 48 wickets, Australian XI. v. Mr. A. E. Stoddart's XI., 1894; 1,407 for 4 wickets, N. S. W. v. England, 1898; 1,252 for 35 wickets, Worcestershire v. Oxford University, 1924; 4,347 for 27 wickets, Sussex v. Surrey, 1892; 4,253 for 18 wickets, Worcestershire v. Leicestershire, 1897; 1,424 for 33 wickets, Hampshire v. Worcestershire, 1901; 1,141 for 40 wickets, Victoria v. N. S. W., 1882; and 1,140 for 33 wickets, Sussex v. Worcestershire, 1900; 1,403 for 39 wickets, N. S. W. v. N. S. W., Mr. A. E. Stoddart's XI., 1892; 1,402 for 49 wickets, Sussex v. Cambridge University, 1891.

CRICKET AND SOUTH AFRICA.

Cricket has made extraordinary progress in South Africa, and a team representing that colony visited England in 1907. In addition to the matches with the leading county teams, three test matches were played. At Lords the match was drawn, England won by 53 runs at Leeds, and the third match at the Oval was drawn.

All England teams have also visited South Africa, the last occasion being in 1905-06. A South African team also visited England in 1904, and won 10 out of 22 first-class matches.

OTHER RECORDS.

Mr. W.G. Grace has three times during his career performed the feat of making two separate hundreds in a first-class match. So also have Mr. R.E. Foster and Mr. C.B. Fry.

HIGHEST Wicket Strands.

Mr. A.C. McLaren and T. Hayward scored 314 together for the first wicket for McLaren’s England XI. v. New South Wales, at Sydney, in Jan., and Feb., 1898-99, this being the highest first-wicket partnership for any wicket in a first-class match in Australia.

Shrewsbury and Gunn scored 358 runs together for the second wicket for Notts against Sussex at Nottingham in May, 1899. Abel and Hayward scored 402 runs together for the fourth wicket for Surrey against Oxford at the Oval, in Aug., 1899. This was the highest second partnership for any wicket in a first-class match.

M. A. Noble and W. W. Armstrong scored 428 runs together for the sixth wicket of the Australians against South Australia, in 1901-02.

F. E. Woolley and A. Fielder, for Kent v. Worcestershire at Stourbridge, in July, 1908, added 325 runs for the last wicket.

* Not out.

1 Highest individual score ever obtained against odds.
CRICKET.

The longest partnership on record in any match is 623 for the second wicket by captain Oakes and private Fergusson in a match between Gloucester and Somerset at the Dowlas Ground, in 1893.

SCHOOL CRICKET RECORD.

The highest single innings score in school cricket was made by Alfred Shaw, famous Notts cricketer, for 156 runs in his last season's play at Harrow, Aug., 1842.

OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE.

ETON AND HARROW.

NOTABLE EVENTS.

Dr. W. G. Grace, aged 46, completed his hundredth "hundred" score at Bristol, in a match between Gloucester and Somerset, mid-May, 1895; national testimony subscribed for, June, 1895. Alfred Grace scores 2,518 runs in first-class matches in one season, the highest individual by a schoolboy. Alfred Grace accomplished the "hat-trick" twice when bowling against Somerset at Lords on 22 May, 1866—a record.

Arthur Mold (Lancs.) sent the ball 63 yds. 6 ins. when bowling against Surrey at the Oval, 22 Aug., 1890—a record.

The record benefit accorded a professional was that of George Hirst (Yorkshire). He received £2,701 2s., as the result of the match v Lancashire at Leeds, Aug., 1904.

CRIMEA.

By scoring 3,518 runs in first-class matches in one season, T. Hayford (Surrey) established a record in 1896 for the highest individual by a schoolboy.

Playing for Australia v England in a test match at the Oval in Aug., 1899, Warren Hardywell (New South Wales) established a record for test matches by scoring two separate hundreds in one match, viz., 156 and 179. The death of James Street, aged 69, who was member of the Surrey cricket eleven from 1835 to 1870, and again two years later, 17 Sept., 1906. Death of Alfred Shaw, famous Notts cricketer, for many years finest bowler in England, 1842. 17 Jan., 1907.

CRIME. About 1835 it was computed that a fifteenth part of the population of the United Kingdom lived by crime. The increase in education and manufactures is gradually reducing this proportion. From 1835 to 1895 there had been no marked change for political offences, such as treason or sedition. The returns of thirty-two years showed that crime absolutely and relatively diminished (Sept., 1866). "Judicial Statistics" for England and Wales, with abundant details, published by the government annually, began with the year 1857; the series of two parts, originally published separately, was published (separately) again in 1893; comparative tables, 1857-96. See Murder, Executions, Trials, Poisoning, Prevention of Crime, Anthropology, &c.

CRIMEA, or CRIME TARTARY, a peninsula in the Euxine or Black Sea, the ancient Taurica Chersonesia, colonised by the Greeks about 550 B.C.
CRIMES ACTS.

The Milesians founded the kingdom of Iosorus, now Ireland, which about 478 a.d. formed part of the dominion of the Huns, and long continued to rule the country under Hunnic protection till the irruption of the Germans, Huns, etc., about 8th. 256. About 1257 it fell into the hands of the Mongols under Genghis Khan; soon after the Venetians established commercial stations, with a hereditary trade, but were supplanted by the Genoese, who were permitted to rebuild and fortify Kaffa, about 1261. In 1475 Mahomet II. expelled the Genoese, and subjected the peninsula to the Ottoman yoke; permitting the government to remain in the hands of the native Khans, but closing the Black Sea to Western Europe. In 1774, by the intervention of the empress Catherine II., the Crimean recovered its independence; but on the abdication of the Khan in 1783, the Russians took possession of the country, after a war with Turkey, and retained it by the treaty of Jassy, 9 Jan. 1792. The Crimea (now Taurida) was divided into eight governments in 1802. War having been declared against Russia by England and France, 28 March, 1854, large masses of troops were sent to the East, which, after remaining some time at Gallipoli, and other places, sailed for Varna, where they disembarked 29 May. An expedition against the Crimea having been determined on, the allied British, French, and Turkish forces, amounting to 58,000 men (36,000 British), commanded by Lord Raglan and marquis St. Armand, sailed from Varna, 3 Sept. and landed on the 10th, 11th, and 16th, without opposition, at Old Fort, near Eupatoria, about 36 miles from Sebastopol. On the 20th they attacked the Russians, between 40,000 and 50,000 strong (under Prince Menshikoff), entrenched on the heights of Alma, supposed to be impregnable. After a sharp contest the Russians were totally routed. See Crimean War, and the Dict. Hist. Peace was proclaimed in April, 1856, and the allies quitted the Crimea 12 July following.

CRIMES ACTS, see Prevention.

CRIMINAL LAW PROCEDURE (IRELAND) ACT, (see Ireland) 50 & 51 Vict. c. 20, passed July, 1857, provides for summary jurisdiction by magistrate, special justices, change of place of trial, proclamation of districts, prohibition of combination associations, and continues 24 & 25 Vict. c. 5, and 49 & 50 Vict. c. 24. Mr. Dilworth's motion for the reading of repeal bill rejected, 22-24th, 14 April, 1859. Act for Scotland passed 1st Sept., 1857, to simplify and amend the Criminal Law of Scotland.

CRIMINAL LAWS OF ENGLAND. Their great severity, pointed out by sir Samuel Romilly, sir James Mackintosh, and others, about 1816, was considerably mitigated by Mr. Boulton's acts, passed 1826-8. The criminal law acts were consolidated by 24 and 25 Vict. c. 91-100, 1841. Some defects were amended by an act passed in 1867. The punishment of death is now virtually restricted to treason and wilful murder. See Evidence. Bill for amending law relating to indictable offences. (Presenting a digest of code) brought in by sir John Holker, attorney-general, 11 May, 1875. Referred to royal commission (justices Blackburn and Lord Lyndhurst, chairmen) 8 July. The bill brought in and withdrawn, 1877. Criminal Law Amendment Act (relating to women) passed 14 Aug. 1885. Criminal law trial bill, presented by Mr. Boothby in the house of commons 3 Aug. 1894. Criminal Alien Bill (see Alien). Aug. 1899. Criminal Appeal Act, passed in 1892, came into force 15 April 1903. Habitual criminals act came into force 1 Aug. 1894.

CRIMINOLOGY, as a branch of anthropology which treats of crime and criminals, is based on the researches of M. Labrousse, of Turin, and the author of "L'Homme Delinquant," published 1875 (several editions since). In this work he expounds his theory of criminology, and indicates the physical and mental defects by which the habitual criminal is characterised. The treatment of criminals at Elmira, with the view to their reclamation, is based upon criminal anthropology. Prof. Lombroso, b. 1835, died 19 Oct. 1909.

CRIMISUS, a river in Sicily, near which Timoleon defeated the Carthaginians, 339 B.C.

CRIMPING-HOUSES were used to entrap persons into the army—hence the name of "crimp sergeant," and later into the mercantile marine—some of them in London were destroyed by the populace, in consequence of a young man who had been enticed into one being killed in endeavouring to escape, 16 Sept. 1794. Crimping was now severely punished by penalty of a heavy fine, by sects, 110-112 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1804.

CRINAN CANAL, Argyleshire, cut through Kintyre peninsula, 1793-1801: 15 locks; saves about 115 miles.

CRINOLINE, (a French word, meaning stuff made of erine, hair) is the modern name of the "farthingale" of the time of queen Elizabeth, hoop-like petticoats made of whalebone, etc., revived in France and England since 1855. They have frequently occasioned loss of life, by coming in contact with fire and machinery. In No. 116 of the Tatler, published 5 Jan. 1710, is an amusing trial of the hoop-petticoats then in fashion. An attempt to revive the crinoline was made in the autumn of 1854, when stocks, etc., were placed in dress skirts and a great revival of Victorian fashions reached its height. It soon died down. In the early spring of 1859 there was a much-boomed "coming revival" of the crinoline which, however, hardly got beyond the stage of picturesque illustrations in the more popular newspapers.

CRIPPLEGATE (London) was so-called from the lame beggars who sat there, so early as the year 1010. The gate was rebuilt by the brewers of London in 1224; and was pulled down and sold for 91l. in July, 1780. The poet Milton was buried in the church near it, 12 Nov. 1674. Cripplegate Institute (founded by the duke of York, July, 1804) opened by the lord mayor, 4 Nov. 1806. See London and the Dict. Hist.

CRISPIN AND CRISPINUS are said to have been two saints, born at Rome, from whence they travelled to Belgium, in France, to propagate the Christian religion. They worked as shoemakers; but the一半 of the former was converted to Christianity, ordered them to be beheaded, about 288. Their day is 25 Oct.

CRIT (from the Greek krithe, a barbarycorn or small weight), a term suggested by Dr. W. H. Hofmann (about 1840) to express the volume-weight of gases; a cube containing 1 litre of hydrogen (00866 gramme) to be the unit. Hydrogen being 1 crih, oxygen will be 10, nitrogen 14 criths.

CRITICAL TEMPERATURE, or the temperature below which a substance may, and above which it cannot, be liquefied by pressure alone. Its discovery by Dr. Andrews of Belfast, 1869, first gave the means of distinguishing between a true gas (a substance above) and a true vapour (a substance below its critical temperature).

CRITICAL TEMPERATURE.
CRITICS. The first society of them was formed 276 n.c. Blair. Varro, Cicero, Apollonius, and Aristarchus were ancient critics. In modern times the Journal des Savants was the earliest periodical critical work. It was originated by Denis de Sallo, ecclesiastical councillor in the parliament of France, and was first published at Paris, 30 May, 1655, and is said to be the earliest systematic treatise. The first work of this kind in England was the Review of Daniel Defoe (the term being invented by himself), published in Feb. 1703. The Works of the Learned began 1710, and the Writings of Literature in 1714; discontinued in 1722. See Reviews.

The longevity of fair criticism was established in the English courts, in Feb. 1794, when an action that excited great attention, brought by an author against a reviewer for a severe critique upon his work, was determined in favour of the defendant on the principle that criticism is allowable, however sharp, if just, and not malicious. See Trials.

CROATIA, conquered by Coloman, king of Hungary, in 1102, was with that country united to Austria in 1526. The Croat diet abolished Nov. 1861. The Croats protest against incorporation with Hungary 25 May, 1867.

Baron Paul Rank, the new Ban of Croatia meets hostile reception at Agram 15 Jan. 1905.

CROCKET. See Potter.

CROFTERS and cottars, the holders of small portions of land, and the labourers in the highlands and islands of Scotland. A royal commission appointed 22 March, 1883 (Francis Baron Napier and others), to inquire into their condition, issue their report and describe their state as not being worse than formerly, but acknowledge the existence of many starved grievances relating to the tenure of land, high rents, the deficiency of education, of postal communication, of roads, &c. They recommend, among other remeasures, the revival of the custom of giving the crofters legal possession of the common privileges, limiting the power of the superior lords, &c. 28 April, 1884.

Highland Land Law Reform Association began to work March, 1883.

Agitation begins at Dingwall by the Highland Land Law Reform Association Sept., 1884.

MRS. CROESER, one hundred laddis, or 10,000,000, chiefly in the use of papier. A croce of papier, written officially, is worth about 600,000, 13s. 4d.

CROESER, a staff surmounted by a cro媚 borne before an archbishop, was in use in the 9th century. The bearing a crose before eeclesiastics is mentioned in the life of St. Crescent of Arles about 500. The term "crose" with the infusion erroneously to the pastoral staff of a bishop, which terminates in an ornamental curve or crook.

CROSS. That on which the Redeemer suffered on Mount Calvary, was said to have been found, with two others, deep in the ground, by the empress Helena, mother of Constantine I., 3 May, 326 (termed the Intention of the Cross); commemorated annually on that day. It was carried away by Chosroes, king of Persia, on the plundering of Jerusalem; but was recovered by the emperor Herelas (who defeated him in battle), 14 Sept. 615, and that day has since been commemorated as the Festival of the Exaltation of the Cross, established in 632.

It is asserted by church writers that a great shining cross was seen in the heavens by constantine, and that it led him to adopt it on his standard, with the words "In hoc signo victor!" (On this sign you conquer!" Under this sign thou shalt conquer." With this (teutonic) he advanced to Rome, where he vanquished Maxentius, 27 Oct. 312. Leligh, says (in Historie, 1578), was first practised by Chris- tians to distinguish themselves from the Pagans, about 110.

In the time of Tertullian, it was used efficaciously against poison, witchcraft, &c.

Crosses in churches and chambers were introduced about 414; and set on top of steeples about 1368.

Maids of the Cross were a community of young women who made vows of poverty, chastity, and obedience, instituted in 1245. In 1269, the patroness of queen Eleanor was set up in the places where her house rested, between 1269 (when she died) and 1290; required crosses remain at Tetherham, Wallam, and Northampston. Crosses and obelisks pictures were removed from churches, and crosses in the streets demolished by order of parliament.

The order of Ladies of the Cross of the Star was instituted by the empress Eleonora of France, wife of Louis VI., in 1165.

CROTONE (S. Italy), a city founded by the Achacans about 710 B.C. Here Pythagoras taught about 520. The Crotoses destroyed Sybaris, 510.

CROWN. An Amuleke brought Saul's crown to David, 1070 B.C. (2 Sam. 1.) The first Roman who wore a crown was Tarquin the Elder, 614 B.C. The rose was first a fillet tied round the head afterwards it was formed of leaves and flowers, and also of stuffs adorned with jewels. See TIARA.

The crown of Alfred had two little bells attached (872); it is said to have been long preserved at Westminster, and may have been that described in the parliamentary inventory taken in 1649.

Athelstan's crown resembled an earl's coronet, 920.

William I. wore his crown on a cap, adorned with points, 1066.

Richard III. introduced the crosses, 1483.

Henry VII. introduced the arches, 1485.

The crown of Charles I., made in 1660, is the oldest existing in England. See Blenham.

The Imperial State Crown of England was made in 1838, principally with jewels taken from old crowns. It contains one large ruby, 1 large sapphire, 16 sapphires, 11 emeralds, 4 rubies, 233 brilliants, 127 rose diamonds, 147 table diamonds, 4 drop-shape pearls, and 273 pearls.

Queen Alexandra's coronation crown of diamonds (3,683), 22 oz. 13 dwts. in weight.

CROWN OF INDIA, Imperial Order of, instituted by Queen Victoria (to commemorate the assumption of the title of empress, 1 Jan. 1877), for princesses of the royal family, distinguished Indian and British ladies, and wives of governors and secretaries of state for India; 31 Dec. 1877. Twelve ladies (the late Marchioness of Salisbury and others) invested, 29 April, 1875.

CROWN LANDS. The revenue arising from those in England is now nearly all subject to parliament, which annually provides for the sum and government about 375,000. The revenue of the duchy of Cornwall belongs to the Prince of Wales even during his minority. Henry VII. (1483) resumed those lands which had been given to their followers by the sovereigns of the house of York. The hereditary estates of the crown were largely drawn on for their support by the sovereigns — especially by the Stuarts. The income of the crown, formerly derived from lands, royalties, &c., now belongs to the state exchequer, see Civil List. The crown lands act passed, 1891. For year ended 31 March, 1905, receipts were 166,555. expenditure, 154,667; 175,000, receipts, 177,758; expenditure, 171,318. 1907, receipts, 188,334, expenditure, 179,621; 1908, receipts, 202,147; expenditure, 183,304.

CROWNS in gold were coined by Henry VIII. 1522. Crowns and half-crowns of silver were coined in England by Edward VI. in 1553. None were coined in 1604, and they were gradhly re-drawn from circulation. The number of half-crowns was resumed in 1873, after an inquiry as to their utility. The coined of silver crowns recommenced in 1887.

CROWS. An act passed for their destruction in England, 21 Hen. VIII. 1532. Crows were unincorporated as letters-bearers.

CROYDON, Surrey, granted to Lamfranc, archbishop of Canterbury, about 1070. Archbishop Whitgift's hospital was founded in 1590; endowment also endows the grammar school, reconstituted 1881, and middle schools; abp. Tenison, in 1714, endowed schools for boys and girls. The fine old parish church was burnt, 5, 6 Jan. 1867, rebuilt 1870. Croydon incorporated by charter, 15 Feb. 1883. Polytechnic institution opened by the archbishop of Canterbury, 22 Dec. 1883; New Grand theatre opened by Mr. Beerbohm Tree and company, 6 April, 1896. CRUCIFIXION. A mode of execution common among the Assyrians, Egyptians, Persians, Carthaginians, Greeks, and Romans. Ariarathes, of Cappadocia, aged 80, vanquished by Pericles, and discovered among the prisoners, was flayed alive, and nailed to a cross, with his principal officers, 322 B.C. Jesus Christ was crucified 3 April, A.D. 33. Usher, 15 April, A.D. 29; Clutton, 28 March, A.D. 31; Hales; probably 7 April, A.D. 39. Lynn. Crucifixion was ordered to be discontinued by Constantine, 330. Leigh.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS, see Animals, Children, and Viciousness.

CRUSADES (French Crusades), wars undertaken to drive the infidels from Jerusalem and the Holy Land. Peter Gauthier, the Hermit, an officer of Antioch, in his return from pilgrimage, incited pope Urban II. to expel infidels from the city where Christ had taught. Urban convened a council of 310 bishops at Clermont in France, at which the ambassadors of the chief Christian potentates assisted, and gave Peter the commission to summon Europe to a general war, 1094. The first crusade was published, an army of 300,000 men was raised, of which Peter had the direction, and Godfrey de Bouillon the command, 1095. The warriors wore a red cross upon the right shoulder: and their motto was "Volonte de Dieu, "God's will."—The French government have published some of the Histories of the Crusaders (1843-56).

1. Crusade (1098) ended by Jerusalem being taken by assault, 15 July, 1099, and Godfrey de Bouillon made king.

II. Preached by St. Bernard in 1146, headed by emperor Conrad II. and Louis VII. of France. Crusades defeated; Jerusalem lost in 1187.

IV. Preached by Innocent III., 1198. Belshwin, count of Pianlers, attacked the Greeks, and took Constantinople in 1203. His companions returned.

VI. In 1216. In 1229, emperor Frederick II. obtained possession of Jerusalem on a truce for ten years. In 1249, Richard, earl of Cornwall, arrived at Palestine, but soon departed.

VII. By Louis IX. (St. Louis), 1248, who was defeated and taken prisoner at Mansourah, 5 April, 1250; released by ransom; truce of ten years.

VIII. and last, in 1270, by the same prince, who died of a contagious disease, at Carthage, in Africa, 2 Aug. Prince Edward, afterwards Edward I. of England, was at Acre, 1271. In 1291, the sultan took Acre, and the Christians were driven out of Syria.

CRUTCHED PRIARS, who bore the figure of the cross on their back and breast; from which circumstance they derived their name, a corruption of croisiers, "cross bearers," an order founded at Bologna about 1160. They are also called Trinitarians. They had a monastery in London in a district still called Crutched Friars.

CUNEIFORM INSCRIPTIONS (from cuneus, Latin for a wedge), in characters resembling arrow-heads, inscribed on bricks or clay-tablets, found at Babylon, Behistun, &c., have been deciphered by English and foreign scholars, who date some of them as far back as 2300 B.C. The cuneiform characters are considered by most Assyriologists to have been originally hieroglyphs, and to have been first employed by the Akkadians of ancient Babylonia. See Assyria, Babylon, Behistun.

CUNNERSDORF (in Prussia). On 12 Aug. 1759, Frederick II. king of Prussia, with 30,000 men, attacked the Austrian and Russian army of

..."At any contested election for a county or borough represented by more than two members, and having more than one seat vacant, every voter shall be entitled to a number of votes equal to the number of vacant seats, and may give all such votes to one candidate or any distribute them among the candidates as he thinks fit."
90,000 in their camp near this place, and at first gained considerable advantages; but pursuing them too far, the Austrians and Russians rallied, and gained a complete victory. The Poles lost 200 pieces of cannon and 30,000 men in killed and wounded.

CUPOLA SHIPS. see Navy of England, 1804.

CUPPING, a mode of blood-letting. The skin is scored by lancets, and a glass cup in which the air has been exhausted by heat, is immediately applied to it, when the blood rushes into the cup. This operation was well known to the ancients, and is described by Hippocrates (415 B.C.) and Celsus (29 B.C.). It was common in England about 1820.

CURACOA (correctly, Curaçao), an island in the Caribbean sea, settled by the Spaniards about 1527, was seized by the Dutch in 1634. In 1802 the French, settled on part of this island, quarrelled with the Dutch, who surrendered it to a British frigate. It was restored to the Dutch in 1802; taken from them by the British in 1807, and again restored in 1814. The name of a well-known and esteemed liqueur manufactured chiefly in Holland from the dried peel of the curacao orange, by a process of maceration and distillation with spirit and water. A cheap imitation is made from whisky and the peel of bitter oranges.

CURATES were of early appointment as communicants in the Roman church, and are mentioned in England in the 7th century. Among the acts passed for the relief of this laborious class of ecclesiastics are the 37th and 38th, and 57th Geo. III., and especially the beneficent act, 2 Will. IV. Oct. 1831. It appeared by parliamentary reports on ecclesiastical revenues, that there were in 1831, 3,520 curates in England and Wales, whose stipends amounted to £1,505. The greatest number of curates in one diocese was Lincoln, 629; and the smallest that of St. Asaph, 43. The Pastoral Aid Society was established in 1876; the Society for promoting the Employment of Additional Curates, in 1867; the Curates' Augmentation Fund, 1860.

CURFEW BELL (from the French couru for), was revived or introduced in England by Will. I. 1068. On the ringing of the curfew at eight o'clock in the evening all fires and candles were to be extinguished under a severe penalty. Rapin. The curfew was modified 1 Hen. I. 1186. The curfew bell is still rung in some places.

CURIA: see Kome, (6) c.

CURLING, a Scotch national game with stones on the ice, said to have been introduced from the Low Countries in the 16th century. The Edinburgh curling club was instituted 1735. The royal Caledonian curling club, founded in 1838, owns a large artificial pond at Strathallan, Perthshire. A party of Scotch curlers visited Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Canada, and played a number of matches with colonial teams, Dec. 1865-Feb. 1866.

CURRANTS from Vitis vinifera, whence probably the tree was first brought to us about 1553. The name is also given to a small kind of dried grape, brought from the Levant and Zante. The duty on these currants (20. 4d. per cwt. in 1834) has been reduced to 7s.; reduced to 2s. 17 April, 1890. The hawthorn currant (Ribes Oryzae) came from Canada in 1705, see Greece 1903.

CURRENCY ACTS. See under Bank of England, 1767-1823, and Gold, 1816. Those of Sir Robert Peel were passed in 1819 and in 1844. Royal commission appointed to inquire into the depreciation of silver, relative values of the precious metals, &c., about 5 Sept. 1836. In their final report, issued 6 Nov. 1838, the commissioners were found to be greatly divided in opinion respecting bimetallism, a paper currency, &c. Mr. H. Chaplin advocates his "thirty shilling" theory Jan. 1822.

CURSITOR BARON. This office, formerly attached to the court of exchequer, was abolished in 1856, on the death of the right hon. George Bankes.

CURTATONE, near Mantua, N. Italy. Here the Austrians, under Radetzky, crossed the Mincio, and defeated the Italians after a severe conflict, 29 May, 1848.

CUSHEE PIECES, invented by Richard Leake, the master-gunner of the Royal Prince man-of-war, renowned for bravery shown in the engagement with the Dutch admiral Van Tromp, in 1673.

CUSTOMS is a law not written (lex non scripta), established by long usage and consent, and is distinguished from lex scripta, or the written law. It is the rule of law when it is derived from 1189 downwards. Sixty years' custom is binding in the civil law, and forty years' in ecclesiastical cases.

CUSTOMS were collected upon merchandise in England, under Ethelred II. in 979. The king's claim to them by grant by great charter was established 3 Edw. I. 1274. The customs were farmed to sir Thomas Smith for annual sums varying from 14,000l. to 50,000l. in the reign of Elizabeth. Stow. They were farmed by Charles II. for 390,000l. in 1666. Davenant. In 1671 commissioners were appointed. The customs were consolidated by Mr. Pitt in 1787. Between 1820 and 1830 so many reductions and consolidations were made in the customs department, that above a quarter of a million was saved in salaries, though the work had enormously increased.—Acts consolidating the customs duties were passed in 1833, 1834, and 1860, whereby the number of articles in the tariff and the amount of customs were greatly reduced. Many changes have been made since; by the Customs Act of 1845, the laws were amended and the duties modified; see Revenue. The disqualification of custom-house officers and officers of excise from voting for the election of members of parliament in 1782, was removed in 1867-8.

The laws respecting the customs were amended by an act passed 21 Aug. 1853, and consolidated by acts passed, 24 July, 1876; an ended, 1889 and 1893.

CYCLE of the sun, a period of twenty-eight years, which having elapsed, the dominical or Sunday letters return to their former place, and proceed in the former order according to the Julian Calendar; that of the moon is nineteen lunar years and seven intercalary months, or nineteen solar years. The cycle of Jupiter is sixty years. The Paschal cycle, or the time of keeping Easter, was first calculated for the period of 352 years by Victorinus, 493. Blair. See Metonic Cycle, Calippe Period.

CYCLE AND CYCLING. The origin of the cycle is unknown. Velocipedes or monomotophic machines with three or more wheels, are believed to have been used in one of the earliest being the invention of Richard Lovell Edgeworth, circa 1767. A machine of this kind was invented by Blanchard, the aeronaut, and is described in the Journal de Paris, 27 July, 1770; and one was invented by Népêre Niepe in 1818. The "dandy-horse", or "Draisena," a kind of bicycle, was patented for the Baron von Drais of Prussia in 1817. A "Ackermann's Repository," Feb., 1819. It consisted of two wheels, about 30in. in diameter, running one in the wake of the other, and connected by a beam of wood, upon which, half way from each end, was a saddle or perch; an arm rest at the front end of the beam completed the apparatus. It was propelled by kicking the ground with the right and left foot alternately; it fell into disuse in consequence of the satire of Cruikshank, and contemporary humorists. The first practical bicycle, furnished with cranks and levers, is said to have been invented by Kirkpatrick Macmillan, a blacksmith of Keir, Dumfrieshire, circa 1839; another is stated to have been made by Garvin Lambell, who called it a "wooden horse." See Mitchell, 1847. M. Micheau, of Paris, invented pedals to propel the front wheel, and introduced the bicycle proper in 1866; from France it was imported into England about 1862.

James Starley, a mechanic, of Albourne, Sussex, transformed the old-fashioned "horse-shaker" into the modern bicycle and tricycle. The "velocipede" was patented in 1855; many other machines with various improvements since that date. A great impetus was given to the use of the bicycle by the invention of the safety bicycle, by J. Kemp Starley (died 27 Oct., 1904), now in universal use, and the invention of the pneumatic tyre and the "free" wheel. The motor cycle was introduced about 1890.

Cyclers' Touring Club, founded 1875, to encourage and promote touring. Publishes a monthly Gazette and an official handbook.

Taken by Tiglath-Pileser, king of Assyria, 746 B.C.

From the Assyrians it passed to the Persians, and from them to the Greeks, under Alexander.

To the Romans, under Augustus, 46 B.C., 448

Taken by the Saracens, 652, by the Turks in 1575, and destroyed by Tamerlane, 1406.

Taken by Ibrahim Pacha, 1532.

The disappearance of a Greek priest, named father Tenmases, from here, 15 Feb., is attributed to the torture of a number of Jews, suspected of his murder, and to a cruel persecution of that people, which caused remonstrances from many states of Europe.

Damascus restored to Turkey.

In consequence of a dispute between the Franks and Maronites, the Mahometans massacred above 2000 Christians and destroyed the houses, containing vast numbers of persons homeless and destitute; a large number were rescued by Abd-el-Kader, who held the citadel, 20 to 24, July, 1860.

Justice executed for these crimes by Fund Pacha: 10,000 persons executed, including the Turkish governor, and 11,000 persons made soldiers. Aug.-Sept. 1861.

The great mosque was destroyed by fire, 14 Oct. 1861. See Series, 1864-5.

Visit of the German emperor and empress, 7 Nov. 1868. Damsass-Hauran Railway opened, July, 1891. The Badi-Damasoe line opened Aug. 1892; financial failure, reported 15 Oct. 1892.

Inauguration of the Hedjaz railway connecting Damascus with the Holy City. 1 Sept. 1898.

DAMASK LINENS AND SILKS, first manufactured at Damascus, have been beautifully imitated by the Dutch and Flemish. The manufacture was brought to England by artisans who fled from the persecutions of Alva, 1569. The Damask Rose was brought here from the south of Europe by Dr. Linacre, physician to Henry VIII., about 1540.

DAMEN'S ATTEMPT. Louis XV. of France was stabbed with a knife in the right side by Damen, a native of Arras, 5 Jan. 1757. The culprit endured the most excruciating tortures, and was then broken on the wheel, 28 March.

DAMIETTA (Lower Egypt) was taken by the crusaders, 5 Nov. 1219; lost 1221; retaken by Louis IX., 5 June, 1229; surrendered to his ransom when a prisoner, 6 May, 1250. The present town was built soon after. See Egypt, 1882. Population, city, 165, 30,000.

DAMON AND PYTHIAS (or Phintias), Pythagorean philosophers. Damon was condemned to death by the tyrant Dionysus of Syracus, about 385 B.C. He obtained leave to go and settle some domestic affairs, promising to return at the appointed time of execution, and Pythias became his surety. When Damon did not appear, Pythias surrendered, and was led to execution; but at the critical moment Damon returned. Dionysus remitted the sentence, and desired to share their friendship.

DANAI: an ancient name of the Greeks derived from Danaus, king of Argos, 1474 B.C.

DANCE OF DEATH. The triumph of death over all ranks of men was a favourite subject with the artists of the middle ages, and appears in rude carvings and pictures in various countries. In 1472 the Dance of Death was played before Roi, king of Provence, in a ballet, Lou Gou, which he himself designed, and, as an allegorical drama, The Shaking of the Shears, or the Dance of Death, survived for a long time in England. The earliest known pictorial representation of this subject is that of Orcagna, 14th cent., whose Triumph of Death is painted on the walls of the Campo Santo at Pisa.

The Chorus Machabearum or Dance Macabre, the first printed representation, was published by Guillaume Marland, a bookseller of Paris.

Holbein's Dance of Death (concerning the authorship of which there has been much controversy), printed at Lyons in 1538, and at Basel in 1539.

Rowlandson's English Dance of Death, a modern adaptation of the medieval idea, 1815-16. Many editions of the Dance of Death have since appeared; one with an introduction and notes published by Mr. Russell Smith.

The term Dance of Death was also applied to the frenzied movements of the Flagellants, who had sometimes skeletons depicted on their clothing, about the end of the 14th century.

Dancing was, accompanied by alteration of mind and disturbances of the body, was very prevalent in Germany in 1374, and in the 16th century in Italy, where it was termed Tarantism, and erroneously supposed to be caused by the bite of the dances of the Tarantula. The music and songs employed for its cure are still preserved.

DANCING was practised by the Cretans, 1534 B.C. according to Herodotus. The Greeks combined the dance with their dramas, and pantomimic dances were introduced on the Roman stage, 22 B.C. Usur. Dancing by cinque paces was introduced into England from Italy, A.D. 1541. In modern times the French introduced ballets analogues in their musical dramas. The country dance (contre-danse) is of French origin, but its date is not precisely known. See Spelmans. See Morrice Dance, Quadrille, and Waltz.

DANE-BROG, a Danish order of knighthood, instituted in 1671 by Christian V., remodeled in 1693 and 1808.

DANE-GELD, or DANE-GILT, a tribute paid to the Danes to stop their ravages in England, first raised by Ethelred II. in 991, and again in 1003 and levied after the expulsion of the Danes to pay the costs for clearing the seas. The tax was suppressed by Edward the Confessor in 1061; revived by William I. 1068; and formed part of the revenue of the crown, until abolished by Stephen, 1136. Every hide of land, i.e. as much as one plough could plough, or as fede says, as much as could maintain a family, was taxed at first, i.e. afterwards as much as 75. And William says that once 24, 36, was raised.

DANES, or NORTHMEN; see Denmark. During their attacks upon Britain and Ireland they made a descent on France, where, in 895, under Rolla, they received presents under the walls of Paris. They returned and ravaged the French territories as far as Ostend in 896. They attacked Italy in 903. Neustria was granted by the king of France to Rolla and his Normans (North-men), hence Normandy, in 911. The invasions of England and Ireland were as follows:

First hostile appearance of the Danes 783

They land near Burgh, Dorset, and take Bristol 793

Defeated at Hengestdune, in Cornwall, by Egbert 805

They land in Kent from 500 vessels, and take Canterbury and London 825

They descend on the north, and take York 866

They defeat the Saxons at Merton 871

They take Wareham and Exeter 876
DANUBIAN PRINCIPALITIES;

WALLACHIA and MOLDAVIA (capitals, Bucharest and Jassy) were united and named ROMANIA, 1858. Population of the two, 1849, 5,612,520; 1888 (est.), 6,800,000. These provinces formed part of the ancient Dacia (which see)

Part of Moldavia ceded to Russia

The provinces having participated in the Greek insurrection in 1821, were severely treated by the Turks; but by the treaty of Adrianople were placed under the protection of Russia.

The Porte appointed as hospodars prince Storby for Wallachia, and prince Ghika for Moldavia.

They retire from their governments when the Russians enter Moldavia. See Russo-Turkish War.

The Russians quit the provinces and the Austrians entered, Sept. 1854; retire March, 1857.

The government of the principalities finally settled at the Paris conference (i.e. of hospodars, elected by elective assemblages, and the suzerainty of Turkey was to be preserved).

Alexander Conza elected hospodar of Moldavia, 17 Jan., of Wallachia. 15 Feb. 1859.
The election acknowledged by the allies 6 Sept. 1859.
The definitive union of the provinces (under the name of Roumania) proclaimed and acknowledged by the Porte 1 Dec. 1861.

DAUPHINELLES, the classic Hellspont, derives its name from Dardanus, an ancient city in the Troad, and called after the ancient Dardani. Two castles (Sestos, in Roumania, and Abydos, in Anatolia), built by the sultan Mahomet VI. in 1659, command the entrance of the strait of Gallipoli, and recall the story of Hero and Leander (see Hellspont).—The passage of the strait was achieved by the British squadron under Sir John Duckworth, 19 Feb. 1807; but he repassed them with great loss. 3 March, the castles of Sestos and Abydos falling down stone by stone upon the British ships. The allied English and French fleets passed the Dauphinelles at the sultan's request, Oct. 1853; see Hellspont and Xerxes, and Rev. Japan, War 1904, 5.

DARIE, a Persian gold coin, issued by Darieus, hence its name, about 538 B.C. About 358 cents. Knowles. 1 weighed two grains more than the English guire. Dr. Bernard.

DARIESEN, ISTHMUS OF, central America, discovered by Columbus, 1504. In 1664, William Paterson, founder of the Bank of England, published his plan for colonising Darieus. A company was formed in 1665, and in 1669, three expeditions sailed thither from Scotland, one, 400,000, had been raised. The first consisted of 1200 young men of all classes, besides women and children. The enterprise not having been recognised by the English govt., the settlement was thence abandoned by the Spaniards, to whom they were finally surrendered, 30 March, 1700. Paterson and a few survivors from famine and disease, had set off shortly before the arrival of the second expedition. Several years after, 36,000 were, allowed by Parliament to the survivors as 'Equivalent money;' 18,000 were also voted to Paterson; but the bill was rejected in the house of Lords. See Panama. The average breadth, 40 miles; least breadth, 20 miles.

DARJEELING, a British district in the Himalayas, created about 1824. The capital Darjeeling, is used as a sanitarium. The cultivation of tea is flourishing, and the population rapidly increasing. See Darjeeling.

DARK AGES, a term applied to the Middle Ages; according to Hallam, comprising about 1000 years—from the invasion of France by Clovis, 486, to that of Naples by Charles VIII. 1495. During this time learning was at a low ebb. Hallam's "View of the State of Europe during the Middle Ages," published 1818. Supplemental Notes, 1858.

DARLINGTON, an ancient town S. Durham, chartered and made a parliamentary borough 1857. The opening of the Stockton and Darlington railway 27 Sept. 1825, the first to convey passengers, was an impulsion to the prosperity of the borough. The handsome collegiate church of St. Cuthbert, founded 1100 by bishop Pudsey, and restored in 1869 by Sir Gilbert Scott, is a fine specimen of Early English architecture. To the free library, opened 1835, Mr. Edward Pease gave 100 guineas. Population 1871, 21,792; 1881, 35,102; 1891, 36,940; 1901, 41,415. See under Teesdale, 1825 and 1857.

Lord Roberts receives the freedom, and unveils a S. African memorial . . . . 5 Aug. 1905.

DARMSTADT, capital of Hesse-Darmstadt, made a city 1530, became the residence of the landgraves. The ducal palace built 1568 et seq. Memorial to the grand duchess Alice, unveiled 12 Sept. 1902. Pop. 1910, 83,123; see Hesse, 1804.

D'ARTAGNAN, the hero of Dumas' Les Trois Mousquetaires, 1844, and its sequels. The character was probably taken from a real historical personage, Charles de Raatz de Castlenoue, comte d'Artagnan, 1611-73, who commanded the French guards from 1657; killed at the siege of Maestricht, 1673.

DARTFORD (Kent). Here commenced the insurrection of Wat Tyler, 1381. A convent of monks, of the order of St. Augustin, endowed here by Edward III., 1355, was converted by Henry VIII. into a royal palace. The first paper-mill in England was erected at Dartford by sir John Spelman, a German, in 1590 (Stone), and about the same period was erected here the first mill for splitting iron bars. The powder-mills here were blown up four times between 1750 and 1758. Various expeditions have since occurred, in some cases with loss of life to many persons. Population, 1881, 10,142; 1901, 36,175.

DARTMOOR, South Devon, a tract of land, 20 miles long, 9 to 12 miles broad, subject to the dukedom of Cornwall. The Dartmoor Preservation Association hold their annual meeting at Plymouth, 26 Oct. 1855. Dartmoor Prison, founded Mar. 1866. Seven prisoners of war were shot 6 April, 1815, after an insurrection.

A mutiny here was checked with loss of life of one prisoner. On 24 Aug. 1830, Wm. Carter, convict, shot dead while attempting to escape. 24 Dec. 1836 Convicts escape, 4 June; recaptured, 5 June, 1837. Two convicts escape and are recaptured. Oct. 1835. No convicts have escaped without being recaptured quickly for many years.

DARTMOUTH (Devon). Burnt by the French in the reigns of Richard I. and Henry IV. In a third attempt (1404), the invaders were defeated by the inhabitants, assisted by the valour of the women. The French commander, Du Chastel, three lords, and thirty-two knights, were made prisoners. In the war of the parliament, Dartmouth was taken after a siege of four weeks, by prince Maurice, who garrisoned the place for the king (1643); but it was retaken by general Fairfax in 1646. The duke and duchess of York visited the Britannia training ship (where the duke was a naval cadet), 6 July, 1897. The king, accompanied by the queen and princess Victoria, laid the stone for the new Britannia naval college, 7 March, 1902. Pop. 1911, 7,996; 1920 (est.) 9,000.

DATES were affixed to grants and assignments (16 Edw. I. 1296). Before this time it was usual at least to pass lands without dating the deed of conveyance. Lewis. Numerous instruments of assignment enrolled among our early records establish this fact. The date is determined by the names of the parties, particularly that of the grantor; the possession of land was proof of the title to it. Verulam.

Saracens by Charles Martel. After forming part of the kingdom of Arles, it was much subdivided among counts. One of these, Humbert II., ceded Dauphine and the Viennois to Philip VI., in 1345, for the purpose of being able to support the prince should he be styled dauphin, which took effect in 1349, when Humbert became a monk. Louis Antoine, duke of Angoulême, son of Charles X., the last dauphin who assumed the title at his father's accession, 16 Sept. 1824, died 3 June, 1844.

DAVENTRY, Northamptonshire, an old municipal borough, situated at the sources of the Avon and Nene. Charles I. spent a few days at Davenport just before the battle of Naseby (14 June, 1645). Near here Lambert, having escaped from the Tower, was defeated and retaken, in his attempt to enkindle the war, by Monk, 21 April, 1660. Danes or Borough hill, near the town, is one of the largest Roman camps in England. The dissenting academy removed here from Northampton in 1752, was transferred to Wymondley in 1785, thence to London as Coward College, and finally united with Hampton and Highbury Colleges as New College, in 1850.

DAVID, the capital of Chiriqui in Panama, on the Rio David, a centre of stockraising and tobacco industries. Population 1910, 12,000 (about).

DAVID’S, St. (S. W. Wales), the ancient Monapia, now a poor decayed place, but once the metropolitan see of Wales, and archiepiscopal. When Christianity was planted in Britain, three archbishop’s seats were appointed, viz. London, York, and Caerleon upon Usk, in Monmouthshire. That at Caerleon being too near the dominions of the Saxons, was removed to Mynyw, and called St. David’s, in honour of the archbishop who removed it, 522. St. Sampson was the last archbishop of the Welsh; for he, withdrawing himself on account of a pestilence to Dol, in Brittany, carried the pall with him. In the reign of Henry I. the archbishops submitted to the see of Canterbury.

Beatsou. Present income 4500l.

KINSHOPS.

DAVID’S DAY, St. 1 March, is annually commemorated by the Welsh, in honour of St. David. Tradition states that on St. David’s birthday, 510, a great victory was obtained by the Welsh over their Saxon invaders; and that the Welsh soldiers were distinguished, by order of St. David, by a leek in their caps.

DAVIS’S STRAIT (N. America), discovered by John Davis, 11 Aug. 1585, on his voyage to find a N. W. passage, 1585-87. He made two more voyages for the same purpose, and five voyages to the East Indies. In the last he was killed by Japanese pirates, on the coast of Malacca, 27 or 29 Dec. 1605.

DAVY JONES, a familiar name by which seamen designate an evil spirit. Davy Jones’s locker is an equivalent phrase for the ocean. The name has been derived from Jonah the prophet, and from duffy, a W. Indian negro spirit.

DAVY LAMP, &c., see Safety Lamp.

DAVY MEDAL. Funds were furnished by the sale of sir Humphry Davy’s plate. It was first awarded by the Royal Society to Professors Bunten and Korschof in 1877, for their discovery of spectrum analysis (which see). Davy-Faraday Research Laboratory, see Royal Institution.

DAVYUM. It is a metal of the platinum group, discovered by Sergius Kern, 25 June, 1877, in the residuum of platinum ore; hard, infusible, and rather ductile.

DAY. Day began at sunrise among most of the northern nations, at sunset among the Athenians and Jews; and among the Romans at midnight as with us. The Italians in some places, reckon the day from sunset to sunset, making their clocks strike twenty-four hours round. The Chinese divide the day into twelve parts of two hours each. The astronomical day begins at noon, is divided into twenty-four hours (instead of two parts of twelve hours). Thus the astronomical day 8 Dec. begins at noon of 8 Dec. and ends at noon 9 Dec. At Greenwich, from 1 Jan. 1885, the day of 24 hours begins at midnight; thereckoning was recommended for railways, &c. A system of universal time for all countries was put forth by Mr. Sandford Fleming, of Canada. The Washington Prime Meridian Conference adopted a resolution declaring the universal day to be the mean solar day, beginning for all the world, at the moment of mean midnight of the initial meridian, coinciding with the beginning of the civil day, and that meridian to be counted from zero up to 23 hours, 21 Oct. 1884. The scheme for universal time was advocated by Mr. (K.C.B. 9 Nov., 1904) W. H. M. Christie, the Astronomer Royal, at the Royal Institution, 19 March, 1886. A hallowed day is a day on which a writ may be executed; Sundays, Christmas Day, and Good Friday are excepted.

DAYLIGHT SAVING BILL introduced into the house of commons; reached its second reading on 5 March, 1908. It was proposed that local time, from the third Sunday in April, until 2 a.m. on the third Sunday in September, should be one hour in advance of Greenwich time, and for the remainder of the year the same as Greenwich time. In Ireland, Dublin time was to be substituted for Greenwich time. Opinion on the matter was divided, and much opposition being shown, the bill was dropped.

DEACONESSES, or ministering widows, have their qualifications given in 1 Tim. vi. 9, 10 (65). Their duties were to visit the sick and poor, assist at the ague or love feasts, admonish the young women, &c. The office was discontinued in the Western church after the 10th century, and in the Greek church about the 12th. In 1830 a deaconesses’ house was founded by pastor Frieder at Kaisersworth, near Düsseldorf; many since on the continent. The appointment of deaconesses, subject to the parishal clergy, was advocated by the bishop of Ely about 1853, and was later appointed. The Diocesan Deaconesses’ Institution, London, was established in 1861. The office adopted by the church of Scotland, 1887.

DEACONS (literally servientes), an order of Christian ministers, began with the Apostles, about 53. (Acts vi. 3, 5), whose qualifications are given by St. Paul (05), 1st Timothy iii. 8—13. Mr. John Andrews, master of Shrewsbury High School, was ordained at Lichfield Cathedral a permanent deacon in conformity with a resolution passed in the DEAD.

Prayers for their benefit were probably offered up in the 2nd century, being referred to by Tertullian, who died 220. The practice was protested against by Arius, and defended by Epiphanius, who died 403. It is generally objected to by the church of England, but is not expressly forbidden by any article of the faith as in the Court of Arches. (Pallad. Eccl. Law, 185-60.)

Book of the Dead, a collection of prayers and exorcisms written in Egyptian hieroglyphic or hieratic characters, composed for the benefit of the pilarum soul in his journey through Aniuti (the Egyptian Hades). Portions of these papers were placed with the mummy in his tomb. They are said to form the whole of the thousands which are extant. The "Book of the Dead," is dated from the 4th dynasty 2300-2200 b.c. After much toil a pure text with illustrations was published by M. Edouard Naville, 1886. Translations in several European languages have appeared. A London Edition of Egyptian Museum, was published in 1882, Mr. E. A. Wallis Budge's editions, with translations, 1885, 1887, 1890, and 1891.

DEAD WEIGHT LOAN. Acquired its name from its locking up the capital of the Bank of England, which in 1823 advanced 11,000,000l. to the government (to construct new ordinance, &c.). The latter engaged to give an annuity of $85,740l. for 44 years, which ceased in June, 1867.

DEAF AND DUMB. The first systematic attempt to instruct the deaf and dumb was made by John Wallis, a Benedictine monk of Saint John, on Jerome Cardan's system, about 1570. See Biadwood, Bonet, a monk, published a system at Madrid 1620. Mr. Wallis published a work in England on the subject 1650. The first regular academy for the deaf and dumb in Britain opened in Edinburgh in 1771. In modern times the abbe de l'Epee (1712-89), and his friend and pupil the abbe Seguin of Paris (1742-1822), the 1st. Mr. Townsend and Mr. Baker, of London, Mr. Thomas Braidwood of Edinburgh, and surgeon, O'penn of Dublin, laboured with much success in promoting the instruction of the deaf and dumb.

The asylum for deaf and dumb children, opened in London through the exertions of Mr. Townsend in 1772, one in Edinburgh by Mr. T. Bradwood, and one at Birmingham by Mr. T. Bradwood in 1815. The asylum at Clarendon, Dublin, opened 1816.

There were in Great Britain 12,554 deaf and dumb, out of a population of 29,624,472. 1834.

A debate on the deaf and dumb held at Washington, U.S., under the presidency of Mr. E. M. Gallaudet, and empowered by government to grant degrees. 1836.

A deaf and dumb debating club (Walls's club) closed its third session April, 1860.

The foundation stone of St. Stephen's church, near Oxford, dedicated for the deaf and dumb, laid by the prince of Wales 1862.

Oral Teaching. Mr. Wm. Van Praagh introduced the so-called German system into this country in June, 1872. The capital of the fortnight Mayer-de-Rothschild and others, the "Association for the Oral Instruction of the Deaf and Dumb," was founded in 1881, and a day-schooL opened June, 1882. Training college and school founded at Eding 1857.

The Royal Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb, London, founded in 1810, and reorganized 1854. It provides instruction and entertainment under clerical direction.

International congress at Milan; great majority in favour of oral teaching of deaf-mutes. Sept. 1890.

The rev. R. A. Pearce, a mute, was a clergyman at Winchester 1853.

Report of the royal commission on the education of the deaf and dumb received 1899.

DEATH.

Oak hill, Nightingale-lane, Chatham-common, equipped as a residential school for deaf girls. 1868.

Death of Mr. Wm. Van Praagh, director of the association for the oral instruction of the deaf and dumb, July 29, 1845. 1847.

The London County Council has 19 schools for the instruction of the deaf and dumb. 1873.

DEAL, a cüque port with Sandwich, 1220; a fishing village in the reign of Henry VIII., its strong castle built 1539 by Henry VIII. Deal was incorporated and made independent of Sandwich, 1691. Iron promenade pier erected 1894. Victoria Hospital, new wing opened by lady George Hamilton, 28 July, 1897. Pop. 1910 (est.), 12,000.

DEAN, FOREST OF, Gloucestershire, anciently wooded quite through, and in the last century, though much curtailed, was twenty miles in length and ten in breadth. It was famous for its oaks, the material of our ships of war. Riots in this district, when more than 3000 persons assembled in the forest, and demolished upwards of fifty miles of wall and fence, throwing open 10,000 acres of plantation, took place on 8 June, 1831.

The Dean forest (mines) act passed 10 Aug. 1871.

DEAN (decanus), a name commonly given to the arch-presbyter, or eldest presbyter, in the 12th century; originally a military title, an officer over ten soldiers. In the church of England the dean and chapter of a cathedral nominally elect the bishop and form his council. By 13 & 14 Car. II. (1662), a dean must be in priest's orders; previously the office had occasionally been held by a layman, with special dispensation. The ancient office of "a rural dean" revived since 1859. The Deans' and Canons' resignation act passed 13 May, 1872. The Five Deans' memorial, and counter memorial, see Church of England, 1881. See Arches.

DEATH DUTIES.

Capital punishment abolished in Tuscany, 1835; Holland, 1837; Saxony, 1 April, 1865; Holland, 1876. In 17 out of 21 cantons of Switzerland...

Practically ceased in Belgium, Prussia, Bavaria, Denmark, and Sweden, though not abolished in France: 175 convictions for murder—1 executed, in one year; similar proportion in Italy. Abolished in some of United States. Maine, 1876; Rhode Island, Michigan, and Wisconsin, since; in others, virtually ceased. Capital punishment by electricity (electrocution) ordered to be adopted by the State of New York from 1 Jan., 1899. The execution of William Kemmler by electricity was ordered, but deferred, on appeal, 11 Oct. Execution by electricity declared constitutional by the court of appeals.

Mutes of execution (1919) — Austria, gallows, public; Bavaria, guillotine, private; Belgium, capital punishment abolished, 1835; Brunswick, axe, private; China, sword or cord, public; Denmark, guillotine, public; Ecuador, musket, public; Finland, capital punishment abolished, 1824; France, guillotine, public; Great Britain, hangman, private; Hanover, county, private; Holland, capital punishment abolished, 1836; Italy, capital punishment abolished, 1875; Netherlands, gallow, public; Obenheim, musket, public; Portugal, capital punishment abolished, 1852; Prussia, sword, private; Rommany, capital punishment abolished, 1884; Russia, musket, gallow, or sword, public; Saxony, guillotine, private; Spain, garrote; Sweden, capital punishment abolished, 1874; United States, electrocution.

DEBATES IN PARLIAMENT. See Reporting.

DEBATING SOCIETIES; several formed in the last century. The celebrated Oxford Union Society was founded in 1823, and many orators have been trained by it.

DEBTORS have been subjected to imprisonment in almost all countries and times. In the eighteen months subsequent to the panic of Dec., 1825, as many as 101,000 writs for debt were issued in England. In the year ending 5 Jan., 1830, there were 7114 persons sent to the several prisons of London; and on that day, 1547 of the number were yet confined. On the 1st of Jan., 1830, the number of prisoners for debt in England and Wales was 17,322; in Ireland the number was under 1000; and in Scotland under 100. The operation of statutes of relief, and other causes, considerably reduced the number of imprisoned debtors. When the new Bankruptcy act (abolishing imprisonment for debt except when fraudulently contracted) came into operation in Nov., 1861, a number of debtors who had been confined were released. Arrest of Absconding Debtors bill, 14 & 15 Vict. c. 52, 1852. In 1861 nearly 18,000 persons were imprisoned by order of the county courts for contempt: average time, 15 days; amount of debt, 3l. 10s. Agitation against this imprisonment, Dec., 1862; select committee of lords on the subject met May, 1893. By an act passed 9 Aug., 1869, the imprisonment of fraudulent debtors was abolished, with certain other exceptions; nearly a hundred debtors were released by a judge's order in Jan., 1870. An act to facilitate the arrest of absconding debtors, passed 9 Aug., 1870. Imprisonment for debt in Ireland was abolished by an act passed 6 Aug., 1872, and in Scotland (after 31 Dec.) by Dr. Cameron's Act, passed 7 Sept., 1850. See Arrest, King's Bench, Bankrupts, Involvents, Fleet, and National Debt.

DEBUTSCOPE, an instrument of French origin, somewhat similar to the kaleidoscope, said to be useful for devising patterns for calico-printers, &c., made its appearance in 1890.

DECLAEGUE (Greek dekor ten, and logos a word), the ten commandments (Ex. xx., Deut. v.), called by the Jews the "ten words" (Ex. xxxiv. 28). The division of the decalogue varies among the Jews and the Christian churches.

DECCAN (Dekhan or Dakhan), S. India, was invaded by the Mahometans in 1294. The first independent sultan was Adudin. The natives revolted, and the dynasty of Bahmanji was founded by Hasan Ganga in 1347. About 1660-90, Aurungszebe I. recovered the Decan, but soon lost great part of it to the Mahrattas. The Nizam al Malik, his viceroy, became independent in 1717. A large part of the Decan was ceded to the English in 1818.

DECEMBER (from decem, ten), the tenth month of the year of Romulus, commencing in March. In 715 B.C., Numm introduced January and February before March, and the month December became the twelfth of the year. In the reign of Commodus, A.D. 181-192, December was called, by way of flattery, Amazonium, in honour of a courtesan whom that prince had loved, and had painted like an Amazon. The English commenced their year on the 25th December, until the reign of William I.; see Year. For 2 December revolution see France, 1851.

DECEMVIRI, or Ten Men, appointed to draw up a code of laws, to whom for a year the whole government of Rome was committed, 451 B.C. The laws they drew up were approved by the senate and general assembly of the people, written on ten metallic tables, and set up in the place where the people meet (convenient). Two more tables were added by a second decemvirate, 450 B.C. The tyrannical conduct of Appius Claudius, one of the Decemviri, towards Virginia, who was stabbed by her father Virginia to save her from slavery, led to a revolution, and the re-establishment of the consuls government, 449 B.C.

DECENNIAL, festivals instituted by Augustus, 17 B.C., celebrated by the Roman emperors every tenth year of their reign, with sacrifices, games, and largesses. Liry. Celebrated by Antoninus Pius, A.D. 148.

DE COURCY'S PRIVILEGE, that of standing covered before the king, granted by king John to John de Courcy, baron of Kingsale, and his successors, in 1203. He was the first Irish nobleman created by an English sovereign, 27
Hen. 11, 1181, and was entrusted with the go-government of Ireland, 1185. The privilege was allowed to the baron of Kingsale by Will. III., geo. 111., and by Geo. IV. at his court held in Dublin, in Aug. 1821. The present baron, Michael Constantine De Carew, premier baron of Ireland, b. 1835, succeeded 1805, is the 33rd in succession.

DECRETAI.S. They formed the second part of the canon law, or collection of the pope's edicts and decrees and decrees of councils. The first acknowledged to be genuine is a letter of Silvester to Himerus, a bishop of Spain, written in the first year of his pontificate, 584. Arom. Certain false decretals were used by Gregory IV. in 876. The decretals of Gratian, a Benedictine (a collection of canons), were compiled in 1150. Heinsal., six books were collected by Gregorius IX. 1227; a sixth by Boniface VIII. 1229; the Clementines by Cler-ment V. in 1313; employed by John XXII. in 1317;
the Extravagantes range from 1458 to 1493.

DEDICATION of the Jewish tabernacle took place 1390 B.C. of the temple, 1004 B.C. of the second temple, 334 B.C. The Christians under Constantine built new churches and dedicated them with great solemnity, in A.D. 331 etc. The dedications of books by authors to solicit patronage or testify	respect existed in the time of Mercens, 17 A.D., the friend and counsellor of Augustus, and a patron of Horace (Ode I. 1).

DEED, a written contract or agreement.
The formula, "I deliver this as my act and deed," occurs in a charter of 1033. Fosbrooke. Deeds in England were formerly written in Latin or French; the earliest known instance in English is the indenture between the abbot of Whitby and Robert Bustard, dated at York in 1343; see English Language.

DEEMSTER, the name given to the two judges who, in the Isle of Man, act as chief justices of the island. One presides over the northern and the other over the southern division. In Scotland, the deemster, dempster, or dooister, was the title of an official attached to the High Court of Justiciary, whose office it was to pronounce the sentence of death on condemned persons. The office was united to that of executioner.

DEEP-SEA SOUNDINGS. Much new and interesting information respecting the animal life and temperature of the deep sea was acquired by the dredgings on the coast of Norway by M.
Sars, and by those of Dr. W. Carpenter and prof.
(att. sir) Wyville Thomson on our own coasts, near the Faroe Isles, in 1868 and 1869, and in the Mediterranean by Dr. Carpenter in 1870. Living animals have been found at a depth of three miles.
On 21 Dec., 1872, Dr. Wyville Thomson and a party of scientific men sailed in H.M.S. Challenger (Capt. G. S. Nares, to examine into the physical, chemical, and geological and biological condition of the great ocean basins and the direction of their curves. Deepest sounding then known was taken in the Atlantic, north of St. Thomas's, 3873 fathoms
(3 miles, 1710 yards); 21 March, 1873. On 21 Dec.
1874, Capt. Thompson succeeded Capt. Nares, who took the command of the new Arctic expedition.
The Challenger expedition was warmly promoted by Mr. Robert Lowe (afterwards lord Sherbrooke), chancellor of the exchequer, 1808-73.

A Norwegian expedition explored the north in the years 1867-70, and in 1873-75, and an Italian expedition in the Mediterranean started 2 Aug., 1881. Explorations carried on in the eastern Mediterranean for the marine life of Vienna, to the greatest depth, 33 miles, is between Mollan and Cergio. March, 1831.
The greatest known ocean depth was said to be 5,415 fathoms south of the Ladrones Islands.

Adm. W. J. Wharton stated that the soundings taken by H.M.S. Penguin in the S. Pacific, Feb, 1896, exceed 5,000 fathoms; Times, 28 Feb., 1896.

DEER are mentioned in a will of one Athelstan, dated 1015. Professor Owen thinks that fallow deer are not native, but were introduced here at an early period. There are now in England 334 deer parks, the oldest being probably lord Abercromby's at Erde, Sussex. Large numbers of deer are kept at the royal parks of Windsor and Hampton court.

DEERHOUND, an English yacht, while conveying arms to the Carlists, seized by the Spanish government vessel Ilu invoices, off Biariz, and captain and crew imprisoned, 13 Aug., released about 18 Sept., 1873.

DEFAIMATION is punishable by fine and imprisonment by statute of 1834. The jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts on this subject was abolished by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 41 (1855). See Libel.

DEFENCE, see Church Defence, National Defence, and Naval and Military adn. 1895.

DEFENCE ACT, a complete conscription act, authorising a levy en masse, 1893, was unsuccessful;
new measures were taken in 1897-8. The Defence of the Realm Act passed 28 Aug., 1890, in conse-quency of the unsettled state of Europe, and the doeful policy of the emperor Napoleon; see For-Bation, Defence, and Imperial defence. Other defence acts passed 1895 and 1873; see also Naval Defence Acts.

DEFEENCE GOVERNMENT in France, formed on 4 Sept., 1870, when the emperor was deposed and a republic proclaimed, gen. Trochu president; it included Gambetta, Simon, &c. It resigned, after Paris had capitulated, 5, 6 Feb.,

DEFENDER OF THE FAITH (Fede Defiensor), a title of the British sovereign, conferred by Leo. X. on Henry VIII. of England, 11 Oct. 1521, for the tract against Luther on behalf of the Church of Rome (then accounted Dominium fidei Catholicae).

DEFENDERS, a faction in Ireland, which arose out of a quarrel between two residents of Market-hill, 4 July, 1784. Each was soon aided by a large body of friends, and many battles ensued. On Whist-Monday, 1785, an armed assemblage of one of the parties (700 men), called the Xympagh Fleet, prepared to encounter the Banow Fleet, but the engagement was prevented. They subsequently became religious parties, Catholic and Presbyterian, distinguished as Defenders and Reformed-day-boys: the railway was named because they usually visited the dwellings of the Defenders at day break in search of arms; see Diamond.

DEGREES. Erasthenes attempted to determine the length of a geographical degree about 250 B.C. See Geodesy, Latitude, and Longitude. Collegiate degrees are coeal with universities. Masters and doctors existed, 826. See Lambeth Degrees. Those in law are traced up to 1149; in medicine, to 1584; in music, to 1465. Middle-class examinations for degrees were instituted at Oxford, 18 June, 1587; at Cambridge, 24 Nov. 1857; girls were allowed to compete for degrees, Oct. 1803; other universities since. See Womenc, 1856-7 et seq.

DEI GRATIA, see Grace of God.

DEIRA, a part of the Anglo-Saxon kingdom of Northumbria; see under Britain.

DEISM, THEISM, or MONOTHEISM (Latin, deus; Greek, theos, God), the belief in one God, in opposition to polytheism and to the doctrine of the Trinity. About the middle of the 16th century some gentlemen of France and Italy termed themselves deists, to disguise their opposition to Christianity by a more honourable appellation than that of Atheism (which see). The most distinguished deists were Herbert, baron of Cherbury, in 1624; Hobbes, Tindal, Morgan, lord Bolingbroke, Gibbon, Hume, Holofer, Pale, Godwin, J. S. Mill, and Helmholtz.

A high-caste Brahmin, Rammohun Roy, founded a Brahmin monastic church in 1820, termed the Brahmo Samaj. He died at Bristol 27 Nov. 1833. His reformatory work was revived in 1832 by Dr. Mackenzie. In 1835 Bachelor Chunder Sen joined the society, and became a most energetic propagandist, advocating also social reform; being much opposed, he formed the new Brahmo Samaj of India in 1866. Chunder Sen was received at a public meeting in London as a reformer, 12 April, and subsequently preached in a Unitarian chapel, Finsbury, London, 1859 Schism in his church; new church formed (Society of God) 1880. He died at Calcutta 8 Jan., 1884. Protag Chunder Mookundar, a leader of the Brahmo Samaj, visited Chicago, where he attended the world's parliament of religions, in 1893; he died at Calcutta 27 May, 1905. See Unitarians and Vosey.

DEITIES, see Mythology.

DELAGOA BAY, S. E. Africa, claimed by Great Britain and Portugal. Having been referred to arbitration, the southern portion was awarded to Portugal by marshal MacMahon, Aug. 1877. The importance of the port was greatly increased by the discovery of gold in the Transvaal districts. The South African Republic promoted a railway to be constructed by German and Dutch capitalists. The acquisition of the day by Great Britain strongly advocated 1887.

The Portuguese government on 14 Dec. 1883, granted a concession to a Portuguese company for the construction of a railway from the bay to the Transvaal territory. The prospectus of the East African railway company (capital 500,000£) was issued 7 March, 1884. As the works were not completed in the specified time, the works were confiscated by the Portuguese government, 25 June, et seq., who cancelled the concession (see Portuguese East Coast Railway).

The British and United States governments recommend with Portugal April, 1890. The completed railway inaugurated 28 April, 1890. The Portuguese government appealed the principle of arbitration; the governments request the Switzaagovernment to appoint three jurists to form a court of arbitration 8 May. The Portuguese government pays £10,000 to the British government for the railway company provisionally, reported July. The court of arbitration meets at Berne 5 Aug. A notice of the facts sent to Berne, 12 Nov. 1892; meetings in Feb. 1893; report issued 25 Feb. 1898. Portugal routed in the Bili district; reported 20 July, 1897. Plague epidemic, 49 deaths at Magna, reported, 14 Sept. 1899.

The Delagoa railway award delivered at Berne: Portugal to pay 842,500£ to British and United States governments 612,900£ at 5 per cent, simple interest per annum, to 25 June, 1899, to the date of payment, total amounting to about £200,000; costs of arbitration to be paid by the governments. 25 March, 1900. The Delagoa bay railway, 57 miles, is continued for 290 miles to Pretoria. Portuguese and British agreement in regard thereto signed, 1 April, 1909. See Lawrence Marques.

DELAWARE, one of the United States of North America, named after lord de la Ware, governor of Virginia, who entered the bay 1638. It was settled by Swedes, sent there by Gustavus in 1627; acquired by the Dutch, 1655; ceded to the English, 1664. Capital, Dover. Population, 1900, 184,435; 1910 (est.) 210,000.

DELEGATES, Court of. Appeals to the pope in ecclesiastical causes having been forbidden (see Appeals), such causes were for the future to be heard in this court, established by Henry VIII., Henry VII. and Rome, 1538. This court was abolished 1832, and appeals now lie to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, according to 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 41 (1833); and 6 & 7 Vict. c. 38 (1843). See Arches.

DELEGATIONS, in the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy, established in 1867, composed of 60 Austrian and 60 Hungarian members.

DELFT (S. Holland), a town founded by Godfrey le Bosun, about 1074; famous for "Delft earthenware," first manufactured here about 1310. The sale of delft greatly declined after the introduction of potteries into Germany and England. Groats, jurist, was born here, 10 April, 1583; tercentenary celebrated 10 April, 1883. His statue erected, 17 September, 1886. Here William, the great prince of Orange, was assassinated by Gerhard, 10 July, 1583; tercentenary celebrated 10 July, 1883. Population, 1900, 33,957.

DELHI, the once great capital of the Mogul empire, and chief seat of the Mahometan power in India; it was taken by Timour in 1398. It contained a million of inhabitants in 1700. In 1739, when Nadir Shah invaded Hindostan, he entered Delhi; 100,000 of the inhabitants perished by the sword, and plunder to the amount of 32,000,000£, sterling is said to have been collected. Similar calamities were endured in 1761, on the invasion of Abbala, king of Cabul. In 1803, the Maharrattas, aided by the French, took Delhi, but were defeated by general Lake, 11 Sept., and the aged Shah Alum, emperor of Hindostan, was restored to his throne with a pension; see India, 1803. On 10 May, 1857, a mutiny arose in the sepoy regiments at Meerut. The rebels fled to Delhi on 11 May, and, combined with other troops here, seized the city; proclaimed a deputy of the Mogul king, and committed frightful atrocities. The rebels were anxious to possess the chief magazine, but after a gallant defence it was exploded by order of lieut. Willoughby, who died of his wounds shortly after. The other heroes of this exploit were lieutenants Forrest and Rayner, and conductors Buckley and Southern. Willoughby was shortly after besieged by the British, but was not taken till 29 Sept. following. The final struggle began on the 11th; brigadier (aft. sir) Archdale Wilson, the commander, much aided by col. R. Baird Smith. Much heroism was shown; the gallant death of Salkeld at the expense of the Cashmere gate created much enthusiasm. The old king and his sons were captured on 9th; the latter were shot, and the former after a trial was sent for life to Lannoon, where he died 11 Nov. 1862. See India, 1857. A camp formed at Delhi by the earl of Mayo, the viceroy, Dec. 1871, was visited by the king of Siam, Jan. 1872. The prince of Wales visited Delhi, 11 Jan. 1876. Queen Victoria was proclaimed empress of India, with much magnificence, many Indian princes being present, 1 Jan. 1877. Great fire, 2000 houses burned, 10 April, 1883; Pop. 1901, 208,572; 1910 (est.) 270,000.

Railway collision, 59 persons killed or injured; reported. Sept., 1896.

Statue of queen Victoria unveiled. 26 Dec. 1902.

Statue of general John Nicholson unveiled by the viceroy. 6 April, 1906.

New tablet at the Cashmere gate, containing the names of the forming party who demonstrated the gate in 1857, erected 1905; government sanctions substitution. Oct. 1906.

"DELICATE INVESTIGATION" into the conduct of the princesses of Wales (afterwards queen of England, as consort of George IV.), was commenced by a committee of the privy council, under a warrant of inquiry, dated 29 May, 1809. The members were lord Grenville, lord Erskine, corp. Spencer, and lord Ellenborough. The inquiry, of which the countess of Jersey, sir J. and lady Douglas, and other persons of rank, were the prompters, led to the publication called "The Book"; afterwards suppressed. The charges against the princess were disproved in 1807 and in 1813; but not being permitted to appear at court, she went on the continent in 1814; see Queen Caroline.

DELIUM. Boeotia, N. Greece, the site of a celebrated temple of Apollo, here in a conflict between the Athenians and the Boeotians, in which the former were defeated, Soresas the philosopher is said to have saved the life of his pupil Xenophon, 424 B.C.

DELLA CRUSCA ACADEMY of Florence merged into the Florentine in 1582. —The DELLA CRUSCA SCHOOL, a term applied to some English residents at Florence, who printed inferior sentimental poetry and prose in 1785. They came to England, where their works, popular for a short time, were severely satirised by Gifford in his "Bavard" and "Merval" (1795-5).

DELOS, a Greek isle in the Egean sea. Here the Greeks, during the Persian war, 477 B.C., established their common treasury, which was removed to Athens, 461. Excavations, resulting in interesting discoveries, were made in the island by the French in 1883.

DELPHI (N. Greece), celebrated for its enigmatical oracles delivered by the Pythia or priestess in the temple of Apollo, which was built, so it is said, by the council of the Amphictyons, 1263 B.C. The Pythian games were first celebrated here 586 B.C. The temple was burnt by the Pisistratids, 548 B.C. A new temple was raised by the Alcmaonids. The Persians (480 B.C.) and the Gauls (279 B.C.) were deterred from plundering the temple by awful portents. It was, however, robbed and seized by the Phœnicians 257 B.C., which led to the sacred war, and Nero carried from it 300 costly statues, A.D. 67. The oracle was consulted by Julian, but silenced by Theodosius.

An ancient hymn to Apollo, the words and musical notation, inscribed on two tablets, discovered recently, and the possession of the emperor and queen, &c., at Athens. 29 March, 1894.

Excavations by the French school of archaeology; discoveries of the remains of the temple of Apollo, A.D. 1881, 1894; a great statue of Apollo and altar (date about 400 B.C.). 30 May.

DELFIN CLASSICS, a collection of thirty-nine Latin authors in sixty volumes, made for the use of the dauphin (in uum Delphini), son of Louis XIV., and published in 1673-91. Ausonius was added in 1730. The due de Montausier, the young prince's governor, proposed the plan to Huet, bishop of Avranches, the dauphin's preceptor; and he, with other learned persons, including Madame Dacier, compiled all the Latin classics except Lucan. Each author is illustrated by notes and an index of words. An edition of the Delphin classics, with notes, &c., was published by Mr. Valpy of London, 1818 et seq.

DELA, the island formed by the alluvial deposits between the mouths of the Nile, so named by the Greeks from its resemblance to their letter [alpha].

DELUGE, THE, which was predicted by Noah, is described in Genesis vi. vii. viii.; dated by Usher and the English Bible 2348 B.C. The following are the epochs of the deluge, according to Dr. Hales:—

Ravensnest r.c. 3424 Clinton r.c. 2482
Jackson 3379 Philay 2352
Hales 3155 Marshall 2344
Joseph 3146 Petavius 2339

DEMISE OF THE CROWN ACT, royal assent, 2 July, 1901, making fresh appointments to offices held under the crown unnecessary after the death of the sovereign.

DEMOCRATIC FEDERALS, a political party, proposed by Mr. Joseph Cowen, M.P. for Newcastle, opposed to the policy of the government of Mr. Gladstone, 5 April, 1881.

DEMOCRATS, advocates for government by the people themselves (demus, people, and kratos, to govern), a term adopted by the French republicans in 1790 (who termed their opponents aristocrats, from aristo, bravesst or best). The name Democrats was adopted by the pro-slavery party in N. America (the southern states), and the abolitionists were called Republicans. Into these two great parties a number of smaller ones were absorbed at the presidential election in 1856. In 1860, the Republicans formed "Wide-awake" clubs for electioneering purposes, and succeeded in getting their candidate, Abraham Lincoln, elected president, 6 Nov., which led to civil war; see United States, 1860.

In the autumn of 1874, the democrats, free-traders, and opponents of negro slavery, once more obtained the majority in the elections for the next congress; a reaction in their favour against the republicans, protectionists, then powerful; see United States, 1857. Governor John A. Logan, a democrat, elected president, 3 Nov. 1884; not re-elected, being replaced by general Benjamin Harrison, republican, 5 Nov. 1888.

Mr. Cleveland was re-elected president, 2 Nov. 1892, the democrats having obtained a majority in the new congress and the senate, the first time since 1866. The democrat party was much disorganized by the election of Mr. McKinley, republican; see United States, Nov. 1896.

DENARIUS, the chief silver coin among the Romans, weighing the seventh part of a Roman denarius, or 206 denarii, one of which was valued at about 269 B.C. when it was exchanged for ten asses (see AS.). In 216 B.C. it was exchanged for sixteen asses. A pound weight of silver was coined into 100 denarii. Digby. A pound weight of gold was coined into twenty denarii aurei in 206 B.C.; and in Nero's time into forty-five denarii aurei. Leneprieure.

DENIS, St., an ancient town of France, near Paris, famous for its abbey and church; the former abolished at the revolution, the latter the place of sequestration of the French kings, from its foundation by St. Denis; the remains of the saint Denis were placed there in 976. On 6, 7, 8 Aug. 1793, the republicans demolished most of the royal tombs, and in Oct. following, the bodies were taken from coffins and cast into a pit; the lead was melted, and the gold and jewels taken to Paris. By a decree of Bonaparte, dated 20 Feb. 1806, the church (which had been turned into a cattle-market) was ordered to be cleansed out and redecorated as "the future burial-place of the emperors of France." On the return of the Bourbons, more restorations were effected, and the de Beirri and Louis XVIII. were buried here. The damage sustained in the war of 1875-1 has been well repaired. Near St. Denis the Silesian troops defeated the Magyars, but lost their leader, the constable Montmorency, 10 Nov. 1567.

DENMARK (N. Europe). The most ancient inhabitants were Jutes and Teutones, who were driven out by the Jutes or Goths. The Teutones settled in Germany and Gaul; the Cimbrians invaded Italy, where they were defeated by Marius. The peninsula of Jutland obtained its name from the Jutes; and the name of Denmark is supposed to be derived from Don, the founder of the Danish monarchy, and work, a German word signifying country. For their numerous invasions of Britain, &c., see Danes. By the treaty of peace, signed 30 Oct. 1804, the duchies were taken from Denmark; Sleswick and Holstein were to be made independent, and Lauenburg was to be incorporated, by its desire, with Prussia. For the result, see Gastein and Prussia, 1806. Capital, Copenhagen; pop., 1906, 426,340 (26 suburbs, 8,757); revenue, 1880, 1,969,039; of the colonies, 1880, 127,200; 1906, 2,605,268. WINNERS of "THE DERBY.
DE RICKS. 409

DE RICKS are lofty, portable crane-like structures, used on land and water for lifting enormous loads, and in ease of depositing them at an elevation. They were introduced into England as floating derricks for raising sunken vessels, by their inventor, A. D. Bishop, in 1857, and are now in universal use.

DERRY (N. Ireland), a bishopric first at Ardfrath; thence translated to Maghera; and in 1158 to Derry. The cathedral, built in 1104, becoming ruinous, was rebuilt by Londoners, who settled here in the reign of James I. The see is valued in the king's books at 250l. sterling; but it has been one of the richest sees in Ireland. Beatson. The see was united to Derry, 1834; see Bishops; Londonderry.

DERVISH. (Persian, signifying 'poor.') The dervishes of the present time, fanatic enthusiasm, unrecognized by orthodoxy, originated in Persia, whence they spread over the Mahomedan world. The khilifa Abdulla was killed at Oun Debrikat 24 Nov. 1187. Dervish trophies and relics exhibited at Whitehall, 22 Nov. et seq. 1848. See Soudan.

DESCENT OF MAN, see Development.

DESIGN, SCHOOLS OF, established by government, began at Somerset-house, London, 1 Jan. 1837. In 1852 the head school was removed to Marlborough-house, and became eventually "the department of science and art," transferred to South Kensington in 1857. It is under the direction of the committee of council on education and arts.

DESPARD'S CONSPIRACY. Colonel Edward Marcus Despard, a native of Ireland, Broughton, Francis, Graham, Macnamara, Wood, and Watten conspired to kill the king, and establish a republic, on the day of opening parliament, 16 Nov. 1802. Above 30 persons including soldiers were taken in custody; of those tried, 20 Jan. 1803, Despard and six others were executed, 21 Feb. He had been a distinguished officer under Nelson.

DESTRUCTIVE INSECTS (to crops), an act passed to prevent their introduction and spreading in Great Britain, 14 Aug. 1877. See Colorado.

DETROIT, Michigan, U.S.A., the oldest city in the west, was built by the French about 1610. It is eminent for large metal works. Population in 1880, 116,349; 1900, 285,704; 1906 (est.), 333,535.

DETTEINGEN (Bavaria), BATTLE OF, 16 (or 27 Oct.) June, 1743, between the British, Hanoverian, and Hessian army (52,000), commanded by King George II. of England and the earl of Stair, and the French army (60,000), under Marshal Noailles and the due de Grammont. The French passed a defile, which they should have merely guarded. The due de Grammont with his cavalry charged the British out with great spirit and made so good a show that he was obliged to give way, and to repass the Maine, losing 3000 men. Handel's "Dettingen Te Deum," first performed, 27 Nov. 1743.

DEUTERONOMY. See Pentateuch.

DEVELOPMENT (or Evolution). Wolff put forth a theory of epigenesis in 1759; Lamarck, the naturalist, in 1809, propounded a theory that all animals had been developed from "monads," living minute particles; see Species and Vestiges. Buffon held a similar doctrine. In 1827, Ernst von Baer of Königsberg demonstrated that all mammals are developed from a minute egg not a hundredth of an inch in diameter. Mr. C. Darwin's views are given in his "Origin of Species," 1859; and "Descent of Man," 1871. He supposes that man was gradually evolved from the lowest created form of animal life. Haeckel, his most advanced follower, published in German a "History of Creation," 1873. See Evolution.

The theory of the development of living beings out of the substance of the earth was put forth by Lucretius in his "De Rerum Natura," about 51 B.C. "The primitive monads were born by spontaneous generation in the sea."—Professor Haeckel, 1873.

The Royal Society's Darwin medal was first awarded to Mr. Alfred Russel Wallace in 1839.

DEVIL WORSHIP. Devil, Greek, diabolos, false accuser; Hebrew, satan, an adversary; abaddon, destroyer, &c. The worship of devils is frequently mentioned in the Bible (Lev. xvii. 7; 2 Chron. xi. 15; 1 Cor. x. 20; Rev. ix. 20, &c.) Mr. Layard describes the Yazides as recognizing one supreme being, yet reverencing the devil as a king or mighty angel, to be conciliated (1841).

DEVIZES. a borough, Wiltshire; the castle here was founded by bp. Roger, about 1107; and was for some time royal property until Cromwell besieged and ruined it. The remains were sold by the executor of the 1st lord, Mr. R. V. Leuch, to Swayne in Aug., 1888. At Roundway Down, near here, sir William Waller and the parliamentarians were defeated, 13 July, 1643. Population of the town 1901, 6,532; of the borough, 13,970. Visit of the prince of Wales; centenary of the royal Wiltshire yeomanry... 24 May, 1893.

DEVOLUTION, a term applied in 1886-8 to the transfer of business of minor importance in the parliament to grand or other committees (see Committees).

DEVONSHIRE, the county of the Dumnomii or Dumnonii. Odan, earl of Devon, in 578, defeated the Danes, slew Ubbo or Hubba their chief, and captured his magic standard. A bishopric of Devonshire was founded in 907; see Exeter.

Richard de Redvers, first earl of Devon, son of Baldwin, sheriff of Devonshire, died 1117. William Cavendish, created first earl of Devonshire, 1613. William Cavendish (his great grandson), created first duke of Devonshire, 1625.

His descendant, William Cavendish, born 27 April, 1685; became earl of Burlington, 1714; and 7th duke of Devonshire, 1737; earl chancellor of the university of London, 1736; of the university of Cambridge, 1781. See Borrow-in-Furness, Exmouth, and Devon College. The duke died 21 Dec., 1811. Spencer C. Cavendish, the 9th duke, was born 23rd July, 1837, died 1908; (succeeded by his nephew, Victor Christian William Cavendish, born 1865). See Glanford, Administrations 1st and 2nd; elected chancellor of the University of Cambridge, 4 Jan., 1892, see also Sutliffbery and Balfour.

DEVONSHIRE AND PITT ADMINISTRATION, formed 19 Nov. 1758; dismissed 5 April, 1759.

DEW, the modern theory respecting it was put forth by Dr. Wells in his book, 1844.
DIAMONDS.

is said to have belonged in turn to Shah Jahan, Aurungzebe, near Shir Shar, the latter towards to the Sikh chief Ranjeet Singh. Upon the abdication of Bhupend Singh, the last ruler of the Punjab, and the annexation of his dominions to the British empire, in 1849, the Koh-i-Nur was presented to the queen. It was accordingly brought over and presented to her, 3 July, 1850. It was shown in the Great Exhibition, 1851. Its original weight was nearly 800 carats, but it was reduced by the unskillfulness of the artist, Hortensio Borghese, a Venetian, to 279 carats. Its shape and size resembled the pointed half (rose cut) of a small hen's egg. The value is scarcely computable, though two million pounds sterling seems to be a justifiable price, if calculated by the scale employed in the trade. This diamond was re-cut in 1852, and now weighs 220+ carats.

The Sancy diamond, which belonged to Charles the Bold, duke of Burgundy, was bought by sir C. Jeejeebboy from the Deodain family for 20,000/. in Feb. 1855.

The Agra diamond, a fine rose pink, weighing 309 carats, derives its name from the fact that it was taken in the battle of Agra in 1568 by the emperor Bakar, the founder of the Mogul empire in India. The diamond was taken from the king of Delhi in 1557, and conveyed by some English officers to the coast by concealing it in a horse-ball, which was swallowed by a horse. At the port of embassage the animal was killed, the diamond recovered and brought to England. It was subsequently sold to the duke of Bucknwick. Since then it has been re-cut from a 46 carat stone to its present weight. Sold at Christies to Mr. Max Meyer, for 5,100L, 22 Feb. 1895.

The Hope diamond, a sapphire blue brilliant, 44+ carats, formerly in the possession of Mr. H. T. Hope, estimated value 30,000/. It is supposed to have been cut from the large blue diamond 1124 carats (rough), sold by Tavernier to Louis XIV.

The Cullinan diamond, the largest known, discovered Jan. 1905, in the mines of the Premier diamond mining company, Transvaal, by T. Wells, an overseer, and named after the chairman of the company. Weight in uncut state 3,025 gr. 1905 carats. Exiled to the king at Buckingham palace, 29 March, 1905. In Aug. 1905, gen. Botha proposed that the Transvaal government should be authorised to acquire it for the purpose of presenting it to king Edward in token of the loyalty of the people of the Transvaal, and in commemoration of the grant of responsible government to the colony, and on 19 Aug. his motion was carried in the legislative assembly. The diamond was handed over to king Edward on 9 Nov. 1905, by sir Ri. Solomon and sir Francis Hopwood. The stone was subsequently cut into two large diamonds, one weighing 563 carats and the other 295, and they are now among the crown jewels. Several pieces of uncut stone, forming the residue of the original, were cut into six beautiful diamonds. These were bought by the crown and presented to queen Mary by sir Richard Solomon, high commissioner of the union of South Africa, on behalf of the government and the people of the union, 26 June, 1910.

The Porter Roman great diamond (weighing 150 carats; alleged value 60,000/) found at Kimberley 12 Feb. 1850, exhibited by Mr. Streeter, Bond-street, London, Nov. 1851.

Ancient diamond said to have belonged to the Mogul emperors of India, date of engraved characters possibly 1500, shown by Mr. Bryce Wright, Jan. 1852.

A diamond, named the Star of the South, was brought from Brazil in 1855, weighing 2544 carats, half of which was lost by cutting. Diamonds were discovered in Cape Colony, S. Africa, in March, 1857. A fine one, termed the 'Star of South Africa,' brought to England in 1869, was purchased by Messrs. Hunt and Roskell. After cutting, it weighed 1504 gr. 2714+ carats, of which 1504 gr. 2714+ carats was valued at 25,000/. It was mounted on a crown, and presented to queen Mary by sir Richard Solomon, high commissioner of the union of South Africa, on behalf of the government and the people of the union, 26 June, 1910.

Application of the manner or means of access to rough diamonds, by which parts from the rough stone can be cut to any size desired and converted into small brilliants, effects great change in diamond-worlking. See Annual report of Amsterdam Chamber of Commerce, issued Jan. 1903.

DIAMOND NECKLACE AFFAIR.—In 1784, Behnert, the court jeweller of France, offered the queen Marie Antoinette, a diamond necklace, for 50,000 ducats. The queen desired the necklace, but feared the expense. The Countess de la Motte (of the ancient house of Valois) frequently observed to her intimate friends that if the queen had an attachment for him, persuaded the cardinal de Rohan, the queen's almoner, to conclude a bargain with the jeweller for the necklace for 50,000 ducats. De Rohan, who had already seized the necklace and made away with it for this, was tried in 1786, and sentenced to be branded on the shoulders and imprisoned for life. She accused in vain the celebrated Italian adventurer, Cagliostro, of complicity in the affair, he being then intimate with the cardinal. She made her escape and came to London, where she was killed by falling from a window-sill, in attempting to escape an arrest for debt. De Rohan was tried and acquitted, 14 April, 1786. The public in France at that time suspected the queen of being a party to the fraud. Talleyrand wrote at the time, that he should not be surprised if this indiscretion should not prejudice the noble Queen over the throne.

INFALLIBILITY OF DIAMONDS.

Boetius de Boodt conjectured that the diamond was infallible, 1669. When exposed to a high temperature it changes color like a real diamond, in which a part of it was disintegrated, 1673. Boyle.

Sir Isaac Newton concluded from its great refracting powers that it was not produced from a solid substance. Avenarius demonstrated, by concentrating the rays of the sun upon it, that the diamond was exhaled in vapour, and entirely disappeared, while other precious stones merely grew softer, but were not altered. It has been ascertained by Guyton, Davy, and others, that diamonds contain nothing but pure charcoal, or carbon. Diamonds were charred by the intense heat of the volcanic battery of Mount Vesuvius, and by professor Paraday, in London, in 1848.

DIANA, TEMPLE OF (at Ephesus), accounted one of the seven wonders of the world, was built at the common charge of all the Asiatic states, 552 B.C.; the chief architect being Ctesiphot. Pliny says that 220 years were employed in completing it. It was 425 feet long, 225 broad, and was supported by 127 columns (60 feet high, each weighing 150 tons of Parian marble). Parrhasius, Archelaus, and eight other kings. It was set on fire, on the night of the birth of Alexander the Great, by Herostratus or Erastratus, who confessed that his sole motive was the desire of transmitting his name to future ages, 356 B.C. The temple was rebuilt, but again burnt by the Goths, in their naval invasion, A.D. 250 or 252. In April, 1869, Mr. J. T. Wood discovered the site of the second temple, and since then sculptured marble columns have been removed to the British Museum. Excavations under the auspices of the British Museum authorities began by Mr. D. G. Hogarth, Oct. 1904, complete ground plan of temple of Artemis discovered, with many small dedicated objects in bronze, ivory, glass, terra cotta, &c., including an archaic bronze statue of the goddess. Diana was the Roman name of the Greek Artemis.

DICE. The invention of dice is mythically ascribed to Palamedes, of Greece, about 1274 B.C. The game of tali a tessera or the tessera was played with dice. Stow mentions two entertainments given by the city of London, at which dice were played. Act to regulate the licences of makers, and the sale of dice, 9 Geo. IV. 1828.

DICTATORS were supreme and absolute magistrates of Rome, appointed to act in critical times. Titus Lartius, the first dictator, was appointed, 501 B.C. Caius Marcius Rutilus was the first plebeian dictator, 356 B.C. This office became odious by the usurpations of Sylla and Julius Caesar; and after the death of the latter, the Roman senate, on the motion of the consul Antony, passed a law forbidding the dictator to exceed 40 years. The dictator was also called master of the people, and had under him a master of the horse.

DICTIONARY. A standard dictionary of the Chinese language, containing about 30,000 characters, most of them hieroglyphic, or rude representations, somewhat like our signs of the zodiac, was perfected by Fa-out-shé, who lived about 1100 B.C. Morrison; see Encyclopaedia, Music, &c.

The great German dictionary, by Jacob and Wilhelm Grimm, was published 1851 et seq.

The earliest known English-Latin dictionary is the Promptorium Parvorum, compiled by Galfridus Grammaticus, a preaching friar of Norfolk, in 1419; and printed by Pynson, as Promptorium Parvorum, in 1499. Liddell and Scott Greek lexicon, founded on Passow 1833. The Imperial Dictionary of the English language, by Dr. Home, reviv'd. New edition by Charles Anwande, 4 vols. published 1832. Rev. W. W. Skeat's "Eymological dictionary of the English language" published 1882-4. A new English dictionary of the English language, 200 specialist authors; chief editor, Dr. Isaac K. Funk; 2 vols. New York, 1894-95. The "Dictionary of National Biography" (see Biographies), 1885-1900. Thesaurus Linguae Latinae, a great German work, in course of publication 1905. A new English dictionary (commonly called "the Oxford dictionary"). The scheme originated in 1857 in a resolution of the Philological Society at the suggestion of the late archbishop Thirlwall. A. H. Johnston submitted specimens of the scheme, on behalf of the council of the Philological Society, to the delegates of the Clarendon Press. The delegates consented to bear the expense of preparing the dictionary, which was commenced in 1874, and the first part published April, 1883. Seven volumes, reaching to letter F, were in circulation 1897.

DIDACHE. The, see Teaching of the Twelve, under Apostles.

DIDYUM, a rare metal, discovered by Moseander in 1841. It is found associated with lanthanum and cerium. Declared to be a compound by Mr. (after sir) W. Crookes in 1888.

DIEPPE (N. France). This town was bombardèd by an English fleet, under admiral Russell, and surrendered July, 1692. It was again bombarded in 1704; and again, together with the town of Granville, by the British, 14 Sept. 1803.

"DIES I.R.E." ("Day of Wrath"). A Latin medieval hymn on the day of judgment, is ascribed to various authors, amongst others to pope Gregory the Great (died about 604); St. Bernard (died 1153); but generally considered to have been composed by Thomas of Celano (died 1255), and to have been used in the Roman service of the mass before 1385.

DIET of the GERMAN EMPIRE (in which the supreme court of authority of the empire may be said to have existed) was composed of three colleges: one of electors, one of princes, and one of imperial towns, and commenced with the edict of Charles IV. 1356; see Golden Bull; Warburg (1180); Nuremberg (1477); Worms (1213); Spire (1218); Augsburg (1539); Ratisbon (1531); Frankfurt (1809, et seq.); and Germany.

DIETHEROSCOPE, an apparatus for geology and teaching optics, constructed by G. Lavinia, of London, and announced, April, 1836.

"DIEU-DONNÉ," the name given in his infeécy to Louis le Grand, king of France, the queen, his mother, having been barren for 23 years previously, 1178. Also to the comte de Chambord, son of the duchess of Berry, born 29 Sept. 1820, died 24 Aug. 1883. His father was assassinated, 14 Feb. 1820. One of the popes (1572) was named Adolatus or God's gift.

DIEU ET MON DROIT ("God and my right"), the royal motto of England, was the parole of the day, given by Richard I. of England to his army at the battle of Gisors, in France, 20 Sept. 1198, when the French army was signally defeated. The "Drois et mon droit" appears to have been first assumed as a motto by Henry VI. (1422-1461); see Semper Emancipem.

DIFFUSION OF GASES. In 1832, Döbereiner observed the transmission of hydrogen gas through a crack in a glass vessel, and professor Thomas Graham discovered the passage of gases through porous porcelain, graphite, and other substances, and established laws in 1832, and to him we are indebted for the discovery of Amonolysis and Diadysis. He died 16 Sept. 1883.

DIFFUSION OF USEFUL KNOWLEDGE SOCIETY, which published a number of books relating to history, science, and literature, and an atlas, in a cheap form, ridiculed as the "Sixpenny Sciences," was established by Lord Brougham, Mr. William Tooke, Mr. Charles Knight, and others. It published its "Library" 1827-48, and patronised the publication of the Penny Magazine and the Penny Cyclopedia. Its proceedings were suspended in 1846. The Royal Institution of Great Britain was established in 1799, for "the Promotion, Diffusion, and Extension of Science and Useful Knowledge of.

DIGEST, The first collection of Roman laws under this title was prepared by Alfenius Varus, the civilian, of Cremona, 60 B.C., Quintilis. The "Digest," so called by way of eminence, was the collection made by order of the emperor Justinian, 529; it made the first part of the Roman law and the first volume of the civil law. Quotations from it are marked with a ff. Pardon. The "Digest of Law" commissioners signed their first report 13 May, 1867, recommending the immediate preparation of a digest of the English common law, statute law, and judicial decisions.

DIGITS (digi, finger), any whole number under 10, i. e., are the nine digits; see Arithmetica. In astronomy, the digit is a measure used in the calculation of eclipses, and is the twelfth part of the lunatory eclipse.

DIJON (France). The ancient capital of Burgundy, is said to have been founded by Julius Cæsar, fortified by the emperor Marcus Aurelius, and named Divia, about 274. It has been several times captured in war; and a castle was erected here by Louis XI. Dijon was again the capital of the dukes of Burgundy about 1269. The city was besieged by the German emperor under general Beyer, 31 Oct. 1370. The heights, i.e., were taken by prince William of Baden, and the town surrendered on 31 Oct. Memorial to pres. Carnot unveiled by pres. Loubet, 21 May, 1893. Population in 1906, 71,113.

DILETTANTI, Society of, established in 1734 by the viscount Harcourt, lord Middlesex, duke of Buckingham, and others who had travelled and who were desirous of encouraging a taste for the fine arts in Great Britain. The society published, or aided in publishing, Stuart's Athens (1782-1816), Chandler's Travels (1775-90), and several other finely illustrated works. The members dined together from time to time at the Thatched-house tavern, St. James's. Mr. R. P. Pullan, on behalf of this society, execuvated the temple of Bacchus at Teos, of Apollo Smithes in the Troad, and of Minerva Polias at Priene, between 861-70. Published "Antiquities of Ionia," 4 parts, 1760-1881.

DIMORPHISM. a term used in biology to designate the occurrence of organisms in two forms.
as in the case of some crustaceans and insects, notably in the seasonal dimorphism of certain butterflies (Vanessa). In the mineral kingdom the term denotes the occurrence of any substance in crystalline forms belonging to two distinct systems, say carbon, which occurs as the diamond and as graphite.

DINAS. see Accidents under Coal, and Mansion House.

DINNERS. see Distribute and Juries.

DIOCESE. The first division of the Roman empire into dioceses, at that period civil governments, is ascribed to Constantine, 323; but Strabo remarks that the Romans had the departments called dioceses long before. In England the principal dioceses are coeval with the establishment of Christianity; of 37 dioceses, 27 are suffragan to the diocese of Canterbury, and 10 to that of York; see Bishops, and the sees generally. Diocesan confer-ces of the clergy and laity now frequent.

DIOCESES' CODE. drawn up by him for Syraeae, where he was a popular leader, 412 B.C.
It was highly approved, and copied by other nations, and remained in force till superseded by the Roman laws, after the conquest, 212 B.C.

DIOCLETIAN ERA (called also the era of Martyrs, on account of the persecution in his reign) was used by Christian writers until the introduction of the Christian era in the 6th century, and is still employed by the Russians and Copts. It dates from the day on which Diocletian was proclaimed emperor at Chaledon, 29 Aug. 284.

DIONYSUS. the Greek god of wine, poetry, and music, called Bacchus after the 5th century B.C.
His worship was introduced from Greece into Rome, and his festivals, termed Dionysia and Bacchanalia, were finally suppressed by the senate on account of their dissolute character. The Greek drama is said to have arisen out of the Bacchic festivals, 168 B.C.

DIOPTRIC SYSTEM. (from the Greek, diathrough, and optamia, I see), an arrangement of lenses for refracting light in lighthouses, devised by Fresnel, about 1819, based on the discoveries of Buffon, Condorcet, Brewster, and others; see Lighthouses.

DIORAMA. This admired exhibition was first opened by MM. Bouton and Daguerre in Paris, 11 July, 1822; in London, 29 Sept. 1823. It was not successful commercially here, and was sold in 1838. The building in Regent's park was purchased by Sir S. M. Petro, and opened on May 2, 1855, as a Baptist chapel.

DIPHTHERIA (from the Greek diphteria, lea-er), a disease resembling croup which has the essential character of developing a false membrane on the mucous membrane connected with the throat. It was named diphteritis by Brétonneau of Paris in 1823. From its prevalence in Boulogne, it has been termed the Boulogne sore-throat; many persons were afflicted with it in England at the beginning of 1838. The princess Alice, grand-duchess of Hesse-Darmstadt, died of this disease, 15 Dec.
1858, after nursing her husband and children.
One epidemic in London, &c., 1831-1834, origin and propagation uncertain. Dr. Roux of Paris successfully applied the antitoxin treatment of disease to diphtheria in 1894 by injecting into the patient's blood the serum of the blood of a horse previously rendered immune by a course of injections of the weak virus of diphtheria.

The treatment has been gradually developed from the discoveries of Roux, Behring, Behring and others in Germany. The Goldsmith's company grant a medal for the prosecution of researches on the subject.

Dr. Roux awarded the Prix Osiris of 1899 for Institute of France in recognition of his scientific labours in bacteriology. April, 1903
Dr. W. Martin's method of transforming the Roux serum into pastilles, reported to be successful with children.

As showing the effect of antitoxin, the following return of all forms of diphtheria treated in the hospitals of the Metropolitan Asylums Board is interesting:

1879-1883: 7,111 cases. 2,161 deaths.
1883. 4,244 cases. 2,248 deaths.

DIPLOMACY, the art of managing the relations of foreign states by means of ambassadors, envoys, consuls, charged d'affaires, &c.; see Ambassadors and Consuls.

DIPLOMAS. The wholesale fraudulent sale of diplomas of M.D. &c., for 10$, by a Dr.
Buchanan, dean of the American University of Philadelphia, and others, was detected in 1850. He attempted escape by a sham suicide, but was captured, prosecuted and imprisoned.

DIPLOMATICS, the foreign term for the science of palaeography or ancient writings. Valuable works on this subject have been compiled by Mabillon (1681), de Vainies (1754), Astle (1781),
De Wailly (1838), and other antiquaries.

DIPTYCH, a two-leaved tablet of metal, ivory, or other material, used by the Greeks and Romans. In the Christian church in its early days it was customary to incise the names of deceased bishops on diptychs. This practice was extended to include other distinguished persons who had deserved well of the church, and from it arose the calendars and martyrologies of a later period. The earliest diptychs in existence belong to the 5th century.

DIRECTORS' LIABILITY ACT, relating to prospectuses, &c., of public companies, passed 18 Aug. 1890.

"DIRECTORY FOR THE PUBLIC WORSHIP
OF GOD" was drawn up at the instance of the par-lament, by an assembly of divines at Westminster in 1644, after the suppression of the Book of Common Prayer. The general hints given were to be managed with discretion; for the Directory prescribed no form of prayer or manner of external worship, and enjoined the people to make no responses except

Amen. It was adopted by the parliament of Scot-lnd in 1645, and many of its regulations are still observed by presbyterians.

DIRECTORY, THE FRENCH, established by the constitution of the 5th of Fructidor, an 11.
(22 Aug. 1795), and nominated 1 Nov., was composed of five members (MM. de Harlay, de Launay, de Bary, and de Lenoir). On 18 Fructidor, 4 Sept, 1797, two directors (Carnot and Barthelamy) were deposed, and afterwards, with other officials, transported to Cayenne for favouring royalty. The directory ruled in conjunction with two chambers, the Council of Ancients and Council of Five Hundred (which see), till the revolution of the 9th of Brumaire (9, 10 Nov. 1799). It was deposed by Bonaparte, who, with Cambacérès and Lebrun, assumed the government as three consuls, himself
the first, 13 Dec. 1799; see Consuls.
DISCIPLINE, ecclesiastical, originally conducted spiritually according to the divine commands in Matt. xviii. 15. I Cor. v., 2 Thess. iii. 6, and other texts, was gradually changed to a temporal character, as it now appears in the Roman, Greek, and other churches. The "First Book of Discipline" of the presbyterian church of Scotland was drawn up by John Knox and first published in January, 1561. The more important "Second Book" was prepared with great care in 1562 by Andrew Melville and a committee of the leading members of the general assembly. It lays down a thoroughly presbyterian form of government, defines the position of the ecclesiastical and civil powers, &c.

DISESTABLISHMENT. See Church of Ireland.

DISPENSARIES, to supply the poor with medical advice and medicines, began in London. The Royal General Dispensary, London, was established in St. Bartholomew's Close, in 1770. The Western Dispensary was founded 1790, Garth's satirical poem, "The Dispensary," published 1809.

DISPENSATIONS, ecclesiastical, were first granted by pope Innocent III. in 1200. These exemptions from the discipline of the church, with indulgences, absolutions, &c., led eventually to the Reformation in Germany in 1517.

DISPENSING POWER OF THE CROWN (for setting aside laws or their power) asserted by some of our sovereigns, especially by Charles II. (in 1672 for the relief of nonconformists) and by James II. principally to enable Roman Catholics to hold civil and military offices, in 1686-8; was abolished by the bill of rights, 1689. It has been on certain occasions revived, as in the case of embargoes upon ships, the Bank Charter act, &c.; see Indemnity.

DISRAELI ADMINISTRATIONS.* On the resignation of the earl of Derby through ill-health, 23 Feb., 1868, Mr. Disraeli reconstituted the ministry, 29 Feb. (see Derby Administrations, III.). As the elections gave a large majority to the liberal party, Mr. Disraeli's ministry resigned 2 Dec. He declined the duke office with the then house of commons when Mr. Gladstone resigned, 12 March, 1873, and the latter resumed office.

First administration, 29 Feb. 1868.
Lord chancellor, Hugh Macalmont, lord Cairns.
Lord president of the council, the duke of Marlborough.
Lord privy seal, James, earl of Malmesbury.
Secretaries—home, Gathorne Hardy;—foreign, Edward, lord Stanley;—chancellor, richard, duke of Buckingham and Chandos;—secret, sir John S. Paginton;—indies, sir Stafford Henry Northcote.
Chancellor of the exchequer, George Ward Hunt.
First lord of admiralty, Henry Thomas L. Corry.
Chief commissioner of works, lord John Manners.
President of board of trade, Charles Henry, duke of Richmond.
"Secretary for Ireland, Richard, earl of Mayo:—viceroy of India, Oct.; succeeded by col. J. Wilson Patten. 7 Nov. 1868.
President of public board, Reginald, earl of Devon. 7 Nov. 1868.
Postmaster-general, James, duke of Montrose.
Lord great chamberlain, Charles, earl of Bradford.
Chancellor of the exchequer, edward, earl of Derby:—secret, sir John Wilson Patten;—succeeded by edward, earl of Northcote, 7 Nov. 1868.
Lord lieutenant of Ireland, James, earl (afterwards marquis) of Abercorn.

Second administration, received seals, 21 Feb. 1874.
First lord of the treasury, Benjamin Disraeli (earl of Beaconsfield), 16 Aug., 1870. — and lord privy seal, Aug., 1870 to Jan. 1878.
Lord chancellor, Hugh Macalmont, lord Cairns.
Lord president of the council, Charles Henry, duke of Richmond.

Lord privy seal, James, earl of Malmesbury;—succeeded, 12 Aug. 1876; earl of Beaconsfield, Aug. 1876; Algeron, duke of Northumberland, col. J. Wilson Patten;—succeeded by Sir William A. Pakington, 3 Aug. 1878 (created viscount Cranbrook, 4 Feb. 1878).

Secretary of state for India, Robert, marquis of Salisbury;—Gathorne Hardy, created viscount Cranbrook, 2 Apr. 1878.
Secretary of state for India, Robert, marquis of Salisbury;—Henry, earl of Carnarvon;—resigned, 24 Jan. 1878; sir Michael Batsch-Beck, 4 Feb. 1878.

Secretary of state for war, Gathorne Hardy;—col. Fred. Arthur Stanley, 2 Apr. 1878.

DIVING.

President of board of trade, Sir Charles Adderley, resigned, created baron Norton, April, 1878; Dudley Ryder, viscount Sandon.

Chancellor of the exchequer, Sir Stafford Northcote. Postmaster-general, lord John Manners.

The above formed the Cabinet.

Chief secretary for Ireland, Sir Michael Edward Hicks-Beach (entered the cabinet, Nov. 1875); succeeded by James Lowther, Feb. 1877.

Vice-president of council (education), Dudley, viscount Sandon; lord George Hamilton, April, 1878.

DIVESATION. see Anatomy.

DIVERS. (For dates of foundation of various dissenting churches, see Nonconformists.) Among the Independents and Presbyterians, the Dissenters, or sect, as they were called, were organized in 1609. The following is a list of the churches of the Dissenters in England and Wales, with the date of their foundation:

DIVINITY, was forbidden to the Jews, see 1531. (Dent, viii. 0.) It was common among their neighbours; and is described by Ezekiel (xxi. 21) 493 c.e.

DIVINE RIGHT OF KINGS, the absolute and unqualified claim of hereditary sovereigns to the obedience of their subjects, a doctrine which is generally considered to be foreign to the genius of the English constitution, was defended by many persons of otherwise opposite opinions, e.g., by James I., by Hobbes the free-thinker (1642), by Salmsonis (1690), by sir Robert Filmer (about 1680), in his "Patriarcha," published in 1680, and by the High Church party generally about 1714, but opposed by Milton (1651), Algernon Sydney, and others. The comte de Chambord, the last of the elder branch of the Bourbons, and the last consistent holder of the divine right of kings, died 24 Aug. 1883. See Suarez, 1872 et seq.

DIVING.

The earliest record of the art of diving for a purpose of utility occurs in Herodotus' Histories. Thus it would seem that the art was known approximately 415.

Dissolving VIEWS. Henry Langdon Childe, the alleged inventor, died 15 Oct. 1874, aged 92.

DISTAFF. See Distillation.

DISTILLATION. see Diverse.

DISTILLATION. see Distillation.

DISTRAINT for real property, see Agricultural Improvement.

DISTRESS. Law of Distress amendment act, 1868, comes into force, 1 July, 1870.

DISTRICT AUDITORS ACT, 42 Vict. c. 6 (28 March, 1879), regulated their appointment, duties, and payment.

DISTRICT CHURCHES ACTS. By the one passed in 1865 certain new churches were constituted rectories, and by another act, passed in 1868 (the Bishop of Oxford's act) the new parishes not rectories were ordered to be styled vicarages. See under Parishes.

DISSENTING SERVICE ORDER, for army and navy officers established 9 Nov. 1st investiture, 1715; renewed 1876. Distinguished service medal (India) instituted by king Edward VII., 25 June, 1907.

DISSENTING VIEWS. Henry Langdon Childe, the alleged inventor, died 15 Oct. 1874, aged 92.

DISTRAFF (or Roe), the staff to which flux or any substance to be spun is fastened. The art of spinning with it at the small wheel, first taught to English women by Anthony Bonavita, an Italian, Moor. St. Distaff or Roe day was formerly the first free day after the Epiphany (6th Jan.), because the Christmas holidays were over and women's work was resumed.

DISTILLATION, and the various processes dependent on it, are believed to have been introduced into Europe by the Moors about 1150; see Alcohol, Brandy. The distillation of spirituous liquors was in practice in Great Britain in the 16th century. Burns. The processes were improved by Adam of Montpellier in 1801. M. Payen's work (1861) contains recent improvements. An act to prevent the use of stills by unlicensed persons was passed in 1836. 118 licences to distillers were granted in the year ending 31 March, 1838, for the United Kingdom.

System introduced in Russia rendering distillation a government monopoly, reported, April, 1901.

DISPUTED SERVICE ORDER, for army and navy officers established 9 Nov. 1st investiture, 1715; renewed 1876. Distinguished service medal (India) instituted by king Edward VII., 25 June, 1907.
DIVING-BELL.

At the siege of Tyrre, Alexander the Great ordered diving-bells to be constructed for the defence of his fleet. (Hale.)

The employment of divers for the salvage of sunken property is first mentioned by Livy. In the piscatorial contest between Antony and Cleopatra, it is said, Antony sent a diver in a boat previously taught to attach itself to his ship. Cleopatra despatched another diver to fix a saltpet-sheet on the bow.

Rage of Raganus is supposed to have invented a diving-bell. (A.D. 1249.)

In Vegetius's De Re Militari is an engraving representing a diver, published 1434 & 1532.

Lavoisier in designing a diving apparatus for Borelins invented an apparatus which aimed at the renewal of the air and the separation of the exhaled from the inspiratory air. (1682.)

John Lethbridge, a Devonshire man, invented a watertight case for enclosing the person. (1715.)

The next contrivance most nearly resembling the modern first dress was an apparatus invented by Kleinwert, of Breslan, in 1798.

Augustus Siebel invented his "open" dress, worked in conjunction with an air pump, in 1810.

Though great improvements have been introduced since Siebel's death in 1822, his principle is in universal use to this day.

The greatest depth at which useful work has been performed by this dress is over five hundred fathoms, by a Spanish diver, Angel Erosaite, received recently, in silver bars from the wreck of the steamer "Caledonia," off Finestrat.

DIVING-BELL.

To Dr. Edmund Halley, secretary of the Royal Society, the honour is due of having invented the first practical diving-bell. (1747.)

Robert Boyle in his experiments Physico-Mechanical describes a submarine vessel, contrived by Cornelius Drebbel about the year 1620, which was made of wood and used under water, and was actually tried in the Thames by order of James I.

Martin Triewald, a Swedish military officer, contrived a diving-bell of a lighter and less expensive style than Halley's. (1728.)

Charles Spalding introduced an improvement on Halley's bell. (1775.)

John Sturgeon designed a diving-bell for use in repeating the foundations of Hadley bridge. (1798.)

To Stemraen we are indebted for the first diving-bell plant in the form with which we are acquainted, that dedicated engineer having designed a square bell of iron for use on the Ramsgate harbour works. (1799.)

Probably the first really practicable diving-bell was Dr. Paynes's. (1844.)

DIVING ROOD (viresa divina, benefactores), formed of wood or metal, was formerly believed, even by educated persons, to have the property of indicating the position of minerals and springs of water. Instances were alleged in 1851 by Dr. H. Mayo, in his work on "Popular Superstitions"; and upheld by many writers since.

DIVORCE was permitted by the law of Moses (Deut. xxiv. 1.). 1551 n.c., but forbidden by Christ except for fornication (Matt. v. 31, 32). It was put in practice by Spurinca Carullis Ruga at Rome, 2347 C.E. At this time morals were so debased that 5000 proceedings for adultery were enrolled. Divorces are of two kinds: one, a diuvisio matrimonii (total divorce); the other a separatio of them (from board and bed). Divorces were attempted to be made of more easy obtainment in England in 1539. Until 1858, in England, complete divorce could only be obtained by act of Parliament, as in Ireland now. The divorce court, established by the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857, was, by the Judicature Acts, 1873, abolished, divided the Admiralty, and admirality division of the High Court of Justice, with two judges. See Supreme Court and Probate. Bill to prevent women marrying their seceding husbands brought into parliament. (1861.)

The commissioners on the law of divorce issued their first report in 1857.

In 1857 there had been in England, since the Reformation, 317 divorces by act of parliament; in Scotland, by the law, 174 divorces since 1846.

By 20 & 21 Will. IV. c. 58, the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts respecting divorce, &c., was abolished, and the Divorce and Matrimonial Causes court instituted, to consist of three judges, the Judge of the Probate court to one (if possible).

A full court sat—Lord Campbell, chief baron Pollock, Sir C. Cresswell (Holland) (the Probate judge)—when five marriages were dissolved on May 10, 1858.

The act amended by acts passed in consequence of the increase of the business of the court.

An act respecting divorces in Scotland passed in April 1861.

Sir C. Cresswell died in July; Sir James P. Wilde (afterwards Lord Penzance) successor. (Sept. 1873.)

Lord Penzance retired, Oct.; succeeded by Sir James Hannon, Nov. 1873; Sir Francis H. Jenne, 30 May, 1892, resigns 28 Jan. 1905; Sir Isaac E. Deason, 10 April, 1905; succeeded by Mr. (kt. 1905) Justice Gorrell Barnes, 1 Feb. 1905; right hon. Sir John G. Bigham.

See Appellate, Probate and Supreme Court.

The Divorce Amendment act passed July 27, 1868.

Between 1856 and 1858 1279 dissolutions of marriage and 1360 separations were granted.

Divorces 1858 87, 7321. In 1858, 200; 1868, 200; 1876, 403; 1887, 459; 1891, 744, 1,127; 1896, 1,092; 1897, 1,228; 1898, 1,314.

On appeal, the House of Lords disallowed that proceedings may be taken for divorce from a wife insane (see Lord Harton case, Trials, 1870.)

25 June, 1874. Divorce legalized by the French Republic; about 7000 divorces in Paris alone 1857-74; prohibited by the civil code, yet Napoleon I. divorced Josephine Dec. 1809; again prohibited 1816; again legalized (with conditions) by M. Napoleon's bill, passed July; many suits instituted, Aug. 1821, 7,051 divorces in 1826; 9,035 in 1899; 9,330 in 1904; 10,798 in 1905; 11,415 in 1906.

In the United States of N.A., owing to the great increase of divorces, the National Divorce League urges congress to reform the law.

Bible greatly facilitating divorce passed by the parliaments of New South Wales and Victoria, vetoed by the colonial office. (1888-9.)

A divorce bill for Victoria, having received the assent of the home government, the bishops of Victoria read their clergy marrying divorced persons.

May, 1890. Dr. Gore, l.p. of Birmingham, appointing the first chancellor; the new divorce law excludes from the chancellor's powers the right to grant marriage licenses to persons who have been divorced, reported. 31 Aug. 1915.

Royal commission on the law of divorce in England appointed; first sitting held. 25 Feb. 1910.

DIZIER, Dr. (N. E. France.) Here a siege was sustained for six weeks against the army of the emperor Charles V., 1544. The allies here defeated Napoleon, 27 Jan. and 26 March, 1814.

DORRUDSCHA, the N. E. corner of Bulgaria; in 1854, the scene of the earlier incidents of the Russo-Turkish war (which see). At the close of the war of 1877-8 it was given to Roumania in exchange for the part of Bessarabia restored to Russia, and occupied 26 Dec. 1878.

DOCETE, a sect of the 1st century, said to have held that Jesus Christ was God, but that his body was an appearance, not a reality.

DOCKS. There are several kinds of docks, of which the chief are wet, which afford facilities for loading and unloading vessels from or to the sea, for the inspection and repair of ships, and floating, for the same purposes. Wet docks are of two kinds—those in which the water is always maintained at about the same level by means of land streams or pumping, and these are the most convenient; and those known as tidal, where during the ebb of the tide the ships practically rest upon the mud. The first dock in England was constructed at London in 1668, and was for the accommodation of whaling vessels from Greenland, and afforded facilities for boiling or "trying-out" blubber, whilst the first dock at Liverpool was constructed in 1708. During the last century the immense development of the world's trade and the building of ships of enormous size and carrying capacity, necessitated improvements in the facilities for dealing with ocean traffic; and, as a result, old docks were enlarged and new ones constructed. Tidal docks were deepened by dredging, and deeper water was provided at the quays. In the United Kingdom the principal docks are at London, Cardiff, Liverpool, Birkenhead, Newcastle, Bristol, Manchester (opened up to ocean traffic by means of the ship canal; see Manchester), Dover, Grimsby, North and South Shields, Glasgow, Hull, the Hartleports, Aberdeen, Southampton, Plymouth, Cork, Dundee, Newport (Mon.), Dublin, Swansea, Middlesbrough, Portsmouth, and Greenock. London is the largest port in the world. A royal commission was appointed in 1890 to inquire into the administration of the Port of London (see London and other places named). Floating docks save much time in the inspection and repair of damaged vessels. The docks, by means of a series of chambers into which water is allowed to flow, are sunk beneath the vessel to be repaired; the water is pumped out, and the dock rises to the surface again with the ship upon its dock. The principal London docks are as follows:

Commercial Docks, Rotherhithe, originated about 1636.
West India Docks commenced 3 Feb. 1800; opened 27 July 1802.
London Docks were commenced 26 June, 1802, and opened 20 Jan. 1805.
East India Docks commenced 1803; opened 4 Aug. 1806.
St Katherine's Docks began 3 May, 1827; opened 25 Oct. 1828.
Royal Victoria Docks (in Plaistow marshes) completed and opened Nov. 1855; enlarged and named Royal Albert Docks by the duke and duchess of Connaught, 16 June, 1882.
Millwall Docks, near London, opened 14 March, 1883.
The construction of floating docks for repairing ships advocated by lord Brougham, Jan. 1837.
Erection of docks at Tilbury determined on 30 Sept. 1847; the dock opened 7 July, 1852; known as "The Queen's Dock".
For dock labourers' strike see Strikes, Aug.-Sept. 1839.
A great floating iron dry dock, which cost 250,000l., was launched at North Woolwich, 3 Sept. 1858; and towed from the Medway by two ships of war, 23 June, and arrived at the Bermands (in thirty-six days), 30 July, 1859; another sent arrived 8 Aug. 1859.
Floating dock for Durban, launched, WallSEND-on-Tyne, 8 Aug. 1873.

DOCK-YARDS.

DOCTOR. Doctor of the Church was a title given to Athanasius, Basil, Gregory Nazianzen, and Chrysostom in the Greek church; and to Jerome, Augustin, Ambrose, and Gregory the Great in the Latin church; see Fathers. Afterwards the title of doctor only was conferred on certain persons with distinguishing epithets, viz.: Thomas Aquinas (Angelicus), Bonaventura (Scropehus), Alexander of Hales (Irideus Orthodoxus), Roger Bacon (Mirabillis). William Occam (Singularis), Joseph Gerson (Christianissimus), Thomas Bradwardine (Profundus), and so on. Doctor of the Law was a title of honour among the Jews. Formal promotions to the degree of doctor legum commenced at Bologna, circa 1130; the university of Paris followed this use soon after. The degree of doctor was conferred in England, 8 John, 1207.

Spreman. Some give it an earlier date, referring it to the time of the Venerable Bede and John de Beverley, the former of whom, it is said, was the first that obtained the degree at Cambridge in the 8th century. Originally the degree of "doctor" was granted only in law and divinity; it was not conferred in medicine until the 13th century. The right to confer degrees was granted in the middle ages by the pope, as the recognised head of the universities; in protestant countries this right is granted only by the state. The archbishop of Canterbury, by an act in the reign of Henry VIII. (24 Henry VIII., c. 21, 1543-4), received the right of conferring degrees in civil and Laudable degrees. The doctors in science, music, and literature dates from the latter part of the 19th century.

DOCTORS' COMMONS, the college for the professors of civil and canon law in the 8th century. In February, 1508, Dr. Henry Herrie, dean of the arches and master of Trinity-hall (a seminary founded at Cambridge chiefly for the study of the civil and canon laws), procured from the dean and chapter of the diocese of London a lease of Montjoy-house and buildings in the parish of St. Benet, Paul's wharf, for the accommodation of the society. Other courts being held here, the whole were received the appellation of "Doctors' Commons." The original college was destroyed in the great fire of 1666; in 1872 it was rebuilt on the old site. After the great fire, until 1872, the society held its courts at Exeter-house in the Strand. It was incorporated by an act of charter in June 1749. The buildings of the College of Advocates, which included all the courts of Doctors' Commons (arches, admiralty, consistory, &c.), were purchased by the Metropolitan Board of Works, and were pulled down in April, 1897, for the new Queen Victoria Street; some new buildings were erected. Till 1827 the causes taken cognizance of here were blasphemy.
DOCTRINARIAn.

Divorces, bastardy, adultery, penance, tithes, mortuaries, probate of wills, &c.; see Ecclesiastical Courts, Civil Law, &c.

The walls were removed to Somerset House, where the office was opened 24 Oct., 1794.

DOCTRINARIAn. A name given since 1814 to a class of politicians in France (Guizot, Moliére, the Duc de Broglie and others), who upheld constitutional principles, in opposition to arbitrary monarchical power. The party came into office in 1830 under Louis-Philippe, and fell with him in 1848.

The term is applied by this country to the writers in the "Westminster Review" (1824) of sqq., Bentham, Moleworth, and others.

DODONA. Epirus. The temple of Jupiter here, famed for its ancient oracle, derived by the Eolians, 219 B.C. The foundations of the temple, with other relics, were discovered in 1883, by the excavations of M. Carpiou.

DoDoSOfn. Act brought forward by Mr. John G. Dobson, and passed 1 Aug., 1891, provided that votes for electing members of Parliament for the universities may be recorded by means of polling papers. The act was amended in 1898.

Dog, the, was worshipped by the Egyptians and hated by the Hebrews. The greyhound and mastiff are represented by the Assyrian sculptures in the British Museum.

The number of dogs declared, 10 Dec. III., 1792. The number in London, 1852, 10,288; in 1853, 9,415, in 1855, 8,700. The number of dogs raised, 1852, 1,777, 543; in 1874, 1,619,075. In 1857, an annual duty of 2s. was imposed on all dogs more than six months old, to begin on 2 April, 1857; increased to 5s. 1 June, 1859. Employment of dogs in drawing carts, &c., abolished in London, 1859; in the United Kingdom, 1864. Dogs sent to London in 1824, 7,394; in 1864, 37,720; in 1874, 41,962.

As a nuisance, dogs at large unmuzzled in the streets were ordered to be seized by the police, 17 Nov., 1766, and July to 27 Nov., 1868. A new act, more stringent, passed, 24 July, 1872.

Cockney is the term applied to racing between brothers through Mr. Magri, and excessively fleet, the property of Lord Lurgan, which won the Waterloo cup; was sent for Queen Victoria to use in March, and died on 24 Dec. 1871. Helped by the railway dog (police), by mute appeals, collected over £3,000 for the railway men's orphans fund.

The numbering of dogs in the metropolitan area, ordered by the police ceased, 31 Dec., 1876; a similar order made in 1887; ceased, 1 Dec., 1862, rabbits having greatly diminished. Increase of rabbits reported on 1 Feb., 1832; order for rabies ceased, 16 Feb., 1827; a new order, with special notice, 6 April, 1873; ceased 7 April, 1876. Report of committee of 10 April, 1876, presented Feb. 20, 1877.

DOMINGO, St., see Hayti and Dominican Republic.

DOMINICA (W. Indies), discovered by Columbus in his second voyage, on Sunday, 3 Nov. 1493. It was taken by the British in 1761, and confirmed to them by the Peace of Paris in 1763. The French took Dominica in 1778, but restored it at the subsequent peace in 1783. Their admiral Villeneuve ineffectually attacked it in 1805. It suffered great damage by a hurricane in 1866, and also 2-5 Sept. 1883. Failing prosperity; changes in the administration to be made, reported 5 Oct. 1864; imperial assistance accepted, July, 1889. Population, 1881, 28,211; 1901, about 28,894; 1910 (est.), 32,000. See Letterard Ishs. [President—Ramon Caceres, 1908.]

DOMINICAL LETTER, noting the Lord's day, or Sunday. The seven days of the week, reckoned as beginning on the 1 Jan., are designated by the first seven letters of the alphabet, A (1 Jan.), B, C, D, E, F, G; and the one of these which denotes Sunday is the Dominical letter. If the year begin on Sunday, A is the Dominical letter; if on Monday, G; on Tuesday, F; and so on, generally to find the Dominical letter call New Year's Day next b, and then the letter before until you come to the first Sunday, and the letter that answers to it is the Dominical letter; in leap years count two letters. The letters for 1893, A: 1894, G; 1895, F; 1896, E D; 1897, C; 1898, B; 1899, A; 1900, G; 1901, F; 1902, E; 1903, D; 1904, C B; 1905, A; 1906, G; 1907, F; 1908, E D; 1909, C; 1910, A; 1911, A. The letter of its number (figure of 1 for A, &c.) used in ancient charters.

DOMINOES, a game of great antiquity played with bone or ivory cards, on which pips are marked from double blank upwards to double twelve.

DONATISTS, an ancient strict sect, formed about 313-318, by an African bishop, Donatus, who was jealous of Cæcilian, bishop of Carthage; it became extinct in the 7th century. The Donatists held that the Father was above the Son, and the Son above the Holy Ghost. Their discipline was severe, and those who joined them were re-baptized.

DONAUWERTH (Bavaria), here the French and Bavarians were defeated by the duke of Marlborough, after a severe conflict, 2 July, 1704.

DONCASTER (Yorkshire), the Roman Donum, the Saxons Donum centrum. The races here (held annually in September) began about 1703; see Races. Population, 1901, 28,283; 1911 (est.), 31,759.

DON QUIXOTE, by saavedra Miguel de Cervantes (born 1547; died 1616). The first part of this work appeared in 1605, and the second part in 1608. It is said that upwards of 12,000 copies of the first part were circulated before the second was printed. Watts. First English translation, by Thomas Shelton, was published in 1612. Tercentenary of the publication of "Don Quixote" celebrated by the British academy, 25 June, 1915.

DOOM'S-DAY BOOK, see Domes-day Book.

DORADO, see El Dorado.
DORCHESTER (Oxfordshire) was once a bishopric, founded about 636. The first bishop Birinus, the apostle of the West Saxons (which see), was succeeded in 650 by Agilbert. In 659 the see was divided by the king. Dorchester remained with Agilbert, and was united to Winchester in 669, where it remained till 1640, when it was剥离 from the latter and united to the diocese of Lincoln. William Allen, afterwards cardinal. Dodd, For 335 years most English and Irish priests were trained here. The Benedictine monks, professors and students, were expelled from France 18 July 1633; the college transferred to St. Mary's Roman Catholic college at Wolverhampton.

DOVER, a river (separating Spain and Portugal), which, after a desperate struggle between Wellington's advanced guard under Hill, and the French under Soult, was successfully crossed by the former on 12 May, 1809. So sudden was the movement, that Wellington at 4 o'clock sat down to the dinner prepared for the French general. Alison.

DOVER, the Roman Dubris. Near here Julius Cesar is said to have first landed in England, 26 Aug., 55 B.C., and its original castle to have been built by him soon after; but this is disputed. The works were strengthened by Alfred and succeeding kings, and rebuilt by Henry II. See Tunnels and Cinque Ports. Population, 1901, 41,782; 1910 (est.) 50,759.

The priory was commenced by archbishop Corbyol, or Corboyl, about 1130. At Dover, John, bishop of Winchelsea, established a Dominican convent in 1292, and in the same year the architecture, the second of the five orders. The priory was commenced by archbishop Corbyol, or Corboyl, about 1130. At Dover, John, bishop of Winchelsea, established a Dominican convent in 1292, and in the same year, the whole.

DORCHESTER (Dorsetshire), the Roman Dunovana, the Saxon Dorcester. Here are found remains of a Roman theatre and of a British camp. Splendid specimen of villa pavement discovered, Aug. 1879. Here Jovellius held his "bloody assize" (after Monmouth's rebellion), 3 Sept. 1685. Much excitement was caused by six labourers of Dorchester being sentenced to transportation 17 March, 1834, for administering illegal oaths. Population, 1901, 10,418; 1910 (est.), 12,600.

DORIAN, Greeks, who claimed descent from Doros, son of Helicon; see Greece. The return of the Dorians, named Heracleides, to the Peloponnesus dated 1104 B.C. They sent out many colonies. To them we owe the Doric architecture, the second of the five orders.

DORKING, Surrey, an ancient town; the manor having been given by the Conqueror to Earl Fitzwarren. An imaginary battle of Dorking, in which the German invaders totally defeated the British army, was the subject of a clever incident, attributed to gen. sir George Cheyne, in Blackwood's Magazine for May, 1871. It provoked much controversy, and was the occasion of a series of pamphlets. Population, 1901, 12,699; 1910 (est.), 14,600.

DORMANS (N. E. France). The Huguenots and their allies, under Montmorency, were here defeated by the duke of Guise, to Oct. 1575.

DORT, or DORDRECHT, an ancient town in Holland. Here happened an inundation of the Meuse in 1421, through the breaking down of the dykes. In the territory of Dordrecht 10,000 persons perished; and more than 100,000 round Dollard, in Friesland, and in Zealand. The independence of the town was declared here in 1572, when William Prince of Orange was made stadtholder. A Protestant synod sat at Dort 13 Nov. 1618, to 25 May 1619; to which deputies were sent from England, and from the reformed churches in Europe, to settle the difference between the doctrines of Luther, Calvin, and Arminius, principally upon points of justification and grace. This synod condemned the tenets of Arminius. Population, 1900, 38,884; 1901, 45,725.

DORYLEUM (Phrygia). Solimán, the Turkish sultan of Ionium, having retired from the defence of Nicaea, his capital, was here defeated with great loss by the crusaders 1 July, 1097. Michaud.

DOUAY (N. France), the Roman Dunaenum, was taken from the Fleming, by Philip the Fair in 1297; restored to Charles I. 1358. It returned to Spain, from which it was taken by Louis XIV. 1667. It was captured by the duke of Marlborough in June, 1710; and retaken by the French 8 Sept. 1712. This town gives its name to the Roman Catholic English version of the Bible authorised by the pope, the text being explained by notes of Roman origin. The Old Testament was published by the English college at Douay in 1609; the New had been published at Rheims in 1582. The English college for Roman Catholics was founded in 1588 by DOVER, the Roman Dubris. Near here Julius Cesar is said to have first landed in England, 26 Aug., 55 B.C., and its original castle to have been built by him soon after; but this is disputed. The works were strengthened by Alfred and succeeding kings, and rebuilt by Henry II.

DOWNE, the gift of a husband to a wife before marriage (Genesis xxxiv. 12). The portion of a man's lands or tenements which his wife enjoys for life after her husband's death. By the law of England, a widow was entitled to a moiety of her husband's lands or tenements for her life, 941. The widows of traitors, but not those of felons, are debarred their dower by statute 5 Edw. VI. 1554. By the Dowry act passed in 1853, the power of the wife over her dower was much diminished.

DOWN (N. E. Ireland). An ancient see, first bishop St. Caillin, in 499. At the instance of John de Courcy, the conqueror of Ulster, the cathedral, consecrated to the Trinity, was re-dedicated to St. Patrick about 1183. The see of Down was united with that of Connor in 1441 (see Connor); and the see of Dromore was united to both the Irish Church and the Latin Church of Ireland, A.D. 1708-19. Will. IV. c. 37. Aug. 14, 1833. The cathedral of Downpatrick was destroyed by Lord Grey, lord deputy of Ireland; for this and other crimes he was impeached and beheaded in 1541. Beaton.

DOWNS. see Naval Battles, 1652-3.

DRAKE'S CIRCUMNAVIGATION. Sir Francis Drake sailed from Falmouth 13 Dec. 1577, circumnavigated the globe, and returned to England after many perils, 3 Nov. 1580. He was vice-admiral under lord Howard, high admiral of England, in the conflict with the Spanish Armada, 19 July, 1588. He died at Panama, 28 Jan. 1596, during an expedition against the Spaniards.

DRAKE'S LAW, see by whom archon of Athens, 621 B.C., on account of their severity, were said to be written in blood. Idleness was punished as severely as murder. This code was set aside by Solon's, 594 B.C.

DRAFTS (or cheques). In 1856, drafts crossed with a banker's name were made payable only to or through the same banker. This act was passed in consequence of a decision to the contrary in the case of Carlon v. Ireland, 12 Dec. 1855. In 1858 the crossing was made a material part of a cheque, but bankers are not held responsible when the crossing does not appear, and a penny-stamp was ordered to be affixed to drafts on bankers, commencing 25 May. In the case of Simmonds v. Taylor, May, 1858, it had been decided that the crossing formed no part of the draft. The crossing had been erased, and the money paid to the holder of the draft, who had stolen it.

The cheque-books, established for issuing drafts for limited amounts, opened 23 July, 1857; after many years' successful working it failed owing to extensive forgeries; in liquidation, 1892.

The crossing of a stolen draft crossed on one banker and presented by another banker declared legal; Smith v. Union Bank of London; verdict for defendants, 29 Nov. 1875. Crossed Cheques act passed, Aug. 15, 1876.

DRAINAGE OF LAND. In England, is of early date—remains of British works being still extant in the Fens district. Cornelius Vermuyden, the Dutch engineer, was invited to England in 1621, and amidst much opposition, he and his successors drained the districts termed the Fens and Levels; see Levels. In the last century great progress was made in drainage. In 1801 was passed an act to amend the laws relative to the drainage of land for agricultural purposes; see SEwers.

DRAPIO'S LAWS (enacted by him when archon of Athens, 621 B.C.), on account of their severity, were said to be written in blood. Idleness was punished as severely as murder. This code was set aside by Solon's, 594 B.C.

DRAVOON. A cavalry soldier originally with infantry arms but now armed with lance, sword and carbine; the name is of doubtful origin, the Roman Durocarios were horse soldiers, who bore dragons for ensigns. Charles de Cosse, Marshal of Brissac, instituted French dragons about 1600. The oldest British regiment, Scots Greys, enrolled in 1683.

DRAUGNADIES. The fierce persecution of the Protestants in the reign of Louis XIV. by dragging them to the stake or breaking them was com-summated by the revocation of Henry IV.'s edict of Nantes, 22 Oct. 1685, which drove 50,000 families from France. Duroy.

DRAINAGE OF LAND. In England, is of early date—remains of British works being still extant in the Fens district. Cornelius Vermuyden, the Dutch engineer, was invited to England in 1621, and amidst much opposition, he and his successors drained the districts termed the Fens and Levels; see Levels. In the last century great progress was made in drainage. In 1801 was passed an act to amend the laws relative to the drainage of land for agricultural purposes; see SEwers.
Drama

The high-class drama declined under the empereors till its extinction, when it had degenerated into gross buffoonery.

A first play at Placentia or Terence is annually performed at Westminster school in conformity with the statute of queen Elizabeth.

The modern drama, English, was gradually developed from the services of the church in the 15th and 16th centuries, and appeared in the form of miracle or mystery plays, based upon the bible history and legends of the saints. They were originally performed in churches and afterwards in market-places and open fields. The Coventry, Chester and other mysteries, published by the Shakespeare Society, in 1847-77. 21 July, 1832, at the Princess's theatre, by Messrs.
C. Dickens, Thackeray, C. Kean, B. Webster, and others. Mr. Henry Dodd's offer of land and money, with certain stipulations, was declined Jan. 1839.
The first stone of the buildings at Maybury, near Woking, was laid by the prince consort, 1 June, 1860; and on 29 Sept. 1862, seven annuities were installed. The central hall was opened by the prince of Wales, 5 June, 1865. The scheme was unsuccessful. On 12 Nov. 1877, it was determined to close the college, and provide for the inmates.
The buildings were sold by private contract about 23 July, 1879, by the Academy of dramatic art founded by Mr. H. Beerbohm Tree, 1904.

DRAUGHTS, a game resembling chess, played upon a checkered board divided in 64 black and white squares. Its origin is unknown. It was played in Europe in the 16th century. A game resembling draughts is depicted on the Egyptian monuments, and the Greeks and Romans played a similar game. Checkers is the common name for draughts in America, and in France it is called jeu des dames.

DRAWING SOCIETY (made Royal, 1892) of Great Britain, formed in July, 1888, to promote the teaching of drawing in schools. There are annual exhibitions.

DREADNOUGHT. In this ship, which was engaged in the battle of Trafalgar, 21 Oct. 1805, was established a hospital for the seamen of all nations (whose sovereigns are subscribers), by the Seamen's Hospital Society established 1827. The old vessel was replaced by others. The removal of the men to Greenwich hospital was proposed in 1867, collected, April, 1879. A new and exceptionally powerful type of battleship now was constructed by of the leading powers. First British Dreadnought launched by king Edward VII.
Portsmouth, 10 Feb. 1906. At the end of 1900,
Great Britain had 5 of these vessels completed, Germany 2, the United States 2, and Japan 1. It is estimated that at the end of 1912 Great Britain will have completed 20 Dreadnoughts, Germany 13, the United States 8, Japan 1, France 8, and Italy 2.

DREAMS are mentioned in Scripture, e.g., Joseph's and Pharaoh's, 1714 n.c. (Gen. xxxvii. and xii.), and Nebuchadnezzar's, 613 and 570 n.c., Usher (Daniel ii. and iv.), and were regarded as direct messages from the spiritual world. The first attempt to interpret dreams and omens is ascribed to Amphiemus of Athens,

Severe contests between the allied army under the prince of Schwarzenberg, and the French commanded by Ney. 26, 27 Aug. 1813.

The allies, 200,000 strong, attacked Napoleon in his position at Dresden, and the event had nearly proved fatal to them, but for an error in the contact of general Vandamme. If they were defeated with dreadful loss, and were obliged to retreat into Bohemia; but Vandamme pursuing them too far, his division was cut to pieces, and himself and all his staff made prisoners. In this battle, general Moreau received his mortal wound, while in conversation with the emperor of Russia 27 Aug.
1813.

Marshal St. Cyr, and 25,000 French troops, resigned Dresden to the allies.

During a political commotion the king abdicated, and prince Frederick, his nephew, was declared regent .

DRESS. The attire of the Hebrew women is censured in Isaiah iii., about 700 B.C. Excess in dress among the early Romans was restrained by sumptuary laws; and also in England by numerous statutes, in 1355, 1425, 1570, etc. (see Cap.).
Now F. W. Fairholt's "Costume in England" (1840) contains a history of dress with numerous illustrations derived from MSS., the works of Strutt, etc.
J. R. Planche's elaborate "Cyclopedia of Costume" first appeared in 1876. A "dress-making company" was established in London, 6 Feb. 1867, with the view of improving the condition of the workwomen.

Sir Walter Raleigh wore a white satin-pinked vest, covered with the wrist, and over the body a doublet finely flowered, and embroidered with pearls, and in the feather of his hat a large ruby and pearl drop at the bottom of the ring in place of a button. His breeches, with his stockings and ribbon garters, fringed at the end, all white; and buff shoes, which, on great court days, were so expensively costly, as to have exceeded the value of goods; and he had a suit of armour of solid silver, with sword and belt blazing with diamonds, rubies, and pearls.

King James's father, the last of the Stuarts, had his diamonds tucked so loosely on, that when he chose to shake a few off on the ground, he obtained all the fame declared to the pickers-up, who were generally les deux de la Cour.

The court dress of civilians, previously that of the time of the Georges, was modified by the lord chamberlain, lord Sydney, in 1804.

The Bloomer Costume, introduced into America in 1840, by Mrs. Amelia Jenks Bloomer, and worn there by many of the women. It resembled male attire, being an open-fronted jacket and loose trousers, the latter wide like those of the Turk, but gathered in at the ankles.
The Bloomer dress was adopted by a few females in the west of London, in August, 1851; but though recommended by some American ladies in popular lectures, it was soon totally discontinued. Mrs. Bloomer warmly advocated the enfranchisement of women and other important reforms. She was born at Homer,
New York, in 1813, and died at Council Bluffs, Iowa,
Dec. 1884.

Mr. Charles Worth, dressmaker, born at Bourne, Lincoln shire, in 1828; at the age of 20 went to Paris, and there established a business greatly influencing fashion;
he died in March, 1895.

DROWNING, an ancient punishment. The ancient Britons are said to have inflicted death by drowning in a quagmire. Stow. It is said to have been inflicted on eighty intractable bishops near Niohemia, a.d. 579; and to have been adopted as a punishment in France by Louis XI. The whole degradation of the gothic laws of the Romans in the portrait of the Loire at Nantes, by command of the brutal carrier, Nov. 1793, were termed Noyades, 94 priests were drowned at one time. He was condemned to death in Dec. 1794. Societies for the recovery of drowning persons were first instituted in Holland, in 1757. The second society is said to have been formed at Milan, in 1768, the third in Hamburg, in 1774, the first society in Paris, in 1775. The motto of the Royal Humane Society in England is: Latet scientiellae forsan—"A small spark may perhaps lie hid." DRURY-LANE THEATRE. DRUBLN.

The diminishing consumption of alcoholic liquors, thought to some extent attributable to the recent decline seen in trade, is principally the result of a continuous change in the habits of the people, which has been in progress for some time, and seems likely to be permanent." The foregoing is a statement of fact which has been the chief factor in causing the enormous reduction of over 9,000,000 gallons in the quantity of spirits consumed. Quantity of spirits consumed in the United Kingdom: 1925. 341,742,726 gals.; 1905, 311,000,000 gals.

See Book List.

DRURY-LANE THEATRE derives its origin from a cock-pit, which was converted into a theatre in the reign of James I. It was rebuilt and called the Phoenix; and Charles II. granted an exclusive patent to Thomas Killigrew, 25 April, 1662. The actors were called "the king's servants," and ten of them, called gentlemen of the great chamber, had an annual allowance of ten yards of scarlet claret, which seems to have been the source of spirit which has been the chief factor in causing the enormous reduction of over 9,000,000 gallons in the quantity of spirits consumed. Quantity of spirits consumed in the United Kingdom: 1925. 341,742,726 gals.; 1905, 311,000,000 gals.

DRUSEN, a people dwelling among the mountains of Lebanon, derive their origin from a fanatical Mahometan sect which arose in Egypt about 976, and fled to Palestine to avoid persecution. They now retain hardly any of the religion of their ancestors: they eat pork and drink wine, and do not practice circumcision, pray, or fast. In the middle of 1809, in consequence of disputes (in which it seems both parties were to blame), the Druses attacked their neighbours the Maronites (which see), whom they massacred, which was said, without regard to age or sex. Peace was made in July; but in the meantime a religious fury seized the Mahometan population of the neighbouring cities, and a general massacre of Christians ensued. Foul weather with Turkish troops, and general Happle with Mahometan troops, invaded Lebanon in Aug. and Sept. The Druses attacked their chief, Jan. 1891. See Drusen and Schier.

DUBLIN, an explosive substance (said to be from four to ten times more powerful than gunpowder), composed of varying proportions of cellulose (woody fibre), nitro-sulphur, nitro-ammonite, and nitro-cellosolve; invented by Carl Dütmar, a Prussian, and made known in 1870. This name is also given to another explosive compound, invented by Mr. Nobel, composed of ammonium and sawdust, acted on by nitro-sulphuric acid.

DULCISMO, a term applied to the equally-matched conflicting powers of good and evil in the Persian mythology, the Ormuzd and Ahirum of Zoroaster: it is also applied to the principles of the advocates for a separate government of Hungary under the emperor of Austria; effected in 1867.

DUBLIN, capital of Ireland, anciently called Ashkelon, said to have been built 1440. Auliana, daughter of Alpinus, a lord or chief among the Irish, having been drowned at the ford where now Whitworth-bridge is built, he changed the name to Auliana, by Ptolemy called Ebiana (afterwards corrupted into Dublana). Alpinus is said to have brought "the then rude hill into the form of a town," about 1557; see Ireland and Trinity Colleges. Dublin returns 4 M.P.'s by Act passed 25 June, 1855. DUBLIN, ARCHBISHOP OF. It is supposed that the bishopric of Dublin was founded by St. Patrick, in 448. Gregory, bishop in 1121, became archbishop in 1152. It was united to Glendalough in 1214. George Browne, an Augustinian friar of London (deprived by queen Mary in 1554), was the first Protestant archbishop. The two cathedrals, St. Patrick's, said to have been founded 1103, restored 1865; Christ Church, built about 1038, made a cathedral in 1241. The revenue was valued, in the king's books, 39 Henry VIIth, at 534/. 165. 26. Irish. Kihlare, on its last avoidance, was annexed to Dublin, 1856; recent protestant archbishops: Richard Whately, 1831, dies 8 Oct., 1850; Richard Chevevix Trench, Nov. 1853, resigns 28 Nov. 1883 (dies 28 March, 1886); Wm Conyngham, lord Plunket, 18 Dec., 1883, dies 1 April, 1897; succeeded by Dr. J. DUST. A controversy respecting the connection between dust and disease originated with a lecture on the subject by professor Tyndall at the Royal Institution, 21 Jan. 1870, when he demonstrated the presence of organic matters in the dust of the atmosphere in conformity with the experiments of Pasteur and other eminent philosophers. See Germ Theory and Airsick.

The agency of dust in producing pains and explosions was asserted by Faraday in relation to coal mines in 1845, and by Rankine and Macadam in relation to flour mills in 1872. Professor F. A. Abel's discourse on Some of the Dangerous Properties of Dusts, 28 April, 1882. Mr. Atkin's dust-counting apparatus was set up on Ben Nevis, Feb. 1890.

DUUMVIRI, two Roman patricians appointed by Tarquin the Proud 520 B.C. to take care of the books of the Sibyls, which were supposed to contain the fate of the Roman empire. The books were placed in the Capitol, and secured in a chest under the ground. The number of keepers was increased to ten (the Decemviri) 365 B.C., afterwards to fifteen, the added five called quinque viri.

DWARFS, OR PYGMIES, is described by several ancient classical writers. Herodotus gives an account of pygmies living in Libya and the Syrte, to which Aristotle and Pliny also refer.

Mr. H. M. Stanley (afterwards sir), in his journey across Africa in 1888, came upon a dwarfish race, which he thought might be descended from that mentioned by Herodotus, Mr. Arthur B. Lloyd crosses the great pygmy forest and descends the Aroumwi to the Congo in 1898. "The Land of the Pygmies," by Capt. Guy Burrows, published Jan. 1899. Philetas of Cos, distinguished about 330 B.C. as a poet and grammarian, was justly said to have carried weights to prevent his being blown away. He was preceptor to Polyeun Philadelphus, Euthiam, Julia, niece of Augustus, had a dwarf named two feet, and a hand's breadth high; and Andromeda, a freed-maid of Julia's, was of the same height.

Modern Dwarf. John d'Estreux, of Mechlin, was brought to the duke of Parma, in 1592, when he was 35 years of age, having a long beard. He was skilled in languages, and not more than three feet high. Geoffrey Hudson, an English dwarf, when a youth of 18 inches high, was served up to table in a cold pie, before the king and queen, by the duchess of Buckingham, in rich gold charger. Charles Crofts, Cheshire dwarf, but the latter came armed with a squirt. At another meeting the dwarf shot his antagonist dead, 1653.

Count Borowski, a Polish gentleman, of great accomplishments and elegant manners, well known in England, where he resided for many years, was born in Nov. 1739. His growth was at one year of age, 14 in. at six; 21 inches at twenty; 31 inches at thirty; 39. He had a sister, named Anastasia, seven years younger than himself, and so much shorter that she could stand under his arm. He visited many of the courts of Europe and died in England in 1837.

Charles Heywood Stratton (termed general Tom Thumb), an American, was exhibited in England, by Mr. P. T. Barnum, 1846. In Feb. 1864, in New York, when 25 years old, 32 inches high, he married Lavina Warren, aged 21, 32 inches high. He, his wife and child, and commode Nutt, another dwarf, came to England in Dec. 1864, and remained here some time.

Johnson, 21 July, 1884.

Mr. Collard, aged 22, smaller than Stratton, sung at concerts in London, and was termed the "Pocket Sins Reeves," May, 1873.

Several dwarfs (said to be smaller than the preceding) exhibited at the Westminster Aquarium, July, 1879.

Che-mah, a Chinese, 42 years old, 25 inches high, exhibited at the Westminster Aquarium, 15 June, 1883.

Lucia Zanite, born 2 Jan. 1859, in Mexico, weighing 4 lbs., and general Mite, Francis Joseph Flynn, born 2 Oct. 1864, in New York State, height 21 inches, weight 9 lbs., were both exhibited in Piccadilly, 22 Nov. 1880. Try, Milly Edwards exhibited in London, July, 1882, 15 years of age, weighing 7 lbs.; Miss Edwards and general Mite were married at Manchester, 25 May, 1884.

"Princess Topaze," of French parentage, born at Buenes Ayres, stated to be 16 years old, to weigh 15 lbs., height 20 inches, with symmetrical proportions, exhibited at the Westminster Aquarium, 30 Jan. 1893.

Six specimens of the negritos, or dwarf negroes (rediscovered by Stanley in the forests of the Congo tributaries), a dwarf negroes, from 18 to 20 years of age, height the tallest 5 ft., of the shortest 7 ft., brought from the Ituri forest in the Congo Free State by Mr. Jas. Harrison, were exhibited at the Hippodrome, London, 5 June, 1895.

Tiny Town, exhibition of a number of dwarfs opened at Earl's Court . . . . 26 Dec. 1899.

DYEING is attributed to the Tyrians, about 1500 B.C. The English are said to have sent fine goods to be dyed in Holland, till the art was brought to them probably by dyers of Exeter who were duggled for teaching their art "in the north" (of England), 1628. A statute against abuses in dyeing passed in 1783. The art has been greatly improved by chemical research. A discovery of Dr. Stenhouse in 1828 led to M. Marnas procuring mauve from lichens; and Dr. Hofmann's production of aniline from coal-tar, led to the invention of a number of beautiful dyes (violet, magenta, red, green, black, &c.; see Aniline).

DYNAMICS is the science which treats of matter and motion, substituted for the term "mechanics," which see.

DYNAMITE. An explosive compound, consisting of 25 parts of silicious earth saturated with 75 parts of nitro-glycerine (which see). It is suitable for mining purposes, and was tried and approved at Morstham 14 July, 1868. It was invented by Alfred Nobel. Its manufacture is very important. Mr. Nobel died, 10 Dec. 1896, and bequeathed a fund of about £344,000 to promote science. A preparation of nitroglycerine was invented by Herr von Dahmen, who by the addition of a simple substance renders dynamite uncon-geantable, thus avoiding the danger of thawing in cold weather, 1880. Dynamite which cannot be frozen, invented by Herr Edward Liebert, of Berlin (very important, many deaths having been caused by thawing frozen dynamite), reported Aug. 1890. See New York, 28 Dec. 1892; Cannon, 1891; and Nobel Request.

Snyder dynamite projectile; experiments at Aberdar, S. Wales; British and foreign officers present; reported fairly successful 5 Oct. 1894.

Thirteen men killed by explosion of dynamite in a railway tunnel at Cynnam, S. Wales, 27 April 1876.

A man named Thomson, Thomasin, or Thomas, consigned a case of dynamite to Bromenheaven, to be conveyed by the North German Lloyd steamer Mont. With it he sent a clock-work machine, which would in eight days give the case a blow powerful enough to explode the dynamite and destroy the ship. From some cause the machine went wrong, and exploded in the dock, killing above 80 and wounding about 200 persons, chiefly emigrants and their friends, 11 Dec. 1875. Thomson committed suicide, dying Dec. 1875, after confessing his crime, his object being to obtain the paltry sum for which he had insured his goods.

Use of dynamite for killing oxen tried and advocated, summer, 1877.

Its use in fisheries prohibited by parliament, 14 Aug. 1877.

DZOUNGARIA, a region of Central Asia, N. of China, with about 2,000,000 inhabitants, fierce, warlike Mahometans. After being long tributary to China, they rebelled in 1864, massacred the Chinese residents, and set up their countryman Abel Oghlan as sultan. As he was unable to restrain predatory attacks upon the Russians, the czar declared war in April, 1871. After a brief campaign in May and June, and several conflicts in which the Russians were victors, the sultan surrendered to general Kolpakowski, 4 July, and the country was annexed to the Russian empire.
EAGLE, an ancient coin of Ireland, made of a base metal, and current in the first years of Edward I. about 1272, was so named from the figure impressed upon it. The American gold coinage of eagles, half eagles, and quarter eagles, began 6 Dec. 1792; an eagle is of the value of 10 dollars, or about 2£.—The standard of the eagle was borne by the Persians, at Cunaxa, 401 B.C. The Romans carried gold and silver eagles as ensigns, and sometimes represented them with a thunderbolt in their talons, on the point of a spear.102 B.C. Charlemagne added the second head to the eagle for his arms, to denote that the empires of Rome and Germany were united in him, A.D. 802. The eagle was the standard of Napoleon I. and Napoleon III.; as well as those of Austria, Russia, and Prussia; see Knighthood.

EARL (Latin, comes), introduced at the conquest, superseded the Saxon ealdorman, and continued the highest rank in England, until Edward III. created dukes in 1337, and 1351, and Richard II. created marquises (1385), both above earls. Alfred used the title of earl as a substitute for king. William Fitz-Osborn was made earl of Hereford by William the Conqueror, 1066. Gilchrist was created earl of Angus, in Scotland, by King Malcolm III. in 1057; and Sir John de Courcy created Lord of Ulster and earl of Ulster in Ireland, by Henry II. 1151.

Earl Marshal of England, the eighth great officer of state. This office, until it was made hereditary, always passed by grant from the king. Gilbert de Clare was created lord marshal by King Stephen, 1135. The last lord marshal was John Fitz-Alan, lord Maltravers. Cawden. Richard II. in 1392 granted letters patent to the earl of Nottingham by the style of earl marshal. In 1672, Charles II. granted to Henry lord Howard the dignity of hereditary earl marshal. The earl marshal's court was abolished in 1641. (See Howard.)

Earl Marshal of Scotland was an officer who commanded the cavalry, whereas the constable commanded the whole army; but they seem to have had a joint command, as all orders were addressed to "our constable and marshal." The office was never out of the Keith family. It was reserved at the Union, and when the hereditary jurisdictions were bought, it reverted to the crown, being forfeited by the rebellion of George Keith, earl marshal, in 1715.

EARLY CLOSING ASSOCIATION was established 1812, to abridge the hours of labour, and to abolish Sunday trading.

EARTHQUAKES. Kircher, Des Cartes, and others supposed that there were many vast cavities under ground which have a communication with each other, some of which abound with water, others with exhalations, arising from inflammable substances, as nitre, bitumen, sulphur, &c. Dr. Stukeley and Dr. Priestley attributed earthquakes to electricity. They are probably due to steam generated by subterranean heat. An elaborate Catalogue of earthquakes (from B.C. 6606 to A.D. 1822), with decompositions on the phenomena, by R. and J. W. Mallet, was published by the British Association in 1858. In 1860 the velocity of their propagation was estimated by Mr. J. Brown at between 700 and 530 feet per second. Prof. John Milne, at the Royal Institution, London, 12 Feb. 1897, described his important researches in seismology, with special reference to Japan; his "Seismology" published Nov. 1898. See Seismometer.

EASTER, instituted about 68, the festival observed by the church in commemoration of Our Saviour's resurrection, so called in England from the Saxon goddess Eastre, whose festival was in April. There was much disputing in the early church as to whether Easter should be kept at the time of the Paschal full moon (the Jewish passover) or on the following Sunday. The council of Nice, 325, decided that it should always be kept on the Sunday, and those who kept it on the passover (the fourteenth day of the month) were afterwards called Quartodecimans. The Paschal full moon (that following the vernal equinox) was determined by the matonic cycle of 19 years. But the date of the equinox changed so much that the Easter calendar year was a little longer than the true year. In 1582 Pope Gregory XIII. altered this calendar, and the Gregorian rule was gradually adopted throughout the western church. But the Greek church or eastern church adhered to the old style of the calendar, and therefore their Easter is usually on a different day from that of the western church. In 1906 it fell actually though not nominally on the same day, because their April 2 corresponded to our April 15. "Easter-day is the Sunday following that fourteenth day of the calendar month which happens upon or next after the 21st March: so that, if the said fourteenth day be a Sunday, Easter-day is not that Sunday but the next." Easter-day may be any day in the five weeks from March 22 and end with April 25. Easter Sunday, 1908, 19 April; 1909, 11 April; 1910, 27 March; 1911, 16 April.

EASTER ISLAND, in the Pacific Ocean, was discovered by Davis in 1686; it was visited by Roggeveen, April 1722, and from him obtained the name it now bears; it was visited by captain Cook, March 1774. EVELIANS, a German revivalist sect, which began at Konigsberg in Prussia, about 1835, its leaders being archdeacon Eb ed and Dr. Diestel, who were tried and condemned for unsound doctrine and impure lives in 1837. The sentence was annulled in 1842, it is said by royal influence. The sect is popularly termed "Mucker," German for hypocrites.

EBIONITES, heretics, in the 1st century, a branch of the Nazarenes, were of two kinds: one believed that Our Saviour was born of a virgin, observed all the precepts of the Christian religion, but added the ceremonies of the Jews; the other believed that Christ was born after the manner of all mankind, and denied his divinity. Photinus revived the sect in 312.

ECRATANA. capital of Media; the date of foundation is unknown; Herodotus ascribes it to Diceses about 700 B.C.; it was taken by Cyrus 539, and became the summer residence of himself and his successors.

"ECCE HOMO."—"Behold the man" (John xix. 5). A study of the human character of Jesus Christ (the supernatural element being excluded), a work of much spiritual reverence and literary excellence. It was published anonymously in 1863, and caused great excitement; the authorship was attributed to many eminent persons, but eventually assigned to Prof. John Robert Seeley, without his contradiction. He was made Regius professor of modern history at Cambridge in 1869, and K.C.M.G. in 1891; born 1834; died 13 Jan. 1895.

ECCELESTIAL ASSESSMENTS. (Scotland) act passed, 1860.

ECCELESTIAL COMMISSIONS: appointed by queen Elizabeth, 1559; by James I. in 1617; by the English parliament in 1641; and by James II. to coerce the universities in 1687. A Church Inquiry Commission, appointed 23 June, 1832, reported June, 1835. The present Ecclesiastical Commissioners (bishops, dean, and Laymen), for the management of church property, were appointed in Feb. 1855; incorporated in 1865, and their present proceedings regulated in 1868 and 1874. The law relating to them was amended in 1868, and annual reports issued. Since 1830 (when the common fund was first created) the commissioners have augmented and endowed over 5,000 benefices by annual grants, capital sums, lands, &c., equivalent to a capital sum of about 32,188,000/. for year ended 31 Oct. 1902.

Fifty-eighth annual report, presented to parliament, shows total income for the year ended 31 Oct. 1910, £268,545 15s. 6d.; expenditure, £261,001 16s. 9d.; appropriation for current year, for the endowing and augmentation of benefices, to be increased from £25,000 to £50,000. 2 March, 1906.

ECCELESTIAL COURTS. There existed no distinction between lay and ecclesiastical courts in England until 1685; after the Norman conquest; see Archdeaconry and Consistory Courts. Till the establishment of the Divorce and Probate courts (which see) in 1857, the following were the causes cognizable in ecclesiastical courts: blasphemy, apostasy from Christianity, heresy, schism, ordinations, institutions to benefices, imprisonments, divorces, bastardy, tithes, invest, ordination, alimony, probate of wills, administrations, &c.

A royal commission of inquiry respecting these courts agreed to, house of lords: 7 March, 1781, appointed. Report issued, Aug. 1781.

ECCELESTIAL DILAPIDATIONS. law respecting, amended by acts passed in 1871 and 1872.

ECCELESTIAL GAZETTE. Church of England semi-official journal; sent gratuitously to all dignitaries and incumbents; established 10 July, 1858.

ECHO. The time which elapses between the utterance of a sound and its return must be more than one-twelfth of a second, to form an echo. The whispering gallery of St. Paul's is a well-known example. The Echo, independent evening paper, price 1d., estd. Dec. 1868, ceased 1605.

ECKMUIIIH, (Bavaria), the site of a battle between the main armies of France (75,000) and Austria (39,000); Napoleon and marshsl Davout (hence prince d'Eckmuhl) defeated the archduke Charles, 22 April, 1809.

ECLECTICS (from Greek, ekleko, I choose), ancient philosophers (called Analogiッチci, and also Philalethes, the lovers of truth, who, without attaching themselves to any sect, chose what they judged good from each: of them was Potammon of Alexandria, about A.D. 1. Also a Christian sect, who considered the doctrine of Plato conformable to the spirit of Christianity.

ECLIPSES. Their revolution was calculated by Calippus, the Athenian, 356 B.C. The Egyptians said they had accurately observed 573 eclipses of the sun, and 352 of the moon; in the period from Vulcan to Alexander, who died 323 B.C. The theory of eclipses is said to have been known to the Chinese before 120 B.C.; they record an eclipse 770 B.C. The first eclipse recorded in history happened 19 March, 721 B.C. at 8h. 40m. P.M., according to Ulfoteo; it was lunar, and was observed with accuracy at Babylon. See Sun.

A list of eclipses to the year 2000 is given in "L'Art de Pr€timer les Butes."

The Royal Astronomical Society published a volume of "Observations made during total solar eclipses, 1858-1882."

ECLIPSES OF THE SUN. Eclipse recorded in the Assyrian tablets. B.C. 1663.

The Nineveh eclipse (recorded, according to sir Henry Rawlinson, on a Nineveh tablet in the British Museum); see Sun, 1963. At the battle of Stuckstal.

That predicted by Thales: see Huidge (Pliny, lib. ii. 9), believed to have occurred. 28 May, 584 B.C. [Sir G. B. Airy thinks the date should be 600; others say 824 B.C.] It is the one recorded by Herodotus as interrupting a battle between the Medes and Lydians.

The albed eclipses at the time of Xerxes' expedition against Greece 480 B.C. It was dark, and the darkness was probably meteorological.

ECLIPSES.

Total eclipse of the sun of the longest possible duration (the Royal Society provided means for its observation in India, by col. Walker, Mr. Herschel, and others in 1868 at Nov. 19).

During the solar eclipse, 18 Aug. 1868, as observed in India, M. Janssen invented a method of studying the corona of the sun at any time, by employing several spectrosopes, whereby the spectrum is lengthened and the dazzling brilliance diminished. Mr. (aft. sir) Joseph Norman Lockyer had suggested a similar method of observation in 1866, but did not use it until Oct. 1868, being then not aware of M. Janssen's discovery.

The solar eclipse well observed in North America, 3 July, 1869.

Two expeditions to observe the solar eclipse of 22 Dec. 1870, sent out by the British government, were unsuccessful.

ECOLE POLYTECHNIQUE, a military academy at Paris, established in 1794, and reorganised and given its present name on 1 Sept. 1795. The "Journal" (which began in 1795) contains profound mathematical papers. The school was reorganised 4 Sept. 1816. The pupils helped to defend Paris in 1814 and 1830. Centenary festival, 17, 18, 19 May, 1894.

ECONOMIC MUSEUM (or Museum of Domestic and Sanitary Economy), at Twickenham, open free, was established chiefly by the agency of Mr. Thos. S. Wilson, in 1802. It originated from the Paris exhibition of 1855. Economic Review, No. 1, published Jan. 1891.

ECONOMIST, London weekly journal, devoted to financial matters, first appeared 2 Sept. 1843.

ECONOMISTES, a philosophical sect, founded by Francois Quesnay, 1744-1774, who extricated agriculture above all other arts; he asserted that it gave two things, the support of the labourer and an excess of value which belonged to the proprietor of the land ("product net"), and which alone should be taxed. He also favoured great freedom for industry and trade. His "Physiocrate" (1768) and other works were at the time very popular, even at court, and are said to have influenced Adam Smith, author of "The Wealth of Nations."

ECONOMY, see Political Economy and Societies, 1892.

The British Association for the Advancement of Economic Knowledge was founded in 1838 by Mr. (aft. visct.) G. J. Goulston elected first president, 23 Nov. 1838, a quarterly journal was founded.

ECORCHEURS (Players), bands of armed adventurers who desolated France and Belgium during the 15th century, beginning about 1445. Amongst their leaders were Chabannes, comte de Dammartin, the bastard of Armagnac, and Vil-LANDRAS; and they at one time numbered 100,000. They are said to have stripped their victims to their shirts, and flayed the cattle. They were favoured by the English invasion and the civil wars.

ECRASITE, an explosive invented by Siersch and Kubin, Austrian engineers, impervious to damp, shock, or fire, Oct. 1886.

ECUADOR, see Equator.

EDDAS (thought formerly to mean Oldendower, or "mother of the earth," by others "mother of the sea")—two books of songs and sagas (prose and verse) containing the Scandinavian mythology (or history of Odin, Thor, Frea, &c.), written by skalds or bards about the 10th, 11th or 12th centuries. Translations have been made into French, English, &c. MSS. of the Eddas exist at Copenhagen and Upsal.

EDDYSTONE (or EDSTONE) LIGHTHOUSE, off the port of Plymouth, erected by the Trinity House to enable ships to avoid the Eddystone rock. The first lighthouse was commenced under Mr. Winstanley, in 1690; finished in 1699; and destroyed in the dreadful tempest of Dec. 1703, when Mr. Winstanley and others perished. A wooden one, by Rukeyser, was built by order of parliament, and all ships were ordered to pay one penny per ton towards and outwards towards supporting it. 1708. This lighthouse was burnt 3 Dec. 1755, and one on a better plan, erected by Mr. Smouten, finished 9 Oct. 1759. The woodwork of the latter burnt in 1770, was replaced by stone. The foundation having given way, a new one was designed by Mr. Capt. Sir James N. Duglass, engineer of the Trinity House. The foundation-stone was laid by the duke of Edinburgh in the presence of the prince of Wales, June, 1783. The centre stone was placed by the duke on 1 June, 1784. Successfully lit 3 Feb. 1785; opened by the duke, 26 May, 1785. Smouten's lighthouse memorial tower erected at Plymouth, founded by duke of Edinburgh, 20 Oct. 1830; inaugurated, 24 Sept. 1834.

EDEN, ship burnt; see Wrecks, 1873.

EDESSA (now Ortha), a town in Mesopotamia, said by some to have been built by Ninus; by Appian, to have been built by Seleucus. It became famous for its schools of theology in the 5th century. It was made a principality by the crusaders, and was taken by the Saracens, 1145, by Nour-ed-din, in 1171; and the Turks in 1184. Its ancient kings or rulers were named Abgarus and Manous.

EDGEHILL, FIGHT (23 Oct. 1642). Warwickshire, between the regiments under Prince Rupert and the parliament army under the earl of Essex, was the first important engagement in the civil war. Charles I. was present, and the earl of Lindsay, who headed the royal foot, was mortally wounded. The king lost 5,000 dead. The action was decisive, though the parliament claimed the victory.

EDICT OF NANTES, by which Henry IV. of France granted toleration to his protestant subjects, 13 April, 1598, was confirmed by Louis XIII., in 1610, and by Louis XIV. in 1682. It was revoked by Louis XIV., 22 Oct. 1685. This act cost France 50,000 Protestant families, and gave to England and Germany thousands of industrious artisans. It also caused a fierce insurrection in Languedoc. See Camarsay. Some of the refugees settled in Spitalfields, where their descendants yet remain; others settled in Soho and St. Giles's, and pursued the art of making crystal glasses, and carried on the silk manufacture and jewellery, then little understood in England.

EDICTS, public ordinances and decrees, usually set forth by sovereigns; originated with the Romans. The "Perpetual Edict": Salvius Julianus, of Milan, a civilian at Rome (author of several treatises on public right), was employed by the emperor Adrian to draw up this body of laws for the praetors, promulged 132.

EDINBURGH, the metropolis of Scotland, derives its name—in ancient records Edinbare and imm Edin, "the hill of Edin"—from its castle, founded or rebuilt by Edwin, king of Northumbria, who, having greatly extended his dominions, erected it for the protection of his newly acquired territories from the incursions of the Scots and Picts, 626. But it is said the castle was first built by Camelon, king of the Picts, 330 B.C. It makes a conspicuous appearance, standing on a rock 300 feet high at the west end of the old town, and, before the use of great guns, was a formidable object. Edinburgh returns 4 M.L.'s by act passed 25 June, 1885; "Municipal Edinburgh" (historical and official), published June, 1895. Population 1914, 331,977; 1910 (est.), 356,213.

EDUCATION. the art of developing the physical, intellectual, and moral faculties of man, has occupied the greatest minds in all ages: Socrates, Plato, Aristotle, Bacon, Milton, Locke, Rousseau, &c. In England the earliest schools for the lower classes were those attached to the monasteries; for the higher classes halls and colleges were gradually founded; see Arts, Colleges, Schools, Oxford, Cambridge, Endowed Schools, Ascham Society, Technical and Physical Education, &c.

William of Wykeham planted the school at Winchester, whence arose his colleges at that place and Oxford in 1371.

Eton college founded by Henry VI. in 1440.

After the reformation, education was greatly promoted, and many grammar schools were erected and endowed by Edward VI. and Elizabeth. 1535-67.

Christ’s hospital, the bluecoat school, established 1539.

Westminster school founded by Elizabeth in 1550.

Foundation of Rugby school by Lawrence Sheriff, 1856; 1 of Harrow school by John Lyon, 1857.

The Charterhouse founded by Thomas Sutton in 1611. Many charity schools founded in opposition to nonconformity about 1687.

Parish schools appointed by the parliament of Scotland in 1697.

Queen Anne, a zealous friend of education, founded the Westminster school, Hackney school, and completely supported parochial charity schools (one established at St. Margaret’s, Westminster, 1688).

Nearly 2,000 of these schools existed in Great Britain in 1762, and by the instrumentality of the society for the promotion of Christian knowledge in 1689-1741.

Robert Raikes set up Sunday schools about 1781.

In 1793 there were 16,528 of these schools, with 1,548,890 scholars.

Joseph Lancaster, a young Quaker, began to instruct the children of the poor in 1789.

He had go schools before he was 18 years old, and 1,000 pupils in 1798.

National education greatly promoted in the French empire by Napoleon, ably assisted by M. Cuvier, the eminent naturalist in 1802 &c.

Sunday School Union formed in 1802.

To provide teachers, Lancaster invented the maternal system. In consequence of his exertions the first British and Foreign school society was founded with the name of the “Royal Lancasterian Institution,” &c. in 1803.

This, being unexcessive, was followed by the institution of the church of England National Society for Educating the Poor, on Dr. Bell’s system in 1811.

Infant schools began about 1815.

The Charity commission, appointed at the instance of Mr. (afterwards lord) Brougham, published their reports on education, in 37 volumes folio, 1819-49.

Irish national school system (to accommodate both Roman Catholics and Protestants) organized mainly by archbishop Whately and the Roman Catholic archbishop Murray.

City of London school, Honey-lane, opened in 1831.

The Home and Colonial School Society was instituted in 1836.

In 1834, the government began annual grants (the first $1,000), which continued till the committee of the Privy Council on education was constituted for the distribution of the money in 1839.

The Voluntary School Society and the Congregational Board of Education formed in 1843.

Ragged School Establishment in 1844.

Educational Times, monthly, established Oct. 1847.

Out of a population of 17,927,690, there were 2,466,481 children in 1851.

A great educational conference took place at Willis’s rooms, the prince consort in the chair, 22-24 June, 1857.

The Industrial schools act passed in 1858.

Middle class examinations for entrance to the university of Oxford began, June, 1858. The examiners granted the degree of A.A. to many persons at Liverpool, Leeds, &c.; similar examinations from Cambridge took place in the autumn, and are to be continued.

Four establishments for international education in England, France, Germany, and Italy proposed; the idea is attributed to Mr. Cobden and M. Michel Chevalier.

Report of commissioners on popular education (appointed 1853), published 18 March, 1856, led to the minute of the committee of the Privy Council on education, establishing a revised code of regulations; Mr. Lowe’s, adopted 21 July, 1864, to come into operation, after 31 March, 1865. It decreed regular examinations of the pupils by results, evening schools for adults, and other changes, which raised a storm of opposition from the clergy and school masters. The subject was much discussed in parliament, &c.; but eventually a compromise was effected, 5 May, 1866.

Official instructions for the administration of the revised code issued, 1866-7.

“Conscience clause,” founded on the Endowed Schools act, March, 1866, introduced by the committee of the Privy Council on education for parishes where only one school is required. It provided for the admission of children of dissenters, who were to be taught by “ambulatory” teachers. Jan. 1865.

Parliamentary committee appointed to inquire into the best mode of benefiting schools unassisted by the state. 28 Feb.

Training ship established for homeless boys of London; 50 boys placed there by Boys’ Refuge committee. See Child-Bridge.

Foundation of the London College of the International Education Society laid by the prince of Wales, 10 July, 1866.

Committee appointed a meeting for establishment of higher schools for middle classes in London, by means of funds of lapsed charities, &c., 7 Nov.; nearly 25,000l. subscribed by end of Dec. 1865; 21,345l. received in 1866.

The subscribers incorporated by charter; their first school opened by lord mayor and others in Bath-street, St. Lakes, 1866; great prosperity reported at annual meeting 18 Feb.

Resolutions moved in the lords by earl Russell (asserting that every child has a right to education, and recommending an appointment of a board of education [the minister of education], withdrawn 2 Dec. in 1867.

Completion of light railways (2 yrs.) granted from English company, 20 March.

The British (nativa court) abolished, and other reforms made. Reported. 15 May.

Important legal reforms passed by the council. 22 Nov.

Surplus revenue for 1895, £1,152,000, reported, 2 Feb. 1897.

Foundation stone of the new museum at Cairo laid by the khedive, 3 April.

Medals presented at Cairo to British officers and men of the Dongola expedition. 1 May.

Sir Francis Grenfell takes command of the army of occupation, Cairo. 26 March.

Return of the national penal code. 1 Dec.

Horticultural and agricultural exhibition opened by the khedive at Cairo, 11 Jan. 1898.

Contract 5 years concluded with Messrs. John Aird & Co. for the construction of dams across the Nile at Assam and Assuit, about 23 Feb.

Grants to the government from the general reserve fund, 500,000£, 1 March.

Receipts, £11,000,000; expenditure, £10,559,257 £; for year ending 31 Dec. 1897.

Foundation stone of the native palace of justice at Cairo laid. 14 March.

Sir J. Scott, judicial adviser 1862, 5, decorated by the khedive on his retirement, 12 April.

Inforections as to the future of the mixed tribunals meet at Cairo. 1 Dec.

Prince Ahmed-Salim sentenced to 8 years imprisonment for attempting to murder Prince Feisal. 1 Dec. 1897.

Sir Elwin Palmer appointed governor of the national bank of Egypt (reputed to be £10,000,000). 11 July.

An English bond of education formed at Cairo. 1 Dec.

Major-General, the late R. A. J. Talled commander of the troops in Egypt, viz: Sir Henry Wigram, chief of the Egyptian army, appointed. 1 Dec.

Nubar Pasha, ex-emier, aide-de-camp, see Cope, publication, an Armenian Christian, born 1855, died in Paris in 1897. 11 Jan. 1899.

Sudan convention signed at Cairo. 10 Jan.

The duke of Connaught lays the foundation stone of the Nile reservoir dam at Assam, 12 Feb.; gives sel. and ad. on the site of the English church of St. Mark. 1 Dec.

Despatch reporting the court of appeal, May.

Return of the Ganz-Cairo cotton manufacture. Actual progress made is capable of appended and multi. 1 June.

Sir W. E. Garstin's report suggesting improvement of the Nile channel, issued. 22 June.

International commission of judicial reform, 1898.

Sir G. G. Rogers, head of the sanitary department, died, 17 July, 1897.

Sir John Garst's notion the budget for 1899, states that the revenue is estimated at £14,377,000 and the expenditure, including payments to the sinking fund of the loan, to conversion and reserve fund, £11,795,000; real surplus will amount to £2,582,000. Various schemes proposed for reduction of land tax and irrigation works, reported. 1 Jan. 1899.

Anglo-French agreement (pith, 20) represents Great Britain's predominant position in Egypt. Signed. 8 April.

Report of Sir W. Garst in, under-secretary of state for public works, with departmental despatch from lord Gurney, upon the basin of the Upper Nile, and control of its waters for irrigation by a new canal 200 miles long for the White Nile, or by an alternative scheme by training the Bahri-Ed-Dahab, and the volume of the White Nile at Khartoum; other schemes, including the regulation of the Blue Nile and the river Gash, issued. 6 Aug.

My dear, sultan of Darfur, reported to be actively cooperating with the Soudan government in suppressing the slave trade within his province, 29 July.

Budget for 1899; estimated revenue £12,725,000; and surplus of £5,600,000; probable expenditure £11,755,000. 1 Dec.

*By the proposed scheme, sir W. Garst estimates 19,000,000 acres in the Soudan would be brought under cultivation, and 75,000,000 of land in Egypt converted from basin into perennial irrigation, and £50,000 additional acres brought under cultivation. Estimated cost £14,500,000; £3,790,000 in the Soudan, £3,790,000 in Egypt.
In the budget for 1907, the revenue is set down at £14,740,000, and the expenditure £14,290,000, leaving a surplus of £450,000, announced 29 Nov., 1906.

National assembly in Cairo carries resolutions demanding the creation of a municipality for Egypt and the use of Arabic as the sole means of instruction in all government schools, 3 March, 1907.

Council of ministers decide to raise the Assuan dam so as to raise the level of the water by 23 ft., thus enabling a million acres more of land to be irrigated; estimated cost of the work, £1,500,000, 21 March.

Duke of Connaught holds a review of the British troops at Cairo garrison at Abbassiah, 2 April.

Lord Cromer's report, embodying his proposals for modifying the capitulations, published in the Times, 5 April.

Resignation of Lord Cromer published; Sir Eldon Gorst appointed to succeed him, 11 April.

Arrival of Sir Eldon and Lady Gorst in Cairo, 24 April.

Lord Cromer leaves Cairo for Port Said on his way to London, 6 May.

Census returns show population of Egypt to be 14,206,559, an increase of nearly 1,500,000 since 1897, 3 May.

Death of Sir Benj. Baker, consulting engineer of the Assuan dam, 16 May.

New pass into Alexandria harbour, 35 ft. deep and 600 ft. wide, and costing £100,000, formally opened, 30 Dec., 1906.

The Kishlak bridges opened, 6 Feb., 1908.

Mustapha Kamel, leader of the nationalist party, dies in Cairo, 19 Feb., 1907.

Receipts of the Egyptian government, in 1907, amount to £16,575,321, and expenditure to £14,280,143, showing surplus of £2,295,178, 7 Feb., 1908.

Sir William Garstin, late adviser to the Egyptian ministry of public works, leaves Egypt on his retirement, 20 April.

Death of Kassim Bey Amin, judge of the native court of appeal, aged 54, 26 April.

Sir Eldon Gorst's report on Egypt issued, 4 May.

New ministry formed with Boutros Pasha as premier and minister for foreign affairs, 12 Nov., 1907.

New Nile barrage opened at Esna by the Khedive, 9 Feb., 1907.

New buildings of the Victoria college at Alexandria opened by the duke of Connaught, 27 March.

Death of M. Raphael Sanz, born 1846, literary director at Alexandria, about 14 May, 1907.

Budget for 1910—receipts estimated £15,500,000, and expenditure £15,150,000, showing an estimated surplus of £350,000.

The Khedive, on his return from Mecca, reaches Alexandria, 21 Jan., and Cairo, 25 Jan., 1910.

Boutros Pasha, born 1849, prime minister, fatally shot by a nationalist student, 21 Feb., 1908.

New ministry formed with Mahmoud Said Bey, president of the Council of ministers, and minister of the interior, 22 Feb., 1908.

Mr. Roosevelt delivers an address at the university, Cairo, 23 March, 1908.

KHELVES OR HEREDITARY VISCOUNTS
(nearly independent).

1806. Medemli Ali Pasha; abdicated Sept., 1845; died 2 Aug., 1848.

1848. Ibrahim (adopted son), Sept.; died 10 Nov., 1848.

1849. Abdin (his son), Nov.; died 14 July, 1854.

1854. Said (brother), 14 July; died 18 Jan., 1855.

1863. Ismail (nephew), 15 Jan. (born 31 Dec., 1850); deposed by the sultan at the request of England, France and other powers, 26 June, 1879; died 23 Mar., 1879.

1879. Mehemet Tewfik, born Nov., 1852, invested with the star of India by the prince of Wales, 25 Oct., 1879; proclaimed 26 June, 1879; died 7 Jan., 1892.

1892. Abbas Hilmi, born 14 July, 1874; heir, Abbas Mehemet Bey, born 28 Feb., 1892.
secretary, 1862; died 8 Feb., 1865. Its object is to promote excavations in order to elucidate the history and arts of ancient Egypt and biblical history. Miss-Edwards, a learned Egyptologist, was secretary, died 13 April, 1882. She bequeathed property to the professorship of Egyptology at University College, London. Annual meetings.

Mr. W. M. Flinders Petrie was the first Edwards professor; first lecture given, 4 Jan., 1893.

M. Edouard Naville's excavations began in Jan., 1888. The excavations were continued in order to make important discoveries, including the site of Goshen. Mr. W. M. F. Petrie examined more than twenty sites in 1874, and made remarkable discoveries. The results were given to British and foreign museums. Makes discoveries, including Naucratis, which was a flourishing Greek commercial and manufacturing city, on the upper arm of the Nile, about 300 m., and declared after the Persian invasion and the founding of Alexandria in 311 B.C.

Excavations carried on by Mr. E. Lewellyn Griffith at Tanis, 1876; Mr. Petrie, in the mounds of Tell-Defennah, discovered the remains of 2 Pharaoh's house in Tampakos (1884), (Nineteenth Mill., 3, 11), May, 1886.

Mr. S. A. Gardiner reported the results of his excavations in the spring at Naucratis, and exhibited relics with statuettes, pottery, &c., obtained from the sites of temples, cemeteries, &c., from, 6 July, 1886. Mr. Naville's report on the excavations at Ouni and the "Mound of the Jews," continued spring 1885. He discovers the great temple of Rabastis about 12 ft. 3 in. granite monolithic columns, sculpture, &c., April-June, 1885.

Exhibition of Egyptian antiquities at the Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly; by Mr. Flinders Petrie, of his excavations at Tanis, July, 1888.

Mr. Flinders Petrie discovered fragments of a lost play of Egyptian origin in the archives of other writers, which have been published by Professor Mahaffy after study by himself and Professor Sayce, reported July, 1904. Mr. Petrie's "Ten Years excavations," published May, 1892.

Important discoveries by M. de Morgan in the brick pyramid of Dahshur, reported March, 1894.

M. Naville placed in his recent excavations at Tell-Gardiner, near the site of Menes, including Greek and Roman remains, 14 Dec.; April-June, 1895.

Results of Professor Flinders Petrie's explorations (11 weeks in 1894), exhibited in University College, Great St., July, 1894. At the royal society of Edinburgh he described the discoveries (2 miles X. of Thebes) by excavations of an entirely distinct race of men, which probably existed about 2600 B.C.; possibly Amorites of Tyre. Important discoveries were found in the cemeteries, monuments, statues, paintings, &c., 17 April, 1894; fresh discoveries, 22 April, 1894; exhibited at the British museum, July, 1895; another of the joint work of Mr. Flinders Petrie and Mr. J. E. Quibell, ancient Egyptian Records of our Lord, and the oldest MS. of the Hebrews, discovered by Messrs. Grenfell and Hunt at Oxyrhynchus (Behnesa), 12 Jan., 12, 16 March, 1897; antiquities and papyri from the Fayum and Oxyrhynchus (Dec. 1896), by Mr. Quibell, and from cemeteries on the Nile, by Mr. Hogarth, exhibited at Burlington House (fresh papyri including new "Logia," discovered by Messrs. Grenfell and Hunt at Oxyrhynchus, 1892). Many discoveries, excavations carried on by six different institutions, 1895-1900: first dynasty (Merenptah), sacred royal tombs discovered by Prof. Flinders Petrie at Abidos and others the site of the 12th, 13th, and 16th dynasties by Mr. Garstang (see Times, 24 April, 1900); important Pre-Ptolemaic papyrus found by Messrs. Grenfell and Hunt at "Unseen Thebes" (Behnesa), south of the Theban hill (part 1 pubh., Jan., 1893), 3 Dec., 1899-Jan 1900; Mr. Garstang discovers the royal tomb of Neter- Khon in Upper Egypt, reported to the British Association, 1901; Professor Flinders Petrie states the recent discoveries at Abidos, having settled the continuous order of 17 kings and the very foundations of Egyptian history, 7 Nov., 1901; exhibition at the Courtauld Institute, July, 1902; July, 1903; July, 1905; Professor Flinders Petrie's lecture on "The beginnings of the Egyptian Kingdom" at the British Association, 10 Sept., 1903; site of the ancient Heliopolis, now Khmara or Abus, previously partially explored by Dr. Naville, completed exhaustively by Prof. Flinders Petrie, Dr. Naville, and Mr. II. H. Hall (British Museum), being to light a large portion of the funerary temple or mortuary chapel of King Mentuhotep, of the Seventh Dynasty (circa 1990 B.C.); work being carried on at Thebes, near the temple of queen Hatshepsut; tombs of their attendants, and secondary tombs in tombs of Hatshepsut, and Penta examined and copied by the archaeological survey, records of the northern group of tombs now regarded complete; part IV, of the "Logia," published 1905; excavations to be resumed at Oxyrhynchus, 3 Dec., 1904; Professor Theodorakis, who discovered the tombs of Thothmes IV, and queen Hatshepsut at Thebes (see Times, 24 Nov., 1904), discovers a tomb unlisted or plundered since the 18th dynasty, and filled with precious treasure at the time when Egypt was mistress of the East and the source of its supply of gold (see Tholos), 12 Feb., 1905; Shrine of Hathor discovered at Thebes; see Times, 19 Dec., 1906.

Large find of Greek literary papyrus; article by Dr. B. P. Grenfell and Dr. A. S. Hunt, see Times, Jan. 1905.

Prof. Flinders Petrie discovers a Hyskos canvas, during the winter of 1905-6, see Times, 5 June, 1906.

EGYPTIAN ERA, &c. The old Egyptian year was identical with the era of Nabonassar, beginning 26 Feb., 747 n.c, and consisted of 365 days only. It was reformed 30 n.c., at which period the commencement of the year had arrived, by continually receding to the 29th Aug., which was determined to be in future the first day of the year. To reduce to the Christian era, subtract 2762 years 125 days. The calendar or heliacal period of the Egyptians and Ethiopians (1460 years) began when Sirius or the dog star emerged from the rays of the sun, on 20 July, 27,43 n.c, and extended to 3132 n.c. This year comprised 12 months of 30 days, and 5 supplementary days.

EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, erected in 1881 by Mr. Robinson for Bullock's natural history collections, which were sold in 1891; since used for exhibitions, concerts, &c. See Dudley Gallery.

EHRENREITSTEIN (Honour's broadstone), a strong Prussian fortress on the Rhine, formerly belonged to the electors of Treves. It was often besieged. It surrendered to the French general Jourdain, 24 Jan., 1779. The fortifications were destroyed on its evacuation, 9 Feb., 1861, at the peace of Laneville. The works have been restored since 1874.

EIDER, a river separating Schleswig from Holstein, was passed by the Austrians and Prussians, 9 Feb., 1804. Rider, German stamper, see Weeks, 1892.

EIGHT HOURS. In 1889-95 (and since) there was much agitation among the working classes in Britain and on the Continent, in favour of limiting the working day to eight hours. This was one of the objects of the demonstrations in May, 1890-92, see Working Men.

The factories and shops act (an 8 hrs. working day for women), passed at Melbourne . . . . 1890

The limitation adopted by some trades in England; by the bookbinders of London . . Nov., 1891

The marquis of Salisbury and Mr. A. J. Ballour receive a deputation of workmen; they deplore legislation as premature . . . . 11 May, 1892

The eight hours' system opposed by the Durham miners (nearly 41,000), reported 26 Oct., 1892; but approved by the annual conference at Birmingham . . Jan., 1893

The mines (eight hours) bill rejected by the commons (272-160), 23 March, 1892; and reading,

Mr. W. Mather, M.P., of the Salford ironworks, gave a favourable report of the results of a year's trial of the 48 hours' week . . 28 March, 1894

The adoption of the eight hours' system in some of the government works; reported 23 March, 1894

A council for an eight hours' working day passed by the international miners' congress at Berlin, 17 May, 1894; again at Aix-la-Chapelle, 25 May, 1896

Miners' eight hours bill, 25 April, withdrawn Aug. 1896; rejected . . . . . 25 May, 1897

Eight hour's de deman by engineers see Strikes . . 3 July, et seq.

Resolution in favour of legislative limitation of labour hours to 8 per day, and making this a test question at all elections, passed at Trades Union congress . . 19 Sept., 1893

Coal mines regulation act 1893 (coal mines eight hours act) came into force (except for the counties of Northumberland and Durham, where it applies on and after 1 Jan., 1899) . . . . 1 July, 1899

EIGHTY CLUB. Established in 1850, to promote political education and to stimulate liberal organisation by Mr. Albert Grey, Sir Henry James, and Lord Richard Grosvenor. Mr. Gladstone, president, 1887. The club adopted Home Rule, and 80 Liberal Unionists seceded, 18 May, 1887.

EIKON BASLIKE ("the Portraiture of His Sacred Majesty in his Solitudes and Sufferings"), a book of devotion formerly attributed to King Charles I., but now generally believed to have been written partly, if not wholly, by bishop Gauden, and possibly approved by the king; it was published in 1645-9, and 14 English editions and 10 in foreign languages, printed in (1851), 68 in all up to the present time. By direction of the parliament, Milton published a reply entitled "Iconoclastes," or Image-breaker.

EL ALISCH, Egypt, captured by the French under Neyron, 18 Feb., 1801. A convention was signed here between the grand vizier and Kleber for the evacuation of Egypt by the French, 28 Jan. 1800. He beat the Turks at Heliopolis on 20 March, and was assassinated on 14 June following.

ELBA, ISLE OF (on the coast of Tuscany), taken by admiral Nelson in 1796; but abandoned 1797. Elba was conferred upon Napoleon (with the title of emperor) on his relinquishing the throne of France, 3 April, 1814. He secretly embarked hence with about 1,000 men in hired feluccas, on the night of 25 Feb., 1815, landed in Provence, 1 March, and soon after recovered the crown; see France, 1815. Elba was resumed by the grand duke of Tuscany, July, 1815; was annexed to Sardinia, 1860, and included in the kingdom of Italy in 1870; population in 1893 about 24,000.

ELBE, North German Lloyd steamer, see Wrecks, 30 January, 1895, and 21 July, 1902.

ELCHINGEN, Bavaria. Here Ney beat the Austrians, 14 Oct., 1805, and was made duke of Elchingen.

ELCHO SHIELD, see under Volunteers.

ELDERS (in Greek, presbuteroi), in the early church equivalent with episcopoi, or bishops (see Tit. iii. and Titus i.), who afterwards became a distinct and superior order. Elders in the presbyterian churches are laymen.

Elders' Wives Fund, established by the East India Company, in 1829, to provide for widows and orphans of some of its servants, was closed in 1850. In 1873 an act was passed to transfer the surplus money to the provident fund, &c.

EL DORADO (the "Gilded Man"). When the Spaniards had conquered Mexico and Peru, they began to look for new sources of wealth, and hearing heard of a golden city ruled by a king or priest, smeared in oil and rolled in gold dust (which report was founded on a merely annual custom of the Indians), they organised various expeditions into the interior of South America, which were accompanied with disasters and crimes, about 1590. Raleigh's expeditions in search of gold in 1596 and 1617 led to his fall.

ELEASA, Palestine. Here Judas Maccabaeus was defeated and slain by Bacchides and AElius, and the Syrians, about 161 B.C. (1 Macc. ix.)

ELEATIC SECT, founded at Elba in Sicily, by Xenophanes, of Colophon, about 535 B.C., whither he had been banished on account of his wild theory of God and nature. He supposed that the stars were extinguished every morning and rekindled at night; that eclipses were occasioned by a partial extirpation of the sun; that there were several suns and moons for the convenience of the different climates of the earth, &c. Strabo, Zeno (about 304) was an Eleatic.

ELECTION PETITIONS. The laws respecting them were consolidated in 1828, 1830, and 1841. An act passed in 1838 was amended in 1865. By the act of 1868, 3 new judges were appointed, and three to be selected from all the judges to try election cases.

ELECTOR PALATINE, see Palatinate.

ELECTORS for members of parliament for counties were obliged to have forty shillings a-year in land, 8 Hen. VI. 1429. Among the acts relating to electors are the following: Election Act for the City of London passed 1724; Act depriving climax and custom-house officers and contractors of government of their votes, 1782; see Customs. Act to regulate polling, 1828. Great changes were made by the Reform Acts of 1832, 1867, 1886, and 1885. County elections act, 1830; see Bribery. The ELECTRICITY.

Stephen Gray, aided by Wheeler, discovered that the human body conducts electricity, that electricity acts at a distance (motion in light beings being produced by fractional electricity at a distance of 100 feet), the fact of electric induction, and other phenomena.

Today original his dual theory of two electric fluids: one vitreous, from rubbed glass, &c., the other resinous, from rubbed amber, resin, &c.; and showed that two bodies similarly electrified repel each other, and attract bodies oppositely electrified, about.

Desaguers classified bodies as electric and non-electrics.

The Leyden jar (vial or bottle) discovered by Kwist, 1745, and by Camaus and Mieschenbrock, of Leyden; Winckler constructed the Leyden battery.

Important researches of Watson, Canton, Becvar, and Nobili.

Franklin announced his theory of a single fluid, containing the vitreous electricity positive, and the resinous negative, 1747; and demonstrated the identity of the electrical fluid of lightning, drawing down electricity from a cloud by means of a kite.

June, 1752.

A pinch, he "killed a turkey by the electric spark, and roasted it by an electric jack before a fire kindled by the electric bottle."

Professor Richman killed at St. Petersburg, while repeating Franklin's experiments.

Becvarna published his researches on atmospheric electricity, 1758; and Epimus his mathematical theory.

Electricity developed by fishes investigated by Ingenhousz, Cavendish, and others, about 1777.

Lichtenberg produced his electrical figures, 1777.

Electro Statics: Coulomb applied the torsion balance to the measurement of electric force, 1785.

Electro-Chemistry: water decomposed by Cavendish, Pourry, and others.

Discoveries of Galvani and Volta (see Voltaic Electricity, below).

Discovered, of Copenhagen, discovered electro-magnetic action (see Electro-Magnets, next page).

Thermo-Electricity currents produced by Seebeck, 1821.

Discovered by Seebeck: it was produced by heating pieces of copper and bismuth soldered together, 1821; the Thermo-electrometer invented by Sir Wm. Snow Harris, 1824; and the Thermo-multiplier constructed by Melloni and Nobili, 1831. [Marcus constructed a powerful thermoelectric battery in 1858.]

On Reis observed a current on animal electricity at the Royal Institution, and showed the existence of an electric current, developed by action of the human muscles, in May, 1835.

Dr. Bland-Sutton (bart., 1859) announced his discovery of electricity in plants to the British Association at Bradford, 1873.

Mr. C. V. Boys exhibits his very sensitive quadrupole thermo-electric at the Royal Institution, see 1838.

On 14 June, 1839.

Dr. Girdwood's thermo-electric stove reported successful in London and Paris, May, 1839.

Faraday produced a spark by the sudden separation of a coated keeper from a permanent magnet. (see Magneto-Electricity, next page).

Wheatstone calculated the velocity of electricity on the double fluid theory, to be 288,000 miles a second; on the single fluid theory, 576,000 miles a second.

Mr. W. G. Armstrong (late, Feb., died 27 Dec., 1900) discovered, and Faraday explained, the electricity of high pressure steam, which produces the hydro-electric machine.

Electricity Machines. Otto von Guericke obtained sparks by rubbing a globe of sulphur, about 1647; Newton, Boyle, and others used glass, about 1675; Hawkewer improved the machine about 1709; Hesse invented a metallic conductor, 1713; Winckler contrived the cushion for the rubber, 1721; Gordon employed a glass cylinder, 1747; for which the substance was subsequently substituted; Dr. Canton introduced amalgam for the rubber, 1751; Van Marum constructed an electric machine at Harleian, said to have been the most powerful ever made, 1775; the Rev. A. Bennett invented the "doubler of electricity," 1786; Carvallo

GALVANISM, OR VOLTAGE-ELECTRICITY, ELECTROLYSIS, AS BY ELECTRO-MAGNETISM.

(See Electro-Physiology.) Sulzer noticed a peculiar sensation in the tongue when silver and lead were brought into contact with it and each other.

Madame Galvani observed the convulsion in the muscles of frogs when brought into contact with two metals, in 1789; and M. Galvani, after studying the phenomena, laid the foundation of the galvanic battery.

1791

Volta announced his discovery of the "Voltaic pile," composed of discs of zinc and silver, and invented.

1800

Mr. W. Cruikshank's experiments.

" By the voltaic pile, Nicholson and Carlisle decomposed water, and Dr. Henry decomposed nitric acid, and other substances seen after." 8 Oct.

1807

Zamboni constructed a dry pile of paper discs, coated with tin on one side and pordox of magnesium on the other.

1809

Children's battery fused platinum, &c.

J. W. Ritter constructed his "secondary pile"

1812

Davy exhibited the voltaic are.

1813

Wollaston's thimble battery ignited platinum wire, 1815

Powder experimented on animals with galvanism, 1791; and Aldini, 1796, who produced muscular contractions and criminal recently executed, 1803; Ure did the same.

1818

Faraday described his discovery of electric-magnetic rotation.

1821

Multiplying or rheometers, peculiarly termed "galvanometers," invented by Ampere and by Schweigger, 1820; by Cumming, 1821; de la Rive, 1823; Ritchie (forsm), 1830. Josiec (mag netism). 1843. Sir William Thompson has made many improvements since 1856; he described his reflecting galvanometer, and similar apparatus in the report of the British Association in 1857. Very large galvanometer made by prof. Wm. A. Cornell, of New York.

Aug. 1883

Georg Simon Ohm enunciated his formulæ relating to the galvanic current, 1857; proposed erection of a station of 60,000 at Mulheim, on the centenary of his birth, 16 March, 1859. Feb. 1859.

Improvement in constructing the Voltaic battery made by Wellsham, 1815; Bessemer, 1829; Surgeon, 1830; J. E. Daniel, 1880; Grove (electric cell, &c.), 1827; Millar, 1832; Bunsen, (carbon, &c.), 1822; Grove (gas battery), 1842.

Faraday demonstrated the nature of electro-chemical decomposition, and the principle that the quantity and intensity of electric action of galvanic battery depend on the size and number of plates employed. 1824.

Wheatstone invented his electro-magnetic chromoscope. 1840.

Copper-Zinc Couple (which see) constructed by Dr. J. H. Gladstone and Mr. A. Tribe. 1857.

Batteries: Bichromate of potash battery; a modification of Dr. Lesson's; very powerful; now much used. (Gason Plane's lead battery, powerful, 1825.) Chloride of silver battery (4,000 cells)—results of its discharge published by Dr. Wener de la Rue and Hugo Miller. Powerful results exhibited at Royal Institution, London, 21 Jan. 1829 Dr. Hynse's pneumatic battery (air blown in), very effective, announced. 1831.

See under Electric Light. Mycroft's primary battery, put forth in 1821, greatly improved, exhibited in Soho square, London, W., Jan.; Major Henard's primary battery exhibited in London, Jan.; Mr. Weymorsch's Rammertsey machine, 1872. Pelletier's induction electrometer, about 1845; sir Wm. Thomson's quadrant electrometer. about 1857

ELECTRIC ACCELERATOR, or secondary battery, a modification by M. Faure, or Galvani's powerful lead battery of 1880, was exhibited at Paris, May, 1881.

In June a box, one cubic foot in size, containing four cells, enclosing thin sheets of lead surrounded with wire saturated with dilute acid, &c, was conveyed from Paris to London. Sir Wm. Thomson found it to possess the electric energy of one million foot-pounds; and said, in a letter to The Times of 2 June, 1881: "This solves the problem of storing electricity in a manner and in a state useful for many important applications." June 1881.

Emilio Muncro Wagner began with Tesla's discovery of the action of the electric current on the magnetic needle, 1889; proved by Ampere, who exhibited the action of the voltaic pile upon the magnetic needle, and showed the influence of the voltaic current; he also arranged the conducting wire in the form of a helix or spiral, invented a galvanometer, and imitated the magnet by a spiral galvanic wire. 1890.

Aragon magnetised a needle by the electric current, and attracted iron filings by the connecting wire of a galvanic battery.

The first electro-magnet. 1845

Induction of electric currents discovered by Faraday and announced 1831. (Sir W. H. Preece made experiments, showing how induced currents—(from wire to wire)—might be utilized in electric telegraphy, Nov., 1850.)

Bessemer invented an electro-magnetic balance. 1831

Faraday discovered the electric-magnetic rotary force developed in a magnet by voltaic electricity, 1854; experiments on the induction of a voltaic current, &c. 1844-5

Sturgeon made a bar of soft iron magnetic by surrounding it with coils of wire, and sending an electric current through the wire. 1857

Induction coil made by Professor G. T. Page of Salem, Mass. 1887.

Joseph Henry announced his discovery of secondary currents. 1854

DRight used electro-magnetic force to manufacture mathematical instruments, about 1854.

MAGNETO-ELECTRICITY (the converse of Tesla's discovery of electro-magnetism), discovered by Faraday, who produced an electric spark by suddenly separating a coated keeper from a permanent magnet; and found that an electric current ELECTRICITY.

The invention of the telegraph, and its development, is an important chapter in the history of electricity. The first telegraph was a simple device that conveyed messages over a distance by the use of a carrier. The carrier was typically a horse, and the message was passed along a line of runners that were attached to the horse's body. The signal was transmitted by moving the runners up and down a wire, and the receiving party used a simple device to detect the signal.

The first practical telegraph was invented by Charles Wheatstone and William Cooke in 1837. They used a system of electric current to transmit messages, and their invention was quickly adopted throughout the world. The first transatlantic telegraph was completed in 1858, and it revolutionized communication between the United States and Europe.

The development of the telegraph was accompanied by the development of new technologies, such as the telegraphy, which allowed messages to be transmitted over long distances. These developments were made possible by the work of many scientists and engineers, including Samuel Morse and Alexander Graham Bell.

The telegraph was a major technological advance that revolutionized communication. It allowed people to communicate over long distances, and it had a profound impact on the way that people lived and worked. The development of the telegraph was a major milestone in the history of electricity, and it continues to have a significant impact on our lives today.
First ocean newspaper, or Daily Bulletin, published on the Cunard liner Opera, news transmitted by Marconi's wireless system and daily issue on the Cunard liners. 6 June, 1904.

Wireless Telegraphy act, 1904, gives the government control over wireless telegraphy in time of war or national emergency, and to regulate the working of the different wireless stations; wireless telegraph stations on shore or on British ships to obtain a licence from the postmaster-general, royal assent.

Telegram accepted by G.P.O. from wireless land stations to ships at sea.

Capt. Lionel Lenx wrote a paper before the Royal Society of Arts (18 Jan., 1903), giving a detailed account of the De Forest wireless telegraphy station established by him at Weehawken for The Times, in the early months of the Russo-Japanese war, and his experiences of its working. See Times, 19 Jan., 1905.

Marconi service of wireless telegraphy, from Cape Breton to Childen on the Connaught coast, opened for press traffic.

Service extended to private and business telegrams between Montreal and London; average speed, 22 words per minute. Feb. 13, 1904.

The international radiotelegraphic convention comes into force; an arrangement is made by which stations on the coasts of the British Empire are to be open for communication with ships equipped with wireless telegraph apparatus.

Dirigible Heriton—discovery claimed by M. Tissot and B. bill, two Italian engineers.

Sept.

New wireless telegraph station opened at Hoth Head, South Devon, and messages exchanged between M. Nobley Buxton, P. M.G., and Mr. Marconi.

The Republic, white star line, collided with an Italian emigrant steamer, the Florida, 175 miles off New York. Many lives were saved, but number saved by the arrival of the Baltic, which received the C.O.D. or distress signal, sent up by wireless telegraphy by the Republic.

Method of duplex wireless telegraphy devised by Mr. Marconi during the early part of .

Telegraphy, wireless.

Regular series of wireless reports at Lloyd's, for the use of merchants, first published. 7 Feb.

The Marconi transatlantic wireless service between Europe and America opened. 23 April.

The French government announced that all wireless stations are open to receive home and international communications for or from ships at sea.

Edward VII. a demonstration was given in the Channel, off Chiswell's, of a system of wireless telegraphy and telephony by echo transmission. 27 June.

Communications complete between Dover and Ostend and between Fortpatrick and Donaghadee, (laid by sir Charles Bright), May, 1853. "The late sir Charles Bright was the first to lay a cable in deep water," Lord Kelvin, 1856.

Holyhead and Howth. 19 May, 1864.

Paris and Basta. Nov.

London and Constantinople. May, 1858.

Cromer and Emden. 1859.

Avila and Seville. May, 1859.

Malta and Alexandria. 26 Sept., 1864.

England and Bombay, opened. 1 March, 1865.

Marseilles, St. Nicholas, and the Cape, Algeria. 23 June.

Over-land electric telegraph (first erected at Paris) set up between the capitals of the principal states on the continent, West-end by Messrs. Waterlow, in 1855, extended throughout London. 1855-72.

Hulse's printing telegraph, 1846, Rahn's electrochemical telegraph, 1847. Hulse's system, or the American combination system of the present day.
ELECTRICITY.

The Great Eastern, with a new cable, sailed from the Medway, 20 June, the shore-end at Valletta was spliced with the main cable, and the Great Eastern sailed, 22 July. 1880 miles of cable had been laid, 22 July, the cable was completely laid at heart's Content, Novem, 19, 23 October, and sent to lord newcastle. 27 July, message from queen victoria to president of the United States sent, 28 July. In which he replied, 30 July, 1865.
The first cable with 7,500,000 miles, 2 Sept. 1866. Having completed at newfoundland. 3 Sept.
The great eastern arrived at Liverpool 19 Sept.
Baronets conferred on Messrs. Curtis Lampson, John, Jones, Daniel., and James Anderson; chief promoters of the company, were knighted, 5 Oct.
(1866) that the engine of the cable passed signals through 3700 miles of wire by means of a battery formed in a lady's muff.
The C. & F. congress voted a gold medal to Cyrus Field, for his exertions connected with Atlantic telegraph. 7 March.
A dinner given to Cyrus Field at Williams's restaurant, London, telegraphic messages were exchanged between the company and lord monck, vicecy of Canada and president Johnson, 1 June.
French association for the improvement in each country government grant concession for 20 years, from 1 Sept. 1876, to baron (1871) julius de reuter and Fons Emile D'lerange, to reuter. 7 July.
Angle-French telegraph (Newbiggin to Copen-hagen) completed 21 Aug.
European end of the French Atlantic cable laid at breeze, 17 June; the American end at Duxbury, Massachussets. 1873.
Reported union between the Anglo-American and French Atlantic telegraph companies. 1 Jan.
Telegraph between bombay and Suez completed 23 July.
Telegraph between adelaide and Port Darwin, Australia, completed 22 Aug.
Message from the mayor of Adelaide received by the lord mayor of London, and replied to, 31 Oct.
The fourth Atlantic telegraph cable laid from Great eastern, from Valletta, Ireland, to heart's content, Newfoundland, 6 June-3 July, 1873.
The brazil telegraph cable completed, 22 Sept.
"Faraday," a great electric cable ship, built for Siemens Brothers, launched at newcastle (see story), 31 July; sailed to United States Company's cable. 16 May; laid shore-end in new scotland, 31 May; in new hampshire, 5 June; connected with newfoundland, july 1874.
The fifth Anglo-American telegraph laid by the great eastern. Aug.-sept. 1874.
E. a. cooper's writing telegraph: quick plain writing (27 miles) exhibited at royal institution, feb. 1875. improved by j. a. robbins, corrected from Dover to Cables in London, 1875.
South African line laid between mozambique and Natal. 23 Aug. 1875. connected with capetown, opened to the public 25 Dec.
The new French transatlantic cable to be laid from breeze to St. Pierre by the faraday, sailed June; connected with Halifax, Oct. 1875; from Halifax to Paris by new cable opened 1 June, 1876.
New Atlantic cable laid by the faraday. 22 Aug.
Telegraph from England to Panama completed 3 Sept. 1882.
The faden, an electric launch (75 feet long, 7 feet beam) built of steel, constructed by Messrs. Steppen, Smith & Co. of Millwall, designed by m. a. Hillenbrand, charged with the youth's academy, and backed by means of one charge of the accumulators; about 4 hours crossing 13 Sept.
Electric boat for communicating light to powder houses. &c.; invented by Thomas Webb; launched at Wapping Abbey, Aug. 1836.

Arrangements invented for transmitting telegraphic messages from railway trains in motion without contact with the ordinary wires.

A central laboratory of electricity inaugurated at Grenelle, Paris, by the International society of electricians.

Sir Charles Bright, an eminent engineer, who laid many telegraph cables, died 3 May, 1858.

Electric samplers invented by Mr. Ralifife Wel, running in London. Feb. 1839.

Messrs. Moore & Wright announce their column prior to the jubilee in which telegraphy is produced, resembling type writing.

April, 1840. The Metropolitan electric supply company propose six central stations, W. & W. G. April, 1840. The Jubilee exhibition congress at Frantoni-lort-Maine, opened 8 Sept., 1840.

Electrical exhibition at the Crystal Palace 9 Jan., 1852.

Electrical Exhibition at St. Petersburg. 23 Jan., 1852.

Great progress made, messages and returns sent all round the world in a few minutes from New York, during an electrical exposition. June, 1852.

The Manchester electric telegraph column appeared in the Manchester Times. July.

Meetings of committee of the Submarine Telegraph Memorial, to establish a memorial to sir John Pender recording the jubilee of submarine-telegraphy by the French and British. 9 Nov., 1852.

Submarine telegraph cable between Embden and Vigo, opened, reported. 20 Dec., 1852.

Mr. Gladstone laid between Brest and England, reported. 1 Aug., 1859.

Successful experiments in rapid telegraphing in Buda-Pesth and Berlin, 230 words sent in 10 secs. 1860.

German-American cable, between Embden and New York, opened. 1 Sept., 1870.

Submarine cable between Cornwall and St. Vincent, Cape de Verd Islands, opened. 30 Jan., 1894.

Cable from S. Africa to W. Australia, opened, Oct. 1894.

Committee to consider the cable communications of the empire, presided over by lord balcarres, evidence given by sir E. A. Swinem, sir J. D. Pender, sir Sandford Fleming, Mr. Chas. Bright, and others. 1901-2.

All British Pacific cable from Vancouver to Queensland, connecting New Zealand, Norfolk Island, and Australia, first section completed at Delphes Bay, March 1899; the cable receives a message from Fiji, 10 April; last link completed at Sava, Fiji, 31 Oct.; a telegraphic cable round the world, touching foreign soil only at Madrid and St. Vincent, a message travels the whole circuit in 30 minutes. Times. 1 Nov.

Electric Clock. &c. Professor Wheatstone invented an electro-magnetic telegraph clock in 1840. Clocks worked by electricity, invented by Mr. Alexander Bain, Mr. Shepherd, and others, appeared in the exhibition of 1841. An electric clock, with four dials, illuminated at night, was set up for some time in front of the office of the electric telegraph company, in the Strand, London, July, 1852. A time-ball was set up by Mr. Freestone, in Cornhill, in 1846, and Mr. A. Walker so connected the clock of the Greenwich observatory with that of the South-eastern station, London, that they could be controlled by electricity.

Loewe's electric clock reported successful, mid-May, 1903.

Commercial Pacific cable company's cable between the United States and China completed, 16-17 April, 1906.

New cable between Guan, America, and Japan, 26 June.

First section, 215 nautical miles of the telegraphic cable to Ireland, from the Shetland Is., to the Farnes Is., opened 1 Aug.; 1st section, reported complete 10 Aug.

Armengaud, president of the French society of aerial navigation, devises an apparatus for supplanting the power of vision by artificial devices, based on the employment of electricity, making it possible to see across immense distances. April, 1898.

Electric Light.

Humphry Davy produced electric light with carbon points. 1799.

Apparatus for regulating the electric light were devised in 1846, and shown by W. Staite's patents, 1846, 1847; Staite (at Sunderland), 25 Oct., 1847; and Petrie in 1848, at Pontefract. 1847.

John Duley's Electric Lamp (the most perfect of the kind) appeared at the Paris exhibition in 1855; and was first employed by professor Tyndall, at the Royal Institution, London, for illustrating lectures on light and colours.

1856.

The works of new Westminster bridge were illuminated by Watson's electric light.

1858.

The Mosquito Electric light (the most brilliant artificial light yet produced) is described by Mr. Bayly, successfully tried at the South Foreland lighthouse, Dover. 1858 and 1859.

The French government ordered eight lightships to be illuminated by electric light. April, 1861.

M. Serin, of Paris, exhibited his improved electric lamp. 1862.

Electric Candel, invented by Paul Jablochkoff on an electric current, passed through two carbon rods by side with a slip of cadmium between them, produces a steady, soft, noiseless light; the carbon burn like wax. reported to the Academy of Sciences, Paris, 16 Oct., 1876.

The electric light successfully employed for photography by Mr. H. Van der Weyde.

Hart, Wrightson, & Co., of Stockton-on-Tees, use Siemens electric lamp. 1 Aug., 1877.

At the Magasin du Louvre, 8 electric lights replaced 100 Carcel gas burners; as manageable as coal for supply; tried at West India dock on 1 Aug., 1877.

Tyndall's experiments at S. Foreland, demonstrate superiority of Siemens' dynamo-electric machine, Aug., 1876-July, 1877.

Grantage's machine (light equal to 750 candles). 1881.

Serin's and Jablochkoff's improved lamps. 1876.

Rupf, a Russian; taken up by Mr. (att. sir) E. J. Reed, M. P.; a small magneto-electric machine, worked by steam; conducting wires replace the gasworks and pipes. 1878.

Mr. Staryton reports, that the light is much cheaper than gas, and not suitable for street lighting in Aug., 1878.

Electric light tried at Westminster palace, 28 March, 1879.

Two of Siemens' dynamo-electric machines ordered for the Lizards lighthouses.

The Safety theatre light by light from Luntin's machine and modification of Siemens and Denayrouze's, Hippolyte Fontaine's invention on Electric Lighting, 1877; translated by Frett Higgs, published.

Mr. T. A. Edison announces at New York his discovery of a method of producing a great number of lights and much mechanical power from a Ritchie's induction coil, a dynamo-electric machine, which he terms "telechamron," which may be worked by water-power or steam. Sept., 1879.

Edison's plans of sub-dividing lights tried at patent office.

Richard Wenderich's electric light subdivided; a number of jets lit simultaneously; shown by British telegraph company. 2 Nov.

Electric light used for large workshops at Walsch, Acc., throughout the world. Nov., 1880.

Wallace lamp (American), introduced by Mr. Ladd, 1880.

Jablochkoff candle tried at Westgate-on-Sea, Nov., 1880.

Mr. E. T. Davis, by 18 Nov., electric light successfully, difficulty in practice: given up. Dec., 1880.

Formation of nitric acid in the air by electric light, announced by Mr. T. Wills. 1881.

Machines of Farmer & Wallace, London, for Merri- sons, Browning, Carre, and others in use in London.

Light given up at Billingsgate market, about 20 Jan., 1882.

Siemens' light successful at the Albert Hall, 15 Feb., 1882.

Edison obtains beautiful light from platinum fuses; used electricity power to old 25, 1882.
ELECTRICITY.

Lights at one station; failure announced, March; his patent renewed, 23 April, 1839.

Mr. M. V. Lomon's dynamo exhibited at Academy of Sciences, Paris, about 17 March, 1839.

A committee of the House of Commons appointed "to consider whether it is desirable to authorize independent corporations or other local authorities to adopt any schemes for lighting by electricity." 19 June, 1841.

Electric light placed on Thames Embankment, in British Museum, at Victoria Association, &c., Dec. 31, 1877.

System of C. F. Brush American, exhibited in London, and to be simple and trustworthy, 23 Dec., 1883.

Dr. C. W. Siemens reports to Royal Society, that the electric light acts like solar light, 2 March, 1839.

Electric lights set up for trial on Thames Embankment, north side (by lock-keeper), 15 Dec., 1877; Westminster Bridge, 17 Oct., 1877; continued, April, 1878.

Mr. J. W. Swan exhibits his system of dividing light, &c., for the electric-lamp trade, in London, 21 Aug., 1878.

Trial of three systems in London: London, Southwark Bridge, &c.; Cross, Blackfriars Bridge, &c.; Siemens, Guildhall, &c.

Swan's electric lamp set up in St. Mary's church, Blackfriars, 19 Aug., also in the Savoy Theatre, London, successfully opened 15 Oct.

Junior Carlton Club first lit by the electric arc, Sept.

Glimmering light by electric light produced by water wheels driven by the Web, Sept.; reported successful, 25 Dec.

New lamp (the sun) by Louis Chevre, a combination of the arc and incandescent systems, June, 1882.

The electric "sun" lamp and power company was established, 30 July, 1882.

The London system of electric lighting invented by M. F. Barret, &c. of Montreal, and Mr. A. J. Thomson, successfully tried, Dec.

International electrical and gaslight exhibition at the Crystal Palace opened, 1 Dec.

Electric light applied by Bell Brothers, Newcastle, to their mines, Dec.

Elphinstone and Vincent machine advertised for sale.

Mr. W. H. Gordon's great dynamo machine exhibited at Woodwich, 28 Oct., 1833.

Messrs. G. C. V. Holmes, F. E. Burke, and F. Cholwood's invention for the use of the electric light in the streets, opened in Great Northern line, reported successful, 23 Oct.

St. Matthew's Church, Brixton, lit by electricity for the first time, 4 Dec., 1833.

Coal-lamp system of secondary generators announced April; inaugurated on the Metropolitan railway 1 Nov.

H. L. Barnett's secondary battery tried at the Great Western station, 1 Dec.

Mr. O. C. D. Ross's improved gaslight battery for light and motion, 23 Aug., 1834.

Improvement in artificial lighting by the Beman, Taylor, and King system tried at Colchester, 11 June, 1877.

Electric light employed in Liverpool and Manchester trams, 1 Aug., 1874.

Electric lighting applied to the fisheries, &c., and Health exhibitions.

Brighton successfully lit by the Hammond-Wright system, Nov.

Upward primary arc (by W. Deacon), advanced; uses of and dispensed with, July, 1875.

The Edison & Swan united electric light company v. the Electrical & Hydraulics, for infringement of patent for carbon magnets; verdict for plaintiffs, 20 May, 1876.

Affirmed on appeal by Judge Cotton dissenting, 1 Jan., 1877.

King & Company's first station opened, 1 Jan., 1877.

Mr. Edison's "Pyro-Magnetic" dynamo, in which heat is directly transformed into electricity without the intervention of steam-engine or other machinery, announced to the American Association, 19 Sept., 1877.

Duc de Ferté's suggestion for the employment of windmills to produce electric light by working dynamo machines; experiments made at the top of Mont Loi at the Heve, Sept.

Mr. Urquhart's new portable electric lamp, weighing 4 lb., 2 oz., adapted for coal mines, &c.; exhibited in London, 1 Dec.

Scheffers's primary battery; applicable to lighting, miners' lamps, &c.; autumn.

Proposal to light part of the city of London by the Anglo-American Brush system submitted to the commissioners of sewers, deferred, 21 Feb., 1883.

Erection by the London electric supply corporation of works at Deptford to supply the metropolis with electric light.

The Edison & Swan united electric light company v. Holland and others; 29 days' trial; divided verdict. Edison's patent of 1879 declared invalid. Cheesborough patent of 1878 maintained 16 July, 1883. Edison's patent declared valid on appeal, 15 Feb., 1884.

The horse-to-house electric supply company tried, 1883; the first station at West Brompton opened 24 Jan., about nine stations established and others in preparation, as suggested by the Board of Trade, 1885.

The city of London from Fleet Street to Aldgate about to be electrically lighted 16 Feb.

The electric light led been adopted at Milan, Rome, Paris, Tours, Nantes, Brussels, New York and other great cities up to 10 June, 1890.

Fourteen companies have been established to supply electricity in the Metropolis above 15 Feb., 1891.

The first permanent electric lights in the city of London set up in Queen Victoria street from the Mansion-house to Blackfriars Bridge, summer, 1887. Electric light on the Great Northern line brought in.

Several explosions in St. Pancras and other places in the electrical supply street boxes, attributed to the presence of sodium and escape of gas; remedies suggested, 23 Feb., 1891.

Prof. Nernst's new electric lamp described by Mr. A. J. P. Thomson before the Society of Arts, 8 Feb., 1892.

Mr. H. B. Ofstead's invention for the supplying of electricity direct from coal without dynamos or engines, reported, 1 Sept., 1890.

Electric Light, &c. M. Bonelli, of Turin, in 1834, devised a plan of employing magnets and electric magnets in weaving, thereby superseding the tedious and costly Jacquard system of cards. His loom was set up in London in 1839, and lectured upon at the Royal Institution by professor Faraday, 3 June, 1862.

Electric Light (for copying, &c.), invented by Mr. T. A. Edison; an electric writing company was established, 1877.

Lamp-lighting by Electricity. — Mr. St. George Lane Fox's invention tried at Fullham, and reported successful, autumn 1878.

Electric telephone, invented by Dr. Stret hurdle, for producing sound by electric currents of high tension: one laid before the Royal Scottish Society of Arts, 25 April, 1874.

Mr. Chamberlain's speech on the fiscal question at the Guildhall, reproduced simultaneously to a large assembly at Queen's hall by electrophone, 19 Jan., 1894.

Electric Tint. Mr. Palmer, of Newgate-street, London, patented inventions by which engravings may be copied from engraved plates, and the engraving reproduced, actually printed, by electrical agency, and one process he termed gly- phography, 1841.

Electric Typewriter. Mr. W. Cruikshank's experiments, 1833; Mr. Spencer, in England, and professor Jacobi, in Russia, made the first successful experiments in this art in 1837 and 1838. Since then Mr. Spencer has perfected the processes. In 1840, Mr. Rob. Murray applied black lead to non-metallic bodies as a conducting surface. In 1840, Mr. Roof and Mr. Elkingston applied the same to a copper plate, and cast from them, have been electrified by copper, and the process is now largely adopted in the art. An Electric safety lamp made by MM. Dunns and Benoit. exhibited at Paris, 3 Sept., 1892.
ELECTRICITY.

The Electro-arc company established, 1860; by their processes the enlargement and reduction of crude metals is said to be immediately transferred to a lithographic stone, and multiplied. Lecch's engravings, so enlarged, were coloured by himself, and exhibited in 1862.

Ozone, generated by a current produced by Wilh. magneto-electric machine, converted to bleach sugar, at Whitechapel (Edward Beane's patent) Aug. 1868.

Electric force, formed in the electric arcs, by C. Wau. Siemens, faces platinum, iridium, etc., shown at Royal Institution in 1862.

Electric light applied by him to grow vegetables and fruit in greenhouses.

The electric welding syndicate exhibit at Hekton, Professor Ellis Thomson's process of welding metals by electricity (observed in 1852, and shown in New York).

Jan. 1859.

Machines at work at Crowe April.

Electric Railway, by Werner Siemens, and Haßke, opened near Berlin 12 May, 1881.

Siemens's electric architect 6 inches square, 2 furnaces deep; Tissandier's electrically propelled balloon; Menier's ploughing machine, 11 Aug.; electric tramway set up in Paris Aug.

Siemens's new electric railway tried at Heidelberg about 7 Nov.

First electric tramway cars run at Leytonstone, Essex, 24 March, 1882.

Electric railway opened at Berlin 19 May.

A boat (Electricity) with screw-propeller moved by power, provided by electric accumulators (built by Siemens & Halske), Electrical Storage Company, sails from Millwall to London Bridge 10 Sept.

Electric trams first run from Kew to Hammersmith 10 March, 1883.

Siemens's electric tramway between Portobello and Giant's Causeway completed, Dec. 1882; opened by earl Spencer 25 Sept.

Electrical transmission of force; M. Marcel Deprez experiments at Creil (1876-78), supported by M. Rothschild, reported successfully; mechanical power transmitted 45 miles for industrial purposes 23 July, 1886.

Elison company's electric engines reported successful at Stratford; tramcars driven five miles Oct. 26 seq.

Electrical traction on tramways at Northfield, successful demonstration 20 Dec.

Successful trial of an electric tramcar on a new principle, at Birmingham 20 Oct. 1889.

Mr. Munsch's electric motors employed successfully in pumping and hauling at St. John's colliery, Normanton and other places Nov.

The City & South London Electric railway opened by the prince of Wales 4 Nov., to the Guildhall 12 Dec. 1890.

Mr. Nikola Tesla, at the Royal Institution, exhibited his alternate-current electric motor, by which currents are transformed by rapidly changing their direction to and fro into mechanical power. It was stated that, with the increase of physical power, the effect upon the human frame is diminished 13 Feb. 1892.

[By means of Mr. Tesla's apparatus, the force of about 77 7 horse power was transmitted from the rapidity of the N-eratc to Frankfort-on-Maine, 100 miles, Sept. 1894, to Paris, 1894.]

See Liverpool, 1894.

M. Hellmann's electric motor-engine on the Western railway in France, attained the speed of 65 miles an hour 9 May, 1894.

Trial trip from Paris to Mantes of an electric locomotive devised by M. Hellmann 13 Nov. 1897.

Central London electric railway (link to Southend's Bush) opened by the prince of Wales 27 June, 1899.

Electrification of Mersey railway completed 3 May, 1899.

South London electric tramways system opened 12 May, 1899.

Electrification of the Liverpool, Southport, and Crossens section of the Yorks, and Lancs, railway successful, trial trip 17 March, 1899.

Regular system of electric trains between New-castle central station and Benton instituted 29 March.

ELECTRICAL EDUCATION ACT.

London Electric Lighting Areas act, 1904, royal assent 4 Aug. 1904.

Electrification of the Metropolitan District railway, trains commences running 26 Mar. 1912.

Electro-Physiological, Aristotle and Pliney refer to the powers of the torpedo; Walsh and Ingenhousz, the discoveries of Galvani in 1790, and the researches of Mallet about 1830, have greatly advanced the science.

Electric tramway cars accidents.

At Swindon; 4 deaths, 30 persons injured 3 June, 1876.

Electric tramway accident at Archway-road, Highgate; 3 killed, many injured 6 July.

Accident at Bradford through the breaking of the trolley connecting the car with the overhead wire; 14 persons injured 23 July 1897.

Selous accident at Borough-mouth; a car, while descending the hill near Fairlight, got out of control, left the metals, and fell a distance of 20 ft. through the trees; 7 persons were killed 2 May 1903.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING ACT, 45 & 46 Vict. c. 56, passed 18 Aug. 1882. Amendment act passed 1888 (outlawing the negative electro-plating of electric light companies from 21 to 42 years). Regulations of the Board of Trade published 18 May, 1889. Professor Fleming reported in 1894, that London was supplied by 14 companies, and about 700,000 incandescent electric lamps were in use, and about 125,000 lamps in the provinces. Electric lighting is now generally adopted throughout the civilized world, 1894.

Another in London. The "Faraday," Mr. Swan, prs., 1903.

ELECTROCTION, a method of execution by means of electricity. See under Death.

ELECTROLYSIS, see Electricity, 1883.

ELECTRONS, minute particles of matter, consisting of positive and negative electricity, contained in an atom; and the negative electrons being in a state of violent movement with occasional possibility of escape. Investigated by prof. Leney, lord Kelvin, and others, 1903 seq. See Sir Oliver Lodge's address on "Radium and its Meaning," at Birmingham, 5 January, 1904, reported in Times, 6 January, 1905.

M. Pomarère, at a meeting of the Academy of Sciences, reads a note from M. Jean Becquerel on the nature of positive electricity and the existence of positive electrons. According to this statement, an electron, charged with positive electricity, was found in Cresoles tubes 26 June, 1906.

ELEGY. Elecrician verse (consisting of a hexameter and pentameter alternately) was the first variation from the hexameter of epic measure, used by Tyrtaeus and other early poets. The elegies of Ovid and Catullus are called "Elegies written in a Country Churchyard" was published in 1749.

ELECTRO-MAGNETIC CIRCUIT, see Electricity, 1883.

ELECTROMAGNETISM, see Electricity, 1883.

ELECTROMOTIVE FORCE, the potential difference between two points through which an electric current will flow spontaneously or in the absence of an external agent. (See Electricity.)

ELECTROMETER, a galvanometer of the mechanical form, used for the measurement of electric currents. (See Electricity.)

ELECTRON, a minute charged particle of matter, the negative electron. (See Electricity.)

ELECTROSTATIC FORCE, a force between any two bodies having an electric charge. (See Electricity.)
ELEMENTS. 470  ELEUSINIAN MYSTERIES.

ELEMENTS were formerly reckoned as four: earth, air, fire, and water. Lavoisier enunciated the principle that all bodies which cannot be proved to be compound are elements, and to be treated as such. Mr. W. Crookes (knt. 1807), F.R.S., in a lecture at the Royal Institution, London, by elaborate experiments demonstrated that yttrium is a compound body, and explained a theory that all the elements have been evolved from what is termed Proteids, 18 Feb. 1887. Above twenty new elements said to have been discovered in rare earths by M.M. Krüss and Nelson by the spectroscope in 1887. Mr. Crookes declared Dilymium to be a compound body. See Table, and separate articles. The chemical elements were stated to be about 51 in 1834, about 77 in 1881, about 100, 1903.:

ELEPHANT, in the earliest times trained to war. The history of the Marcaribes informs us, that "to every elephant they appointed 1000 men armed with coats of mail, and 500 horse; and upon the elephants were strong towers of wood, &c. The elephants in the army of Antiochus were provoked to fight by showing them the "blood of grapes and mulberries." The first elephant said to have been seen in England was one of enormous size, presented by the king of France to our Henry III. in 1238. Baker's Chron. Polyacnes states that Caesar brought one to Britain 51 B.C., which terrified the inhabitants greatly. See Knighthood. 13 elephants in lord mayor's procession, 9 Nov. 1876. Clunie, an elephant 13 feet high, in Cross's menagerie, Exeter Change, London, becoming dangerous, was shot, receiving 12 basket balls before he fell, 1 March, 1826. A young elephant brought into Court of Exchequer to show his peaceable character, in a suit for damages for frightening a pony at the Alexandra Palace, 18 July, 1879. Barmun, the American showman, bought, for 2,000$, the large male African elephant Jumbo, 6 tons weight, of the Zoological Society, Regent's Park, London. Jumbo refused to go 17 Feb. After much trouble he was removed in the night, 22-23 March, and placed in the Aspinian Menagerie, 24 March; arrived at New York, 6 April, 1882; killed on the railway, 15 Sept. 1885. A so-called white elephant (little differing from others), "Young Tabong," bought from the king of Siam, shown at the Zoological gardens, London, 17 Jan. to 11 March, 1854; burnt with Alive. "Jumby's wife," and others at the destruction of Mr. Barmun's show and menagerie at Bridgeport, U.S., by fire, 20 Nov. 1887. "Jung Paaka" given to the "Zoo" by the Prince of Wales in 1855; died 15 March, 1856. "Lata," a pet elephant in the Dublin Zoological gardens, killed his keeper, and was shot, 11 June, 1903. "Jumby, Junior," the smallest elephant in the world, exhibited at Hengler's circus, 1905.

ELEUSINIAN MYSTERIES. The institution of these annual secret religious ceremonies in honour of Demeter (Ceres) at Athens, is traditionally attributed to Cadmus, 1550; to Erechtheus, 1290; and to Eumolpus, 1576 B.C. If any one revealed them, he was to be put to death. They were introduced from Eleusis into Rome, lasted about 1800 years, and were abolished by Theodosius A.D. 380. The laws were:—1. To honour parents; 2. To honour the gods with the fruits of the earth;
ELPHIN (Ireland). St. Patrick founded a cathedral near Elphin, in the 5th century, and placed over it St. Asicus, whom he created bishop, and who soon after filled it with monks. After many centuries, Roscommon, Ardcarne, Drumcliff, and others of less note, were also annexed to Elphin, which became one of the richest sees in Ireland. It is valued in the King's books, by an extent returned 28 Eliz., at 103l. 18s. sterling. The see was united to Kilmore in 1841, under the provisions of the Church Temporalities act, passed Aug. 1833.

ELSINOE, Zealand, Denmark, formerly the station for receiving the Sound dunes (which see). Population, 1910, about 15,000.

ELSSEWICK, a township of Newcastle-on-Tyne, the site of the great works of Lord Armstrong & Co. The engineering department began about 1847, the ordnance works in 1857, see Armsow. Since then the naval construction has been largely carried on. About 20,000 workmen employed now. Great fire at the works, estimated damage, 150,000/. 10 June, 1899.

EL-TEB, Battle of, 29 Feb. 1884. See Sudan.

ELY, an island in Cambridgeshire, on which a church was built about 673, by Etheldreda, queen of Egfrid, king of Northumberland; she also founded a religious house, filled it with virgins, and became herself first abbess. The 1200th anniversary was celebrated 17-21 Oct. 1873; about 60,000/ had then been spent on the restoration of the cathedral. The Danes ruined the convent about 876; but a monastery was built in 879, on which King Edgar and succeeding monarchs bestowed great privileges and grants of land; whereby it became the richest in England. Richard, the eleventh abbot, wishing to free himself from the bishop of Lincoln, made great interest with Henry I. to get Ely erected into a bishopric, 1108, and his successor Hervaes was the first prelate, 1109. It is valued in the King's books at 21 24f. 18s. 3d; present stated income, 5500/. Population of Isle of Ely 1901, 14,155; 1910 (est.), 17,990.

The secession of the consecration of the Norman church, and of the translation of St. Etheldreda thereto from the Saxon church, celebrated by the archbishop of Canterbury, 17 Oct. 1878.

ELY CHAPEL, Holborn, London, erected in the 14th century, sold for 5250l, 29 Jan. 1874; acquired by the R. C. fathers of the order of Charity, 1874; and finely restored at the expense of the duke of Norfolk and others, opened as St. Etheldreda's chapel, 23 June, 1876.

ELZEVIR, or ELSEVIER, a family of printers, in Holland, whose reputation is based on fine pocket editions of the classics. Louis, the founder, was born in 1597; began business at Leyden in 1639; published about 150 works and died 4 Feb. 1677. His sons (especially Bonaventure) and grandsons, were celebrated for their work.

EMANCIPATION, see Roman Catholics and Slavery. The Emancipation Society for slaves lasted 1862-5.
EMERALD, a precious stone, of a green colour, found in the East and in Peru. It has been erroneously alleged that there were no true emeralds in Europe before the conquest of Peru; but there is one in the Paris Museum, taken from the mitre of pope Julius II, who died in 1513, and Peru was not conquered till 1545. It is stated that there were mines at Gébel Zabara worked by Egyptians, 1800 B.C.

EMERGENCY MEN, a name given to the more energetic members of the Irish Defence Association; and especially to the men engaged in carrying out evictions in Ireland. See Mansion House Funds, 1881.

EMESIA, now Homs, Syria, renowned for a temple of the sun, the priest of which, Hassaniel, was proclaimed emperor with the name Helogabalus or Elagabalus, 218. His atrocities led to his assassination, 11 March, 222.

EMIGRANTS. The French aristocracy and clergy (émigrés) began to leave their country in July, 1789, at the breaking out of the revolution: their estates were confiscated in Dec. A large number returned in 1802, by an amnesty granted after the peace of Amiens. Many were indemnified after the restoration in 1815.

EMIGRATION. Phœnician and Greek emigrants colonised the coasts of the Mediterranean and the Black Sea; see Magna Graecia, Marseilles, &c. The discovery of America opened a vast field for emigration, which was restrained by Charles I. in 1657. It has been greatly encouraged since 1819. Regulations for emigration were made in 1831, and in Jan., 1843, the Colonial Land and Emigration Board was established. Emigration much promoted through want of employment in London, 1839-70; from Ireland, by act passed, 1853. Much emigration from Great Britain and Germany to America, 1881-5. Fare of steerage passengers from Britain to America by steamers reduced to about 47. Jan. 1885.

The "Order of the Sons of St. George," at Philadelphia, which was established to succour emigrants, still exists. (See under George, St.) It published a letter dissuading unsuitable emigrants from coming, 7 July, 1879.

A tax of 2s. per head levied in United States on immigrants; act passed by congress in opposition to the govt. and ship-steward companies. Aug. " Association formed to promote State-directed emigration and colonization; see 10 Aug. 1853. About 2000 described children domesticated in Liverpool, and sent to Canada by the agency of Mr. Samuel Smith and Mrs. Birt, reported Dec. 1856 Emigrants' Information Office opened - 7 Oct. The Self-Help Emigration Society, supported by the earls of Abercorn and Roslyn, lords Monmouth and Dorchester and other gentlemen, established in 1854; of great assistance to thousands of emigrants.

Central Emigration Board formed to encourage and assist in promoting the emigration of desirable and suitable persons from the United Kingdom to the British colonies, announced - 27 Nov. 1916.

Emigration from the United Kingdom, in 1845, 2,081; in 1850, 2,533; in 1855, 3,009; in 1864, 90,731; in 1870, 220,584; in 1875, 250,414; in 1880, 248,456; in 1885, 236,049. Of British origin, 1880, 227,242; 1880, 218,116; 1890, 163,822; 1891, 174,715; 1892, 189,822; 1893, 226,509; 1894, 274,187; 1895, 277,471; 1896, 295,357; 1897, 295,685; 1898, 309,230. See Immigration.

Emigration from the United Kingdom from 1815 to 1827; to the United States, 260,626; to British N. America, 29,863; to Australasia, 1,377,857; to the Cape of Good Hope and Natal, 339,005; to all other places, 464,500.

Emigration to North American colonies, West Indies, Cape of Good Hope, New South Wales, Swan River, Van Diemen's Land, &c., in 1820-26, 154,349; in 1829-30, 277,757.

EMBALMING. The ancient Egyptians believing that their souls, after many thousand years, would rehabit their bodies, if preserved entire, embalmed the dead. Some of the bodies, called mummies, buried 2000 years ago, are still perfect. "The physicians embalmed Israel," 1 Esra, i. 2; see Mummies. Carbolic acid was successfully employed by professor Seely in America, in 1868.

The most perfect specimens of modern embalming are preserved in the museum of the royal college of surgeons, one being the body of the wife of Van Bishel, preserved by John Hunter by injecting embalmed spirits of wine, &c., into the arteries and veins; and the other the body of a young woman, who died about 1760, in the infirmary, in the back hospital. During the American War (1866-1869), many soldiers' bodies were embalmed and sent home.

Improvements in embalming made by Prof. Laskowski of Geneva, 1855.

EMBANKMENTS of earth were erected by the ancients for preservation from their enemies and the inundations of the tide. Those of the Egyptians and Babylonians are described by Herodotus and Strabo. To the Romans are attributed the first dikes of Holland, and the embankments of Romney Marsh, considered to be the oldest in Britain. In 1356 Henry III. issued a writ enforcing the support of these works, and his successors followed his example. James I. greatly encouraged the embankment of the Thames. Sir W. Doggade's "History of Embanking" first appeared in 1602; see Drainage, Levens, and Thames.

EMBARGO, from the Spanish embargo, to detain, applied to the restraining ships from sailing. This power was vested in the crown, but is rarely exercised except in extreme cases, and sometimes as a prelude to war. The most memorable instance of embargo were those for the prevention of corn going out of the kingdom in 1706; and for the detention of all Russian, Danish, and Swedish ships in the several ports of the kingdom, owing to the armed neutrality, 14 Jan. 1801; see Armed Neutrality.

EMBER WEEKS, instituted, it is said, by pope Callixtus I. (217-222), to implore the blessing of God on the produce of the earth by prayer and fasting, in which penitents used to sprinkle the ashes (embers) of incineration on their heads. In the English church the Ember days are the Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday, after the following days—the first Sunday in Lent, Whit-sunday, 14 Sept. (Holy Cross), and 13 Dec. (St. Lucia).

EMBROIDERY is usually ascribed to the Phrygians; but the Sidonians excelled in it, and it is mentioned in 1341 B.C. Exodus xxxv. 35 and xxxviii. 25. See Embroidery Tapestry. Embroidery is now done by machinery. The first embroidery machine is said to have been invented by John Duncan of Glasgow in 1814. Helman's embroidery machine was patented by Kellam. Berlin Wool-work has been much improved of late years by the production of more elegant patterns, first published by Mr. Wittich in Berlin, about 1810.

EMILY ST. PIERRE, see United States, 1862.

EMINENCE, a title conferred upon cardinals by pope Urban VIII. Jan. 10, 1631, as more honorable than "Excellency." Previously cardinals had the title of "Protectionis," etc. The grand-master of Malta also obtained this title. Purpur.

EMIN PASHA RELIEF. The committee for the purpose appointed, 1887.

See Sudan 1886-7, and Afiria (German East). The German committee at Berlin, dissolved itself.

Emin Pasha murdered , Oct. 13, 1876.

EMIR, a title of the caliphs among the Turks and Persians, first awarded to the descendants of Mahomet's daughter Fatima, about 650. To such originally was given the privilege of wearing the green turban.

EMISSION THEORY OF LIGHT (advocated by Newton, about 1672), supposes that individual particles pass from the luminous body to the eye, and that each ray of light passes from the sun to the earth, is opposed to the Undulatory Theory (which see), now generally received.

EMILY, an Irish sea, said to have been founded by St. Patrick. Emily was called Inchela-Hair. St. Ailbe was the first bishop in 448. In 1586, the sea was united to Cashel (which see). It is now an inconsiderable village.

EMPAMELMENT. This mode of executing criminals, mentioned by Justinian, and often inflicted in Rome, is still used in Turkey and Arabia. In England the dead bodies of murderers were sometimes staked in this manner, previously to being buried; abolished, 1723. See Suicide.

EMPEROR, from Imperator (ruler), a title conferred on victorious Roman generals.

Augustus Caesar the first Roman emperor, A.D. 27-14.

Valentinian I, first emperor of the west, and Valens, first emperor of the east.

Charles I, first emperor of Germany, crowned by Leo III., 800.

Othman I, founder of the Turkish empire, the first emperor of Turkey.

The Ottoman, 1326; the first emperor of Russia, 1220; the first emperor of China, 1279.

Napoleon Bonaparte, first emperor of the French, 1804.

Don Pedro IV. of Portugal the first emperor of Brazil, 1822.

Turibide, emperor of Mexico, May, 1822; shot, July 29, 1824.

Feudal, I, the first emperor of Hayti, in 1843; deposed, 1859.

William I, first emperor of Germany, 1871.

Maximilian I. emperor of Mexico, April, 1864; shot, July 19, 1867.

Napoleon III., his nephew, founded the second French empire, Dec. 2, 1852, deposed, Sept. 1870.

Queen Victoria, assumes the title of empress of India; proclaimed at Delhi, Jan. 1, 1877.

EMPEROR'S HYMN (of Austria), words by L. L. Hauschka, music by Joseph Haydn, first sung 12 Feb. 1797.

EMPIRE. Empire City, a name given to New York. Empire Club, Constitutional, established 10 Oct. 1881, founded 1883, closed 1888. Empire Route to the east, by the Canadian Pacific Railway; term applied 1887. Empire Bay, inaugurated on 24 May, 1904.

EMPIRICS, a sect of physicians, formed in the 3rd century before Christ, who contended that all reasoning respecting the animal economy was useless, and that experience and observation were the only foundations of medicine. The sect adopted the principles of Aëron of Agrigentum, who flourished about 350 B.C. Empiricum, the name applied to a school in philosophy, which admits of nothing as true but what is the result of experience.

EMPLOYERS OF LABOUR. National Federation of Associated, formed in London on 10 Dec. 1873. The founders were said to employ about 2,000,000, principally in N.W. and N. England. Their object was to counteract the influence of trade unions. The first annual meeting held 24 Feb. 1875.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ACT (to make compensation for personal injuries suffered by workmen not by their own fault), passed for 7 years, 7 Sept. 1880; effects neutral (1884). New act passed 24 Dec. 1888. The stringent application of the spirit of these laws by the decision of the house of lords in the case of Smith v. Charles Baker & Sons on appeal was strongly enforced 21 July, 1891.

New bill introduced 20 Feb. 1874; reintroduced 8 Nov.; the common resist a clause for enabling workmen to sue employers, 10 Nov.; the clause maintained by the lords, 26 Jan.; the bill withdrawn. 28 Feb. 1874.

Workmen's Compensation Act passed, after much discussion (introduced since 6 Aug. 1870) Workmen's Compensation bill, covering accidents to domestic servants, received royal assent, 21 Dec. 1876.

EMployers and Workmen Act, passed 13 Aug. 1875, relates to legal settlement of disputes, &c.

EMPRESS OF INDIA (Imperatrix Indiae), addition to the royal titles of the late Queen Victoria, proclaimed in London, 1 May, 1876.

ENAMELLING was practised by the Egyptians, Chinese, and other nations, and was known in England in the time of the Saxons. At Oxford is an enamelled jewel, which belonged to Alfred, and which, as appears by the inscription, was made by his order, in his reign, about N7. Limoges enamelled ware was popular in the 14th century. Magnificent specimens by Lepic, Elkington, Ema, and others, appeared at the exhibition at Paris.

ENCENIA. 474

1687. See Mosaic. On 19 June, 1682, Madame Rachel (Levison or Leverston) sued Captain Carnegie for £28, for "manumiling his wife's face, and was consulted; see Trials, 1688. She was convicted of fraud in 1687, and died in prison 12 Oct. 1689.

ENCENIA, Greek festivals kept on days on which cities were built and temples consecrated; and in later times, as at Oxford, at the celebration or commemoration of founders and benefactors. Operations for a similar commemoration at Oxford suspended in 1857; restored 21 June, 1876. They were the origin of church-wakes in England, about 600. They were also feasts celebrated by the Jews on the 25th of the ninth month, in commemoration of the Maccabees cleansing the temple, which had been polluted by Antichus Epiphanes, 134 B.C.

ENCAUSTIC PAINTING, encauslbling by fire. Painting with burnt wax is said to have been known to Praxiteles about 370 B.C. This art was revived by M. Bachelier, 1749, by Count Caylus, 1763, and by Miss Greenland, 1785 and 1792.

ENCLOSURE, see Inclusion.

ENCRATITIS, followers of Tatian, about 170, denounced marriage, and abstained from flesh, and from wine even at the Lord's supper.

ENCUMBERED ESTATES ACT: passed July 1830, to enable owners of land or leases in Ireland, subject to encumbrances, to apply to commissions appointed under it to direct a sale of such property. These commissioners held their first court in Dublin, 24 Oct. 1830, and their last 28 July, 1838, a new court being established under the Landed Estates Act. The number of estates sold, up to 1858, was 2,280, producing twenty-two millions of pounds. In 1854 a similar act was passed for the West Indies.

ENCYCLOPEDIA or CYCLOPEDIA, a general dictionary of art, science, and literature. This name has been given to a work by Abulpharagius in the 13th century.

The "Prospectation Revisum," an encyclopaedic work in Latin, attributed to Bartholomew Anglicus, a Franciscan (praved to be incorrectly named "churchill"), was written about 1127 and 1128, and translated into several languages. The first English version, by John of Batholomew Wydliche, in 1347, was printed between 1477 and 1492, and was devised from the source from which Shakespeare, Spenser, and other writers derived much of their knowledge of natural history. "Medieval oracles being classified drawings," from this work, edited by Robert Steele, published, 1793.

ENDERBY LAND, see Southern Continent.

ENDOSMOSIS. M. Dutrochet, about 1829, found that if two fluids, gases or vapours, of unequal density, are separated by an animal or vegetable membrane, the denser will attract the less dense through the medium. This property he called endosmos, when the attraction is from the outside to the inside, and exosmos is when it operates from the inside to the outside. Many natural phenomena are thus more clearly understood. Brande.

ENDOWED SCHOOL COMMISSION (consisting of Lord Lyttelton, canon Robinson, and others), was appointed under the act 32-33 Vict. c. 50 (2 Aug. 1869). It threw open many endowments to the nation, and carried out reforms, being frequently much opposed. By an act passed 7 Aug. 1874, its duties were transferred to the charity commissioners.

ENDOWED SCHOOLS ACT, containing the "Conscience Clause," passed 1869; another similar act passed 2 Aug. 1869. A committee reported on the working of the act, June, 1887.

ENERGY. In an address to the British Association at York, 1 Sept. 1861, Sir William Thomson described the sources of all the energy in nature available to man for the production of mechanical effect, as tides, food, fuel, wind and rain, except the tides derived from the sun.

The duke d'Enghien, a descendant of the great Condé, was seized in Baden by order of Bonaparte, conveyed to Vincennes, and, after a lusty trial, shot by torch-light, immediately after condemnation, 21 March, 1834. The body was exhumed, 20 March, 1816.
ENGLAND.

ENGINEERS. Military, formerly called Trench-masters. Sir William Pelham officiated as trench-master in 1622; the chief engineer was called camp-master-general in 1794. Capt. Thomas Rudd had the rank of chief engineer to the king about 1650. The corps of royal engineers was formerly a civil corps, but was made a military force, and directed to work with the artillery, 25 April, 1757. It has a colonel-in-chief, 16 colonels-commandant, and 16 colonels. Civil Engineering began in England about 1403, when Sweaton established the Eddystone lighthouse, and drained the Bridgewater canal. Since then the Remises, Telford, the Stephenson's and Brunel, Locke, and others have constructed breakwaters, docks, bridges, railways, tunnels, &c., which are the marvels of our age.

"Engineering is the art of directing the great sources of power in nature for the use and convenience of man." (The Trench-dweller, died 1829.)

The first society of Civil Engineers formed by Sweaton and others, afterwards termed the Statesman Society of Civil Engineers. Institution of Civil Engineers established 2 Jan., 1789; obtained a charter, 3 June, 1828; 352 members.

In 1847 Institution of Mechanical Engineers, which has its headquarters in Birmingham, moved to London, 1827; annual meetings are held, established.

The Society of Engineers established for the advancement of the science and practice of engineering, May 1854; John Corry Fell, president, 1899. Annual meetings held.

ENGLAND (from Angles and land, land), so named, it is said, by Egbert, first king of the English, in a general council held at Winchester, 829; or by Athelstan, 925. See Anglo-Saxons. England was united to Wales, 1285; to Scotland in 1603; they had the same legislature since 1707, when the British States-General first adopted the title of king of England. Scotland afterwards Great Britain, France, and Ireland. After the treaty of Amiens, signed 27 March, 1802, France was omitted from the royal style. Ireland was incorporated with them, by the act of legislative union, 1 June, 1801, as the United Kingdom of Great Britain, France, and Ireland. The British Empire comprises about 11,500,000 square miles of territory, with 416,000,000 inhabitants in 1901. Statistical details are given under the respective headings, Army, Navy, Revenue, Population, &c.

For previous history, see Britain, Histories of England, by Rapin (in English), 1725-38; Thomas Carlyle, 1847-55; David Hume, 1755-62; Tobias Smollett, 1757-65; John de Manderville, 1789-93; Charles Knight, 1850-62; J. "I must once again give expression to my deep sense of the loyalty and affectionate sympathy evinced by my subjects in every part of my empire on an occasion more sad and tragical than any but one which has befallen me and mine, as well as the nation. The overwhelming misfortune of my dearly loved grandson having been thus suddenly cut off in the flower of his age, full of promise for the future, and appearing to be going forward in a way to endearing himself to all, renders it hard for his sorely stricken parents, his dear young bride, and his fond grandmother, to bow in submission to the ineradicable decree of Providence."—22 Feb. 1892.

"The sympathy of millions, which has been so touchingly and visibly expressed, is deeply gratifying at such a time, and I wish, both in my own name and that of my children, to express from my heart, my warm gratitude to all."—22 Feb. 1892.

These testimonies of sympathy with us, and appreciation of my dear grandson, whom I loved as a son, and whose devotion to me was as great as that of a son, will be a help and consolation to me and mine in our affliction.

My bereavements during the last thirty years of my reign have indeed been heavy. Though the labours, anxieties, and responsibilities inseparable from my position have been great, yet it is my earnest prayer that God may continue to give me health and strength to work for the good and happiness of my country and Empire while life lasts.

"Victoria, R.I."—22 Feb.

"ENGLISHMAN," a newspaper edited by Dr. Kenealy, published in April, 1874, soon after the conviction of the editor of the Times. For its libellous character, the editor was disbanched by the society of Gray's Inn, 1 Aug. 1874.

ENGRAVING on signs is mentioned Exod. xxviii. 14. Engraving on plates and wood began about the middle of the 15th century. Engraving on glass was perfected by Tournaire, of Paris, 1700. The copyright to engravings has been protected by several statutes, among the principal are the acts 16 & 18 Geo. III. 1775 and 1777; and the acts 7 & 8 Vict. 6 Aug. 1844, and 15 Vict. 28 May. 1852. A process of enlarging and reducing engravings by means of shears of vulcanised indiarubber, was shown by the electro-printing block company in 1860; see Lithography and Photo-Galenography.

ENGRAVING on copper. Prints from engraved copper-plates made their appearance about 1450, and were first produced in Germany. Masso, so named Fingier, is considered to have been the first Italian engraver, about 1440. (See Nieuwe.)

The earliest date known of a copper-plate engraving is 1470.

Rolling-presses for working the plate invented in 1515.

Of the art of etching on copper by means of aquafortis, Francis Mazzoni, or Parmeggiano, is the reputed inventor, about 1532. In Tiles.
Etching was practised by Albert Durer, and most especially by Rembrandt. Its revival began about 1850. Eminent modern etchers—Messrs. Lalanne, P. G. Hamerton, F. Seymour Haden, Braqueghillon, Jacques-Cardinal, and others. The Etching Club was established in 1857.

The Royal Society of Painter-Etchers formed; opened an exhibition, April, 1858; annual exhibitions, 27 April, 1859, &c.

Engraving on Wood, long known in China, began in Europe with the woodcutters or manufacturers of playing-cards, about 1490 (see Playing-cards). The art is referred by some to a Florence, and by others to Rembrandt, but was greatly improved by Durer (1471-1528) and Lucas van Leyden (1494-1533). Much was improved in England by Bewick and his brother, and pupils, Nesbitt, Anderson, &c., 1492 of sq. The earliest wood engraving which has reached our times is one representing St. Christopher carrying the infant Jesus over the sea; it bears date 1475.

International society of wood engravers; and annual dinner, 27 April, 1859; Mr. George Dalziel, eminent wood engraver, died, aged 66, 4 Aug. 1889.

Engraving on Steel, to be hardened afterwards, was introduced into England, 1859.

John Fyfe, 'father of English landscape engraving,' born 1782; died 6 Feb. 1874.

Mezzotinto is said to have been discovered by Col. von Stiegel in America, about 1750; and by Mr. Increase Mather in America, about 1754. See British Museum, 1873.

An improved mezzotinto, by which a strong and beautiful effect is produced, was invented by the celebrated French artist, St. Aout, about 1862; he communicated his invention, to Le Prince, Barabite of Paris was distinguished for his improvements in this kind of engraving, 1765.

Chiaro-oscurro engraving originated with the Germans, and was first practised by Mair, one of whose prints bears date 1493 (see Zinn, &c).

New method of representing and printing illustrations, combining the intaglio or photogravure process of making engraved plates with the lithographic process, was devised and patented about 1840 by Jos. Wilson Swan, D. Sc., F. R. S., and his son, Mr. Donald Cameron Swan. See Times, 28 Aug. 1906.

ENIGMARELLE. An automaton constructed of 75 different parts, actuated by electricity. The figure rides a bicycle, writes its name upon a blackboard, and performs various other actions similar to a human being. Exhibited at the London Hippodrome, June 1905.

ENLISTMENT. No persons enlisting as soldiers or sailors are to be sworn in before a magistrate in less than twenty-four hours after, and they are then at liberty to withdraw upon their returning the enlistment or bounty money, and 21st costs. Enrollment is now entirely voluntary. In 1874 the term of enlistment was limited to ten years for the infantry, and twelve years for the cavalry, artillery, and royal marine; and in 1887, to twelve years, frequently altered since. See Army, 1867; and 1879, and Foreign Enlistment.

ENNISKILLEN (X. W. Ireland). This town made an absolute defence against the army of Elizabeth, 1554, and re-cistred James I., 1609, 1700. Enniskilleners met his general M'Carty at Newton Butler with 6000 men (of whom 3000 were slain, and nearly all the rest made prisoners), they losing but twenty men, 30 July, 1689. The dragon regiment, the 6th (Limmiskilling) Dragoons, was originally recruited here. A foot regiment, the Royal Limmiskilling Fusiliers, takes its name from the town.

ENOCH, BOOK OF, an apocryphal work, quoted by the fathers, disappeared about the 5th century. A MS. Ethiopic version was found in Abyssinia by Bruce, and brought to England in 1773. Of this, archbishop Laurence published an English translation in 1821, and the Ethiopic text in 1875.

ENSIGNAGE (from sifo, a pit), a system of preserving corn and green fodder for cattle in pits made in the mud air and water eight, practised by French and other agriculturists; described by M. Geoffart and by professor Thorard Rogers, M. P., in his "Ensignage," published 1883. Ensignage reported successful at Pockforton, Cheshire, 27 Nov. 1883; commended by the prince of Wales and others at a meeting of the Institute of Agriculture, 17 March, 1883; ensignage found successful in India, 1884. Favourable reports of a private practical and scientific commission issued, 5 Aug. 1885 and 12 May, 1886; opinions differ as to economy. Ensignage with building silos practised in 1887.

ENSISHEIM (E. France). Here Turenne defeated the Imperial army, and expelled it from Alsace, 4 Oct. 1654.

ENTAIL of estates began with the statute of Westminster, 1285. Subsequent legislation broke the entail in cases of treason (1522), when the estate is to revert to the crown, and of bankruptcy (1831) and 1839, when it is to be sold. The law of entail in Scotland was amended in 1875.

EXTENTE CORDIALE, a popular term used to designate the feelings of mutual regard and goodwill which have been developed recently between France and England, due in a large measure to the efforts of King Edward VII. to establish a better understanding between the people of the two nations, in which the King has been cordially supported by M. Loubat, president of the French Republic. The visit of King Edward to Paris, 1-4 May, 1913, and the cordial reception accorded to M. Loubat on his visit to London, 7-9 July, 1913, prepared the way for the Anglo-French agreement, signed 8 April, 1914, which amicably solved questions that had been a source of friction and distrust between the two countries. This good understanding was further strengthened by the demonstrations of both powers to maintain neutrality during the Russo-Japanese war, 1904-5 (which see), and the goodwill and enthusiasm evoked by the visit of the British Atlantic fleet to Brest, 17-17 July, 1915, and the return visit of the French Northern squadron to Portsmouth, 7-14 Aug. 1915. See England.

ENTOMOLOGY, the science of insects, now mainly based upon the arrangement of Linnaeus, 1739. Ray's "Methodus Insectorum," 1705; "Insectorum Historia," 1704. The Entomological Society of London was instituted 3 May, 1853; was made Royal, 1875. Mr. Swift began, honorary consulting entomologist to the Royal Agricultural Society, 1882-1902; her 24th last annual report respecting insects issued March, 1911 (she died 10 July, 1901, aged 73).

ENVELOPES for letters are mentioned by Swift, 1720. Stamped adhesive envelopes came into general use shortly after the establishment of the penny postal system, on 10 Jan. 1840. Machinery for their manufacture was patented by Mr. George Wilson in 1844, and by Messrs. E. Hill and Warren de la Rue, 17 March, 1845.

EQUINOXES, asserting to be the earliest known form of life, and a species for animal life. By the late Professor J. W. Dawson, of Montreal, in Laurentian limestone in 1858, see "Geology."

EPACT (Greek, added): is the excess of the solar month above the lunar synodical month, 1 day, 14 hours, 15 minutes, 57 seconds, the lunar month being only 29 days, 12 hours, 44 minutes, 3 seconds; and the excess of the solar year above the lunar synodical year (nearly 11 days), the lunar year being 354 days. The epact of any year indicates the moon's age on the 1st Jan. in that year.

The number of the Gregorian epacts 1000 to 1900 is:

- 1975: 16
- 1985: 17
- 1995: 18
- 2000: 19

EPEPANEY (N.E. France), seat of the trade in champagne, was taken from the League by Henry IV., 26 July, 1592, when marshal Armand Biron was killed.

EPHEMUS, in Asia Minor, a city said to have been founded by the Carians and Leleges, burnt by the Amazons, re-built by the Lenians about 105 B.C. It was subdued by Cyrus in 541 B.C.; revolted from the Persians, 301 B.C. and was destroyed by an earthquake in A.D. 17. See Diana, Temple of, and Seven Churches. Paul preached here A.D. 53, 59. Acts xviii. 9. His epistle to the Ephesians dates A.D. 56.

The third general council was held here in 431. After investigation, begun in 1803, Mr. J. T. Wood discovered the site of the temple of Diana in April, 1870; and about 60 tons of marble were shipped at Smyrna for the British Museum. Jan., 1872, part of which arrived in the summer. The site of the temple was re-purchased for the British Museum by Mr. J. T. Wood and resumed his excavations, summer, 1883. Further excavations by Mr. G. D. Hogarth, Oct., 1904; complete ground plan of temple of Diana discovered. See Diana.

EPHORI, powerful magistrates of Sparta, five in number, said to have been first created by Theopompus to control the royal power, about 757 B.C.

EPIC POEMS (from Greek tropes, a song, narrative in verse. Eminent examples:

- Homer's "Iliad" and "Odyssey" (Greek), between the 9th and 10th century B.C. (See Homer).
- Mahâ-bhârata, (sanskrit, very ancient), by several anonymous authors known to have been written between 2250 and 1000 B.C. (See Mahâ-bhârata).
- Virgil's "Aeneid" (Roman) about 200 B.C.
- Ovid's "Metamorphoses" (Greek), about 100 B.C.
- Lucretius "Pharsalia" (Italian), 60 B.C.
- Dante's "Divine Comedy" (Italian) published about 1300.
- Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales" (English) 1387.
- Shakespeare's "Hamlet" (English) 1603.
- Tasso's "Jerusalem Delivered" (Italian) 1581.
- Spenser's "Faerie Queene" (English) 1587.
- Milton's "Paradise Lost" (English) 1667.
- Voltaire's "Candide" (French) 1759.
- Walter Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel" (English) 1805.
- Rymer's "Fosbroke Hall" (English) 1807.
- K. Browning's "The Ring and the Book" (English) 1869.
- A. Tennyson's "Midas" (English) 1878.

EPICURIAN PHILOSOPHY. Epicurus of Gargaretta, near Athens, about 347 B.C., taught that the greatest good consists in peace of mind springing from virtue, as tending to prevent disgust; but the name epicurean is frequently given to those who derive happiness from sensual pleasure. See Epicurean.

EPIDAMUS (Greek), celebrated for the temple of Asclepius, or Atlantaphis, god of medicine, and enriched by gifts from persons healed. The Romans sent an embassy to seek the help of the god during a pestilence, and his worship was introduced at Rome, 243 B.C. The temple was visited by Emilius Paulus, after his conquest of Macedonia, 167 B.C.

EPIDEMICS.

EPIDEMIOLOGICAL SOCIETY OF LONDON. Established in 1856; has done valuable work. Dr. Charles Gringeborough's "History of Epidemics in Britain," 3 vols. 1895.

EPIDRAMUS. Marcus Valerius Martialis, the Latin epigrammatist, who flourished about A.D. 83, is allowed to have excelled all others, ancient or modern. The following epigram on Christ's turning water into wine (John iii.) is an example:—

"Vidit et erubuit lympba pudica Deum." "The modest water saw its God, and blushed." Crispius (died 1626).

EPINHAN (appearance), a feast (Jan. 6), termed Twelfth Day, celebrates the manifestation of the Saviour, by the appearance of the star which conducted the Magi to the place where he was to be found, early observed, but became a separate feast, 813. Whitsuntide.

EPIRUS (Northern Greece). Its early history is very obscure.

The first Persians (Neopatride) settled in Epirus, after the Trojan war, 1160 B.C., and was killed in the temple of Delphi, about B.C. 1145.

Alexander the first king invades Italy to assist the Tarantine against the Macedonians. &c., is defeated and slain at Pandosia, B.C. 356.

Perseus the Great reigned, 245; he takes Macedon from Demetrius; is compelled to yield to Lysimachus in 287.

Invaded by the Tarantine, invades Italy, see Rome.

Temporarily success in Sicily, 275-62 B.C.

He takes Macedon from Antigonus, 273.

He unsuccessfully invades Sparta; enters Argos, and is killed by a tile, thrown by a woman, 272.

Philip unites Epirus to Macedon, 229.

Its conquest by the Romans, 167.

Epirus annexed to the Ottoman empire, A.D. 1466.

An insurrection against the Turks put down, 1854.

EPISTEMOLOGY. A science of the sciences.

EPISTLES or LETTERS. An Egyptian letter about 1300 B.C. is translated in "Records of the Past," vol. 6. A letter was sent to Job by David by the hand of Uriah, about 1035 B.C. (2 Sam. xi. 14); see under article Bible. Horace Walpole, renowned for his letters, was born 5 Oct., 1717; died 2 March, 1757. The collection entitled "Elegant Epistles," commencing with Cicero, was published in 1709. It ends with an essay on letter writing by Dr. Johnson.

EPITAPHES were inscribed on tombs by the Egyptians, Jews, Greeks, and Romans. Mr. T. J. Pettigrew published a collection entitled "Chronicles of the Tombs," in 1857.

EPITHELALUMEN. A nuptial song at marriage. Tiusis, the lyric poet, is said to have been the first writer of one. He received the name of Steichinos, from the alterations made by him in music and dancing, about 500 B.C. (See Bossuet.

EPOCHS. Points of time made remarkable by some event, from which subsequent years are reckoned by historians and chronologers; see Era.

See Anna Domini, Regni, &c.
EPPING FOREST. see Forests, note.

EPSOM (Surrey). The mineral springs were discovered in 1618. The races began about 1711, and have been held annually since 1730. See Derby Day. Population, 1901, 10,095.

EQUATION OF TIME. See Geodesy.

EQUATOR or ECUADOR, a South American republic, formerly Quito and other provinces, part of Columbia, 1821; independent in 1833; when the Columbia republic was divided into three, the others being Guayaquil, and New Granada, Area, including Galapagos Islands (2,400 sq. miles), 120,000 sq. miles. Capital Quito, pop. 26,000. The population of Equator in 1885, 1,004,651; 1910, about 1,276,468. Revenue 1,218, 300d.; expenditure, 1,533,717; revenue 1,390,218; expenditure, 1,276,087. Venuza, reported 16 Aug. Quito taken by gen. Eloy Alfaro, made dictator, Sept. 28, 1895; elected president, reported, 15 Jan., 1897. Rebels routed at San Amaya, 24 Jan, 1899. Gen. Plaza succeeds gen. Alfaro as president. 31 Aug. 1901. Treaty between Ecuador and Colombia by which the Ecuador-Colombian boundary is submitted to the arbitration of the German emperor, Nov. 1904. Libertador Garcia, president, 31 Aug. 1905. President, Eloy Alfaro, 1906. General elections, 18 May, 1907. The elections brought 200,000 votes for the Conservatives, and 200,000 for the Social Democrats. The former formed a majority of 151. The president, Eloy Alfaro, died 18 May, 1910. Gen. Alfaro proclaimed head of the government. 28 Jan., 1910. Earthquake shocks in province of Esmeraldas; several persons killed at Porto Vargas; city of Esmeraldas nearly inundated by a tidal wave. 3 Jan., 11 Feb. Mutiny among the garrison of La Plata. Three officers and 25 citizens reported killed and a number injured. 24 Dec. Railway accident near Riobamba; train falls over a cliff 180 ft. high; 25 persons killed, 40 injured. 24 Feb., 1909. See Earthquakes, 1878.

EQUESTRIAN ORDER in Rome was established with Romulus, about 750 B.C., see Knighthood.

EQUINOX. When the sun in his progress passes through the equator in one of the equatorial points, the day and night are equal all over the globe. This occurs twice in the year; about 21 March, the vernal equinox, and 22 Sept., the autumnal equinox. The equatorial points move backwards about 50 seconds yearly, requiring 25,000 years to accomplish a complete revolution. This is called the precession of the equinoxes, which is said to have been observed by the ancient astronomers.

EQUITY, COURTS OF, are those of the lord chancellor, the vice-chancellors, and the masters of the rolls, their office being to correct the operations of the literal text of the law, and supply its defects by reasonable construction not admissible in a court of law. The supreme court of session in Scotland combines the functions of law and equity. In 1805 equity powers were conferred on the county courts for cases respecting sums under 50£. See Supreme Court.

ERASTIANISM, the opinions of Thomas Liener (latinised Erastus), a German physician (1524-83), who taught that the church had no right to exclude any person from church ordinances, to fill ecclesiastical, &c. Persons who acknowledge the jurisdiction of the civil power in spiritual matters and the law of patronage are now termed Erastians.

ERASURES. By order of sir John Romilly, master of the rolls, in 1855, no document corrected by erasure with the knife was to be hereafter received in his court. The errors must be corrected with the pen. It is so in the army courts.

ERFURT (Central Germany), was founded in 476; and its university established about 1390. Erfurt was ceded to Prussia in 1802. It capitulated to Murat, when 14,000 Prussian troops surrendered, 16 Oct. 1806. In this city Napoleon and Alexander met, and offered peace to England, 27 Sept. 1808. The French retreated to Erfurt from Leipzig, 18 Oct. 1813. A German parliament met here in March and April, 1850. Population, 1900, 85,190; 1905, 98,840.

ESQUIRES, among the Greeks and Romans, were arm-bearers to, or attendants on a knight. In England the knight esquires by putting about their necks the collars of SS, and bestowing upon them a pair of silver spurs. John de Kingston was created a squire by patent, 13 Richard II., 1399-90. There are now legally esquires by birth, by creation, and by holding some office, but the title is very loosely given by courtesy.

"ESSAYS AND REVIEWS," by six clergy-men and one layman of the church of England (the Rev. Drs. Fred. Temple and Rowland Williams, professor Laden Powell, H. B. Wilson, Mark Pattison, and Richard Goodwin) were published in an 8vo vol. in March, 1870. The book did not excite much attention at first, but having been severely censured for heterodox views by nearly all the bishops and many of the clergy, it created much excitement in 1861, and was condemned by consivocation 24 June, 1864. The ecclesiastical courts sentenced the revs. R. Williams and H. B. Wilson to suspension for one year, and costs, 15 Dec. 1862; but on appeal the sentence was reversed by the judicial committee of the privy council, 8 Feb. 1874. The election of Dr. Temple to the see of Exeter was much opposed on account of his essay in this collection; see Church of England, 1869 and Broad Church.

ESSEX, a town in Rhenish Prussia, which began with the Benedictine nunnery, about 873. Among the iron and steel manufactories, the chief are those of Krupp, established 1810, in which were employed 71 men in 1849, and 5,000 in 1862, when the works contained 1,600 furnaces, 650 steam-hammers, 957 steam-engines, and other great apparatus. A Christian miners' congress held, 124 delegates present; opposed to the social democrats, 26 Aug. 1894. See Cannon. Population, 1908, 118,163; 1915, 231,390. See Westphalia, 1859.

ESTE, HOUSE OF. Boniface, count of Lucca and duke of Tuscany, about 811 is said to have descended from Odoacer, King of Italy. From Boniface sprang Albert Azzo II, marquis of Italy, and lord of Este, born about 920, who married first, Cuncitonda of the house of Guelf, by whom he had Guelf, duke of Bavaria, the ancestor of the house of Brunswick (see Bavaria and Brunswick); and secondly, Gesonda, by whom he had Fulk, the ancestor of the Este, dukes of Ferrara and Modena.

ETHER was known to the earliest chemists. Nitric ether was first discovered by Kunkel, in 1801; and muriatic ether, from the chloride of tin, by Courtanvall, in 1759. Acetic ether was discovered by count Lararagian, same year; and hydrastic ether was first prepared by Gay-Lussac. The gas forming ether obtained by M. Bouly.

The discovery that by inhaling ether the patient rendered unconscious of pain, is due to Dr. C. T. Jackson, of Boston, U.S. Mr. Thomas Morton, of the same place, first introduced it into surgical practice, under Dr. Jackson's directions (1846); see Chloroform, and Amylone. The drinking of ether as an intoxicant greatly increased in the north of Ireland, was checked by the enforcement of the Poisons Act of 1870, in regard to its sale, 9 Aug. 1871. The term "ether" was applied to the transparent celestial space by the German astronomer Eck, about 1829, when studying the elements of Pons' comet, discovered in 1818. Ether is now believed by scientists to be the medium by which heat, light, electricity, etc. are transmitted through space. See Wireless Telegraphy under Electricity, 1879 et seq.

ETHICS (Greek term for Moraia). The works of Plato, Aristotle, and Confin, contain heathen systems; the New Testament is that of Christianity. Paley's Moral Philosophy appeared in 1775; and Whewell's Elements of Morality in 1815. An Ethical Society existed in London, 1890. Many notable books on the subject have been written.

ETHIOPIA. The name was applied anciently rather vaguely to countries the inhabitants of which had semi-borne complexions, in Asia and Africa; but is now considered to apply properly to the modern Nubia, Senmaar, and Northern Abyssinia. Many pyramids exist at Napsa, the capital of Meroë, the civilised part of ancient Ethiopia.

ETHNIKE HETARIA. an enthusiastic Greek national society, founded Nov. 1894; a revolutionary movement made by them in Mace- donia summer, 1897; their forces were reported to have begun the war with Turkey. See Greece, 10 April, 1893, et seq.; denied by them, Dec. 1897.

ETNOLOGY, a branch of Anthropology, is defined as the science "which determines the distinctive characters of the persistent modifications of mankind, their distribution, and the causes of the modifications and distribution." The study of the relations of the different divisions of mankind to each other is of recent origin. Balbi's Ethnographic Atlas was published in 1829, and Dr. Prichard's great work, Researches on the Physical History of Mankind, 1847, the Ethnological Society, established in 1843, published transactions. On 17 Jan. 1871, it was amalgamated with the Anthropo-

ETHYL, a compound radicle, a colourless gas, with a slightly ethereal odour, a compound of carbon and hydrogen, first obtained in the free state by professor (att. sir; died in Aug. 1893) Edw. Faraday in 1814. Several of its compounds with metals take fire in the air.

ETIENNE, Sr., important industrial town, 30 miles S.W. of Lyons. Second largest coal-field in France. First railways in France were built from here, 1828-1831. Population in 1910, 170,000.

ETNA, MVONT (Sicily). Here were the fabled forges of the Cyclopes; and it is called by Plutarch the home of Vulcan, whom the Romans mentioned as the identical god. Diodorus Siculus as happening 1693 B.C. and Thucydides speaks of three eruptions as occurring 734, 477, and 423 B.C. There were eruptions, 125, 121, and 143 B.C. Lycurgus.

ETON COLLEGE. (Buckinghamshire), founded by Henry VI. in 1440, and designed as a nursery to King's College, Cambridge. John Stanbery, confessor to Henry VI. (bishop of Bangor, in 1418), was nominated the first provost. One of the provosts, William Wyndham, (bishop of Winchester, 1454) greatly promoted the collection of the building, and when about three hundred noblemen's and gentlemen's sons, there were seventy king's scholars on the foundation, who, when properly qualified, were formerly elected, on the first Tuesday in August, to King's College, Cambridge, and removed there when there were vacancies, according to seniority. The establishment of the Monton is nearly coeval with the college. It consisted in the procession of the scholars, arrayed in fancy dresses, to Salt-hill once in three years; the donations collected on the road (sometimes as much as 800l.) were given to the senior or best scholar, their captain, for his support while studying at Cambridge. The monton was discontinued in 1814. The college system was modified by the Public Schools act, 1865.

In 1873 election Saturday ceased, the scholars to be elected at Cambridge being chosen there. In 1880 there were 853 students; in 1898, 1,620. King's scholars who enter college between 12 and 14 years of age are known as "Collegers," the remainder, who enter between the ages of 10 and 14 are known as "Oppidians." Motto, "Floreat Etona." Eton Mission at Hackney wick, is supported by past and present Etonians.

ETRURIA (or TUSCIA), hence the modern name Tuscany), a province of Italy, whence the Romans, in a great measure, derived their laws, customs, and superstitions. Herodotus assures that the country was conquered by a colony of Lydians. The subjugation of this country forms an important part of early Roman history. It was most powerful under Porson of Clusium, who attempted to reinstate the Tuscan, 506 B.C. It was taken by Camillus, 396 B.C. A truce between the Romans and Etruscans for forty years was concluded, 351 B.C. The latter and their allies were defeated at the Vadimino lake, 310, with the Boi their allies, 283 B.C., and totally lost their independence about 245 B.C. The vases and other works of the Etruscans still remaining, show the degree of their civilisation. Napoleon I. established a kingdom of Etruria, 1810, and suppressed it 1807; see Tuscany.—Etruria, Staffordshire, was founded in 1771.

EUBEA, the largest island in the Egean sea. Two of its cities, Chalces and Eretria, were very important, till the former was subdued by Athens, 506 B.C. and the latter by the Persians, 490. After the Persian war, Eubea became wholly subject to Athens, and was its most valuable possession. It revolted in 445, but was soon subdued by Pericles. After the battle of Chaeronea, 338, it became subject to Macedonia. It was made independent by the Romans in 194; but was afterwards incorporated in the province of Achaia. It now forms part of the kingdom of Greece.

EUCALYPTUS GLOBULUS, or Blue Gum Tree, a very fast-growing Tasmanian evergreen, of the order Myrtaceae. From the extraordinary power of its roots of absorbing moisture, and the salutary aromatic odour of its leaves, it has been found highly beneficial in counteracting the malaria of marshy districts of hot climates, and hence has been named the fever-destroying tree.
M. Ramel first sent seeds from Melbourne to Paris in 1854, and subsequently seeds were distributed over the south of Europe, the north and south of Africa, and elsewhere. He died in 1881.

So rapid is the growth of this tree, that a forest may be placed where none existed before. It sometimes attains the height of 350 feet, with a circumference of 100 feet, rivaling Wellingtonia gigantea, which see.

The timber, bark, and oils of the Eucalyptus are highly valuable, and professor Bentley says that the genus is one of the most important to man in the vegetable kingdom.

EUCHEl), thanksgiving, an early name for the Lord’s Supper; see Sacrament.

EUCLID’S ELEMENTS. Euclid, a native of Alexandria, flourished about 323-283 B.C. The Elements are not wholly his; for many of the demonstrations were derived from Thales, Pythagoras, Eudoxus, and others; Euclid reduced them to order, and probably inserted many theorems of his own. The Elements were first printed at Basel by Simon Grynaeus, in 1533. Euclid is said to have told the king of Ptolemy that there was no royal road to geometry.

EULIDIEN, an apparatus to ascertain the purity of atmospheric air, or the quantity of oxygen or vital air contained in it; one was invented by Marsilio Landriani, and described by him in his Ricercie, 1775; Dr. Priestley is said to have first used Fontana’s eudiometer in 1770.

Gmelin.

EUGUBINE TABLES, seven tablets of brass, probable date about 400 B.C. (with inscriptions relating to sacrifices, &c., four in Umbrian, two in Latin, and one partly in both dialects), were discovered in 1444 at Gubbio, the ancient Eugubium or Iguvium. The inscriptions are accurately given by Lepsius, in his “Inscriptions Umbriæ et Oscan,” 1841.

EUNUCHS, first mentioned among the Egyptians and Assyrians, and said to have been first employed by Semiramis, queen of Assyria, about 2007 B.C. Eunuchs frequently attained to political power in the later Eastern empire.

EUPTORIA (Kosleep), a sea port on the west coast of the Crimea. After the allied French, English, and Turkish armies landed in the Crimea, 14 Sept. 1854, a detachment under captain Brock occupied this place, which was afterwards reinforced by the Turks. It was attacked 17 Feb. 1855, by 40,000 Russians under Liprandi. The latter were repulsed with the loss of 500 men by the Turks, whose loss was only 50, among which, however, was Selim Pasha, the commander of the Egyptian contingent.

EUPHRATES, the largest river in Western Asia. It rises in Armenia, and has two branches. On its banks are the remains of numerous ancient cities, such as Babylon and Birs Nimrud. The Euphrates Valley Railway, as a speedy means of reaching India, has been much advocated, especially by the late general Chesney, who published his views in the Survey of the Euphrates and Tigris in 1850. A parliamentary commission reported on 11 Aug. 1872, when it was also considered at the meeting of the British association at Brighton. The construction would cost from five to ten millions sterling, and its advantages are considered rather hypothetical by the best judges.

EUPHUIISM, an affected style of language, prevalent in the time of Elizabeth, arose from "Euphues; the Anatomy of Wit," by John Lyly, published in 1581.

EURASIAN PLAIN, the great central plain of Europe and Asia, so named by ethnologists (1805). The offspring of a European father and an Asiatic mother is termed Eurasian. The degraded condition of the Eurasians, which has caused much anxiety, especially at Calcutta, was discussed early in 1851. The Marchioness of Dufferin was deeply interested in the matter about 1883.

EUROPE, the smallest of the three divisions of the old world, really an appendage of Asia; area, nearly 3,800,000 square miles; population, 301,700,000 (1872); 333,054,928 (1888); about 300,000,000 (meeting in London in history, see Greece, Rome, and the modern kingdoms.

EYURDYCE, H.M.S., frigate, founded in a squall off Dumne, near Ventnor, Isle of Wight, 24 March, 1878; see Xero and Woeks, 1878.

EYRUMEDON, a river in Pamphilia, near which Cumon, son of Miltiades, destroyed the fleet of the Persians at Cyprus, and defeated their land forces, 409 B.C.

EUSTACE, ST. (Lower Canada). The rebels were defeated here, 14 Dec. 1837, and compelled to surrender their arms. Their chiefs fled.

EUSTATIUS, ST., a West India island, settled by the Dutch, 1632; taken by the French in 1689; by the British in 1692; and again by the British forces under Rodney and Vaughan, 5 Feb. 1781. It was recovered by the French under the marquis de Bouillé, 20 Nov. same year; captured by the British, 1801, 1810; restored to the Dutch, 1814.

EUSTON SQUARE MYSTERY, see Trials, July, 1879.

EUTAW SPRINGS (S. Carolina). Here the Americans were defeated by the British under Arnold, 8 Sept. 1781.

EUTYCHIANS, so called from Eutyches, an abbot of Constantinople, who asserted in 446 that there was but one nature in Christ, the human having been absorbed in the divine. This doctrine was condemned by councils— at Constantinople in 448, and at Chalcedon in 451. It has been also called Monophysite (of one nature), and Jacobit from Jacobus bar Hebraeus, its zealous defender in the 4th century. It is the form of Christianity now existing among the Copts and Armenians.

EUXINE, see Black Sea.

EVACUATION TREATY see France, Sept. 1871.

EVANGELICAL, a term applied to a portion of the clergy of the church of England (also called the low church), who profess to preach the gospel more purely than their brethren termed the high church party; see Church of England and Free Church.

The Evangelical Alliance was founded by sir Culling Earley Smith and others at Liverpool in 1845, with the view of promoting unity among all denominations of Protestant Christians against Romanism and infidelity. At a general meeting held in London in Aug. 1846, 921 members were present from all parts of the world. Since 1845, annual meetings have been held in various towns in the United Kingdom.

General international conferences have been held. The "Evangelical Church" in Germany began with a fusion of the Lutherans and Calvinists in Nassau in 1817, followed by similar movements in different parts of Germany, 1818-22.
EVANGELISTS, preachers of the "gospel," or good news; see Gospels.

EVELINA HOSPITAL. Southwark, established in 1860 by baron Ferdinand de Rothschild, in memory of his wife. Enlarged 1903.

EVENING SCHOOLS for adults of the lower classes were strongly recommended by bishop Hinds in 1879, and by the committee of the Privity Council on Education in 1884. One was set up at Beta in Wales by the rev. T. Charles in 1881. See under Recreation. Evening Continuation Schools Established by school boards in most towns and cities, now (1910) carried on under the control of the Education Authorities.

EVESHAM Worcestershire), where prince Edward, afterwards Edward I., defeated the barons headed by Simon de Montfort, earl of Leicester, 4 Aug. 1265, when the earl, his son Henry, and most of his adherents were slain. Henry III., at one period of the battle was on the point of being cut down by a soldier who did not know him, but was saved by exclaiming, "Do not kill me, soldier; I am Henry of Winchester, thy king!" This victory broke up the combination of the barons.

EVICTIONS (in Ireland), 182,000 persons evicted from 1874-90, 14,000 reinstated as caretakers, see Ireland, 1886 et seq. Many evicted tenants made use of their landlords, and returned to their farms, 1891-2.

Eviction commision appointed, see Ireland, 14 Oct. 1885. Report recommending reinstatement, see Ireland, 8 May, 1893. 24,000 evictions in Ireland from 1 Oct. 1875, to 30 Sept. 1877; 2,453 from 1 Oct. 1877, to 30 June, 1879; about 4,500.

Bill for compulsory reinstatement of evicted tenants in Ireland; passed by the commons, 7 Aug; rejected by the lords (241-79), 14 Aug., 1879; by the commons, 26 Feb., 1880; again rejected by the lords, 12 April, 1880. Evicted tenants' bill, royal assent. 15 Aug. 1880. 47 evictions in Ireland in 1899.

EVIDENCE, LAW OF, regulated by 41 & 42 Vict., c. 69 (1851), 16 & 17 Vict., c. 83 (1853). 32 & 33 Vict. c. 18 (1860).

Mr. Laidler's application for a mandate of the court of chancery to compel Sir Robert Cotton to deliver evidence, refused 20 Nov. 1875. Documentary Evidence Acts, passed 11 May, 1876. Prisoners in certain criminal cases were permitted for the first time in England to give evidence of their own behalf in 1772, and the practice has been legalized with good effect by statutes up to 1877.

The evidence in Criminal Cases Act, making this practice uniform in all cases, passed 15, 22 Oct. 1877. Evidence Act, 1897—Evidence of colonial statutes proved by production of printed copies 24 Aug. 1877.

EVIL MAY-DAY (1 May, 1517), thus called on account of the violence of the apprentices and populace, directed against foreigners, particularly the French. The rioters were headed by John Lukein, who, with 15 others, was hanged; and 40 more in their shirts, and bound with ropes, and halters about their necks, were carried to Westminster, the cry being "Mercy, mercy!" were all pardoned by the king, Henry VIII.

EVOlUTION THEORY includes the nebular theory and Mr. Darwin's doctrine of natural selection; see Development, and Progressions.

In 1877 three forms of this doctrine were discussed:

1. That of animals gradually from the lowest form, the amoeba, up to man, in opposition to the Biblical account of the creation; 2. that of every animal from prototypes in a cell, or egg; 3. that of all the parts of an animal from its blood. "Organic Evolution cross-examined, or some suggestions on the great secret of Biology," by the duke of Argyll, published 30 April, 1874.

Mr. Alfred Wallace's work on "Natural Selection," published 1876; he was awarded the first Darwin medal by the Royal society, 1879.

EXALTATION, see Cross.

EXAMINATIONS of candidates for employment in the civil service has been enforced since 1855. Mr. Gladstone in 1862 said that the present might be termed the "age of examinations;" see Civil Service.

EXAMINER, liberal weekly journal, established Jan. 1868; last number, 26 Feb. 1891.

EXAMINER OF STAGE PLAYS, an office under the lord-chamberlain, held by Mr. G. A. Redford, appointed March, 1804. Censorship Committee appointed from the two Houses of Parliament to examine into Censorship. Sittings commenced 29 July, 1799. Closed 23 Sept. Report ordered to be printed 2 Nov. 1800.

EXARCHS, appointed by the Byzantine emperors of the East, to govern central Italy after its conquest by Belisarius and Nares, 548-553. They ruled Ravenna from 558 to 752, when Byzantium, the last, was overcome by Astolphus the Lombard. The Exarch in the church was next in dignity to the patriarch.

EXCHANGE, formerly Bourse, the Royal Exchange being "Britain's Bourse." Those at Paris and other continental cities are still named "Bourse" from bourse, a purse. One called Collegium Mercatorum existed at Rome, 493 B.C. The Exchange at Amsterdam was reckoned the finest structure of the kind in the world. See Royal Exchange, and Bills of Exchange. The new building of the Baltic Mercantile and Shipping Exchange, on the site of Jeffrey's square, St. Mary Axe, over 27,500 sq. ft., opened by the lord mayor 21 April, 1893.

EXCHEQUER, an ancient institution, consisting of officers with financial and judicial functions: the chancellor of the exchequer, the financial officer, formerly sat in the court of exchequer above the barons. The first chancellor was Eustace de Fanebrige, bishop of London, in the reign of Henry III, about 1221. Sir Robert Walpole was the last chancellor of the exchequer who acted judicially (in 1743). The legal function of the chancellor was abolished by the Judicature act, Aug. 1873. Charles H. seized on the Goldsmiths' funds in the exchequer to prepare for war, 2 Jan. 1672. The English and Irish exchequers were consolidated by parliament in 1817; see Chancellors of the Exchequers, and Treasury.

EXCHEQUER BILLS. The government securities, so called, said to have been invented by Montague, afterwards earl of Halifax, were first issued in 1667, and first circulated by the bank in 1797. These bills, of which more than twenty million sterling are often in circu-lution, are in effect accommodation notes of government, that are issued in anticipation of taxes, at daily interest; and being received for taxes, and paid by the bank in lieu of taxes, in its dealings with the exchequer, thereby usually bear interest.

Robert Aslett, a cashier of the bank of England, tried for embezzling exchequer bills, and found guilty, on account of the invalidity of the bills, though the actual loss to the bank amounted to 345,627l., 12 July, 1802.

Mr. Beaumont Smith tried for forging exchequer bills to the amount of 350,000l. proved guilty; sentenced to transportation, 4 Dec., 1841.

EXCHEQUER BOXES, a species of public securities, introduced by Mr. W. G. Gladstone, in 1853.

The Chancellors. Besides the chancellors of the exchequer, clerks of the seals, and auditor of the exchequer (offices which have all been discontinued since their last avoidance in Oct. 1826, or by surrender or abolition, in Oct. 1831), there were the four former offices of tellers of the exchequer, also abolished, in Oct. 1814.

John Jeffreys Pratt, earl, afterwards marquis Camden, was appointed a teller of the exchequer, in 1780, and held the appointment until his death, in 1849. During nearly half of this long term he relinquished the income (amounting in the whole to upwards of a quarter of a million sterling) and placed it at the service of the state, as it annually accrued.

COMPTROLLER AND AUDITOR GENERAL OF THE EXCHEQUER. This office was created on the abolition of the offices of the auditor and the four tellers of the exchequer, and the clerk of the seals. The first comptroller-general was Sir John Newport, appointed 11 Oct., 1814, and by him made the accounts of all the courts.

This court is for errors from the judgments of the courts of queen's bench, common pleas, and exchequer of king's bench, which are at present heard, and disposed of, by act 2 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 20 (24 July, 1829). The Exchequer office, Westminster, was instituted by Henry IV. in 1691.

EXCHEQUER, COURT OF (Cursitor Regis), instituted by William I. on the model of the Transmarine Exchequer of Normandy, in 1079, according to some authorities, by Henry II. It included the common pleas until they were separated, 16 John, 1235. Coke's Reports. The exchequer is so named from a chequered cloth which anciently covered the table where the judges and chief officers sat. Here were tried all causes relating to the king's revenue; such as are concerning accounts, disbursements, customs, and fines imposed, with common law between subject and subject. The judges are styled barons, first appointed 1234. There were a chief and four puisne barons: the fifth judge having been added 23 July, 1839. The office of Cursitor Baron was abolished in 1836. For changes, see Supreme Court. The ancient court sat for last time, 10 July, 1875. The Exchequer division was abolished in 1884, in Ireland in 1887. See Supreme Court Judicature Act, passed 27 Aug., 1881.

1784. Thomas Marlay. 27 Sept.

1796. Anthony Foster. 5 Sept.

1798. Walter Hely-Hutchinson. 3 Dec.

* In process of time the court of exchequer became gradually enlarged in its jurisdiction, until at length it was not merely a revenue court and one at common law between subject and subject in which suits in equity were also instituted. In fact, until the act 5 Vict. c. 5 (1834), the court of exchequer possessed a triple jurisdiction; but by this statute its equity business was transferred to the court of chancery.
EXECUTIONS.
The emperor of France, the king of Sarumia, and others, were virtually excommunicated (but not by name) on account of the associations of the Romagna by Sarumia. 20 March, 1860.

Father Geo. Tyrell, bishop of Kilkenny, excommunicated on an account of his criticism of the papal encyclical "Pascendi," condemning modernism, 1907.

EXECUTIONS, see Crime. In the reign of Henry VIII. (38 years) it is said that no less a number than 75,000 criminals were executed. Stow. In the ten years between 1820 and 1830, there were executed in England alone 779 criminals; but as our laws became less severe, the number of executions decreased. In the three years ending 1820, the executions in England and Wales amounted to 412; in the three years ending 1823, they were 178; in the three years ending 1830, they were 62. The place of execution in London (formerly generally at Tyburn) was in front of Newgate from 1783 to 1808, when an act was passed directing executions to take place within the walls of prisons. The execution of the bodies of executed persons was abolished in 1822, see Death, 1808.

John Calcraft, from 1800, executioner for London, 1828-1874, died 1874; Viscount Wm. Walpole, died 1844; his son, Edward, continued the business. The appointment of the judge is entered into by the king's attorney general. The old execution house was on the site of Gresham college in 1771; the present is at Somersethouse. The execution department of the admiralty revenue transferred to the Board of customs, the combined departments to be called the Board of customs and excise, 1 April, 1869. The officers of excise and customs were deprived of the right of returning members to parliament in 1872; but we received them again in 1888. In 1890 the boards of excise, stamps and taxes, were united, as "the board of commissioners of inland revenue." Notwithstanding the abolition of the excise duty upon numerous articles, and the reduction of the duty upon various others, of late years, the total revenue, so far, from having decreased, has progressively advanced (1877 and 1891 excepted) in its aggregate annual amount. Additional excise duties were charged by 1878 Act, 9 Vict., c. 27, July 3, 1854. The excise duties were either modified in 1890-91; see Revenue.

EXECUTIONS OF REMARKABLE CRIMINALS. [n.: murderer]

Dun and Robert Petticoat, wine merchants, forgery; Tyburn, 17 Jan., 1776. Mr. Dr. Dodd, found guilty of forgery at a bank, in the name of lord Chesterfield for 4600; the highest influence was exerted to save him, but when the case came before the council, the chancellor of the day said he should be executed by your majesty's pardon. Mr. Dr. Dodd, you will have murdered the Petticoats; Tyburn, 27 June, 1777. Rev. Henry Handham, murder of Miss Ray, mistresses of dress of sandwich, Tyburn, 1780. Capt. John Donovan, murder of sir Theodosius Loughon, Warwick, 2 April, 1781. Christian Muntz, (or Brown), a woman, strangely found dead, and burnt for omen, 18 March, 1789. R. Parker and others, mutiny at the Nore, 30 June, 1797. Mrs. Phepos, celebrated murderess; Old Bailey, 11 Dec.

* For some other executions, see England, 1556-60, 1571-1495-83; and Gout's Plot.

EXETER (Devonshire), said to have been named Augusta from having been occupied by the second Augustan legion commanded by Vespasian: its present name is derived from Excester. It was for a considerable time the capital of the West Saxon kingdom. The misnomer ascribed to it two sees: Devonshire (founded about 909) and Cornwall. The church of the former was at Crediton, of the latter at Bodmin, and afterwards at St. German's. About 1030 the sees were united. St. Petroc was the first bishop of Cornwall, before 900, Eadulfus, the first bishop of Devonshire, 905; and Leodric, the first bishop of Exeter, in 1050. The cathedral originally belonged to a monastery founded by Athelinus: Edward the Confessor removed the monks to his new abbey of Westminster, and gave their church for a cathedral to the united see, 1049; the see was valued in the king's books at £500, per annum. Present stated income, 420l. Population, 1401, 49,940; 1610 (est.) 52,000.

EXHIBITION OF 1862.

A proposal in 1858 for another great exhibition, to be held in 1861, was withdrawn as a consequence of the war in Italy in 1859. The scheme was revived in April 1860, when the prince consort and queen Victoria for 1869, when prince Albert, president of the society, said, "Now is the time to prepare for a Great Exhibition, an exhibition worthy of the greatness of this country; not merely national in its scope and benefits, but to the whole world; and I offer myself to the public as their leader, if they are willing to assist in the undertaking."

Royal commission appointed 3 Jan. 1860. A subscription list opened, headed by queen Victoria for 1869.

The building was opened 16 Sept. 1862.

Many persons admitted into it in Jan.; it is virtually transferred to the royal commissioners by the contractors.

The Exhibition opened by queen Victoria 15 May, 1862. The number of exhibitions exceeded 37,000, of whom 25,000 received prize medals and 7500 certificates.

The palace continued open 141 days (1 May to 15 Oct.), within which time it was visited by 6,179,000 persons, averaging 45,356 a day, whose admission at the respective prices of one pound, half-crown, and shilling, was 593,457, including season tickets, leaving a surplus, after payment of expenses, of about 150,000.

A memorial statue of the prince consort by Joseph Durand, placed in the gardens of the Royal Horticultural Society, unveiled in the presence of the prince and princess of Wales on 10 June, 1863. The prince of Wales's equestrian statue of the royal commission of 1812, in rooms of the Prince Consort, who had held that office since 1870, 20 Feb. 1853.

The palace continued open 141 days (1 May to 15 Oct.), within which time it was visited by 6,179,000 persons, averaging 45,356 a day, whose admission at the respective prices of one pound, half-crown, and shilling, was 593,457, including season tickets, leaving a surplus, after payment of expenses, of about 150,000.

A memorial statue of the prince consort by Joseph Durand, placed in the gardens of the Royal Horticultural Society, unveiled in the presence of the prince and princess of Wales on 10 June, 1863. The prince of Wales's equestrian statue of the royal commission of 1812, in rooms of the Prince Consort, who had held that office since 1870, 20 Feb. 1853.

EXHIBITION 1862 (INTERNATIONAL). A proposal in 1858 for another great exhibition, to be held in 1861, was withdrawn as a consequence of the war in Italy in 1859. The scheme was revived in April 1860, when the prince consort and queen Victoria for 1869, when prince Albert, president of the society, said, "Now is the time to prepare for a Great Exhibition, an exhibition worthy of the greatness of this country; not merely national in its scope and benefits, but to the whole world; and I offer myself to the public as their leader, if they are willing to assist in the undertaking."

Royal commission appointed 3 Jan. 1860. A subscription list opened, headed by queen Victoria for 1869.

EXTRACTEUR, see Fire-Annihilator.

EXTRACT OF MEAT, obtained by Liebig in 1847; a company was formed to manufacture it in South America in 1866.

EXTRADITION TREATIES. The extradition of criminals formed part of the Ashburton treaty (which see), 9 Aug. 1842. Between Great Britain and France, 1843. In Dec. 1865, the French government gave notice of withdrawing from it in the month. It was renewed, with modifications, for six months, 21 May, 1866; at Auckland, 24 Jan. 1894; in 1895; 29 smokeless powders known in 1895.

New act passed, 6 July, 1895. The treaty of Aug. 1870, amended 13 Feb. 1896. Similar treaties have been concluded with other powers; with Austria, 3 Dec. 1873 (amended 1901); Switzerland, 4 April, 1874; Holland, Aug. 1874; with Spain, 1875.

In 1866, M. Lamineaud, charged with forgery and fraud against the Bank of France, was to America. He was pursued, and was arrested at Montreal, on 1 Aug., under the governor-general's warrant. On 15 Aug., while his examination was still pending, he petitioned the governor-general not to warrant his surrender before he could apply for a writ of habeas corpus, and was assured on 17 Aug. that ample time should be allowed for this purpose. On 22 Aug., he was finally committed; and on 24 Aug., his petition for a writ of habeas corpus was presented to judge Bummond. Twenty-four hours' notice having been given to the representatives of the crown and the Bank of France. After arguments had been heard and the case adjourned until the following day, he was surreptitiously carried off the same night by train to Quebec, and hurried on board a steamer bound for Europe, by virtue of an extradition warrant, purporting to be signed by the governor-general at Ottawa, on 23 Aug. He was conveyed to France, and on 5 Dec. was tried, found guilty, and condemned to ten years' imprisonment. These circumstances led to much discussion, and the Canadian authorities were censured for irregularity and want of discretion. The discussion ended by Lamirand declining British intervention.

Despite with United States respecting the surrender of Ezra D. Winslow, a forger, by Great Britain, which is refused unless it is agreed that the prisoner shall only be tried for the offence for which he has been committed (according to the treaty) . . . April, 1876.

Mr. Hamilton Fish, the American foreign secretary, stands on Ashburton treaty of 1842, wherein no stipulation is mentioned, although it is found in other treaties with other governments.

Winslow was discharged, 15 June; and Brent, another fugitive, a few days after. . . .

The British government yields. 27 Oct.: Brent recaptured. Dec. 1876. Winslow, claimed by Swiss government, escapes through flaw in the treaty; decision of queen's bench . . .

stringent treaty, for anarchists and political offenders, between Russia and Prussia . . . 13 Jan., 1885.

Similar treaty between Germany and Prussia proposed 12 Feb. 1885; accepted . . . April, 1887.

Enlarged treaty between United States and Great Britain proposed 1886; deferred till Dec. 1888; rejected by the senate (32-155). . . 1 Feb., 1887.

New treaty ratified by the senate, 15 Feb., 1899; it is an enlargement of the Ashburton treaty of 1842, proclaimed at Washington and gazetted in London . . . . 25 March, 1899.

Extradition treaty between England and Russia April, 1877; with Portugal, 17 Oct., 1892; Romania, 21 March, 1894; Argentine Republic, 7 Dec., 1895.

Extradition treaty between France and Holland ratified . . . 26 Dec., 1895.

New treaty between United Kingdom and the Netherlands . . . 26 Sept., 1896.

Extradition treaty between Spain and the U.S. N.A., Aug., 1905; between Italy and Argentina ratified . . . 11 Oct., 1906.

Extradition treaty between Great Britain and Servia . . . . 5 Feb., 1907.

EYLAU (Prussia), where, on 7-9 Feb., 1807, was fought between the French and Russians one of the most bloody contests of the war. Napoleon commanded in person. Both armies by this and other battles were so much reduced, that the French retired to the Vistula, and the Russians on the Pregel.

EYRE (old French for ire, to go on), the inconstant court of justices, the justices in eyre, was instituted by Henry II. 1170; and when the forest laws were in force, its chief-justice had great dignity. These justices were to go their circuits every third year, and punish all abuses committed in the king's forests. The last instance of a court being held in any of the forests is said to have been in 1671. Beattson.
F's. Three (that is, "extirpation of tenure, fair rents, and free sale") term much used respecting Irish land question in 1850-1. Sir Stafford Northcote termed them "fraud, force, and folly," and they were much opposed by lord Dufferin and others.

FABIAN SOCIETY. a socialist association founded in London 1883, which "aims at the re-organisation of society by the emancipation of land and capital from individual and class ownership, and the vesting of them in the community for the general benefit." The society carries on its propaganda by lectures and discussions, and publishes Fabian Essays, and Fabian Tracts. It has a large number of branches in Great Britain, and also in the Colonies and the United States. The name is taken from Fabius, whose "Fabian policy" harassed the forces of Hannibal in the war, between Rome and Carthage (see Rome), to describe its methods of gradual progress by educational and legislative measures.

FABII. A noble family at Rome, said to have derived their name from faba, a bean, because some of their ancestors cultivated this pulse; or to have descended from Fabius, a son of Hercules. According to the legend, the whole family, on behalf of the state, carried on the war against the Volsci. During a march to Rome, they were surprised, and all the grown-up males (305) were slain 477 B.C. From a boy detained at Rome, arose the noble Fabii of the following ages. Fabius Cunctator (the delayer) kept Hannibal in check for some time without coming to an engagement, 217-216 B.C.

FABLES. "Jotham's fable of the trees (Judges ix., about 1209 B.C.) is the oldest extant, and as beautiful as any made since." Addison. Night's fable of the poor man (2 Sam. xiv., about 1053 B.C.) is next in antiquity. The earliest collection of fables extant is of eastern origin, and preserved in the Sanscrit. The fables of Vishnusarma, or Pilpay, are the most beautiful, if not the most ancient in the world. Sir William Jones. Professor Max Müller traced La Fontaine's fable of the Milkmaid to a very early Sanscrit collection. Esop's fables (which see) supposed to have been written about 564 or 620 B.C., were versified by Babrius, a Greek poet, about 130 B.C. (Cory). and turned into prose by Maximus Planus, a Greek monk, about 1329, who added other fables and appended a worthless life of Esop. The fables of Phaedrus in Latin (ab aut. a. d. 8), of La Fontaine (1700) and of Gay (1727) are justly celebrated.

FACIAL ANGLE (that contained by one line drawn horizontally from the middle of the eye to the edge of the nostrils, and another from the latter point to the ridge of the frontal bone) was invented by Peter Camper to measure the elevation of the forehead. In negroes this angle is about 70°; in Europeans varies from 75° to 85°. Camper died April 7, 1789. His book on " characteristic Marks of Humanity" was published in 1791.

FACTIONS of the Circus among the Romans, were parties that fought on chariots in the circus, and who were distinguished by colours, as green, blue, red, and white; Domitian added gold and scarlet, about a.d. 90.

Niko's solution.—In Jan. 512, a conflict took place at Constantinople, lasting five days, when about 30,000 lives were lost, and Justinian was mainly indebted for his life and throne to the heroism of his emperor Theodora. The blues and greens united for a day or two against the emperor, taking No 50 (verosque) for a watchword. The blues soon turned, and massacred nearly all the greens. The conflict was suppressed by Belisarius with difficulty, and the games were abolished for a time.

FACTORY SYSTEM was gradually developed by Arkwright and others, 1767 et seq., to carry on the cotton manufacture, which had been greatly increased by the invention of machinery.

The work had been previously exerted by working men in cottages by the hand or stock cards, loom, and spinning wheel. Factories began to increase in this country in 1815. The Factory act, regulating the hours of labour, &c., was passed in 1833 and amended 1834 and 1844. Similar acts have been passed since; and an act for the extension of the principles of the Factory acts was passed in 1867; in relation to women and children employed in manual labour; short time on Saturdays was enacted. Other acts were passed in 1870-1878, and since.

The Act of 1868 (like that of 14 July, 1754) relates to sanitary, provisions, safety from machinery, hours of employment, meals hours, women and children, holidays, education of children, accidents, &c., passed July 26, 1872. Consolidating act passed in 1873. The Earl of Shaftesbury, the energetic promoter of this legislation, died 1 Oct. 1855, aged 84.

New Factories and Workshops act passed 5 Aug. 1871; amendment act passed, 6 July, 1895. Factory and Workshops Act (bulky clause omitted), royal assent, 17 Aug. 1901; amended by act passed 20 March, 1902. Factory and Workshops Act (1902), modifying the law with regard to public laundry, comes into force, 1 Jan. 192.

FACULTIES, COURT OF, giving powers to the archbishops of Canterbury and York, 25 Hen. VIII, cap. 21, 1574. Master lord Penzance, 1876.

FAENZA, central Italy, the ancient Faveutia, submitted to the emperor Frederick I., 1102; was taken by Frederick II., 12 April, 1241; held by the pope, 1275; by the Belgonesi, 1282; by Cesare Borgia, 1501; by Venice, 1503; by the papacy, 1509; by the French, 1512. After various changes early in the 16th century it was acquired by the papacy and retained till the annexation by Sardinia, 1859. Faenese pottery owes its name to this place, where it was invented.

"FAERIE QUEEN," by Edmund Spenser; a part was published in 1590; the whole, 1611.

FAHRENHEIT, see Thermometer.

FAINÉANTS, see Mayors of the Palace.

FAIRLOP OAK, with a trunk 48 feet in circumference, the growth of five centuries, in Hainault forest, Essex, was blown down in Feb. 1820. Beneath its branches an annual fair was long held L L on the first Friday in July, which originated with the country Mr. Day, a pump and black maker at Wapping, who, having a small estate in the vicinity, anually repaired here with a party of friends, to dine on beans and bacon.

FAIROAKS, near the Chickahominy, Virginia, the site of two singularly indecisive battles between the Confederates, under general Joseph Johnson, and the Federal army of the Potomac, under general
McClellan, 31 May and 1 June, 1862.

FAIRS AND WAKES, of Saxon origin, were instituted in Italy, about 500; in England by Alfred, 886. Spalding. Wakes were established by order of Gregory VII. in 1058, and termed feria, at which the monks celebrated the festival of their patron saint; the vast resort of people occasioned a great demand for goods, wares, &c. Fairs were established in France about 800 by Charlemagne, and encouraged in England about 1071 by William the Conqueror. Many statutes were made for the regulation of fairs (1228-1865). The "Fairs Act," passed 25 May, 1871, provides for the abolition of fairs, in 1872, Charton and Blackheath fairs, and in 1873 Copham fair, which were abolished as nuisance.
See Fruits and Markets.

FAISANS, ILE DES (island of pleasant-s), a small island on the Bidda&., between France and Spain. Here was concluded the treaty of the Pyrenees by cardinal Mazarin and don Louis de Haro on the part of France and Spain respectively; called also Il de la Conference; see Pyrenees.

FAITH, see Defender. "Faith-healing," see

FAILCK LAWS, see Prussia, 1873.

FALCONRY or HAWKING in England cannot be traced with certainty before the reign of king Ethelbert, the Saxon monarch, 839. Pennant.
The grand seignior at one time kept six thousand falconers in his service. Johana Berners' book on "Hawkinge and Hunteyme" was printed in 1479; see Hawking. Recent attempts have been made to revive falconry. Hawking was practised in Thrace.
Aristotle.

FALCZI, on the Pruth, Turkey. Here was concluded a Peace between Russia and Turkey, 21 July, 1711, the Russians giving up Azof, and all the possessions on the Black Sea to the Turks.
The Russians were saved from imminent destruction by the address of Catherine, the empress. In 1712 the war was renewed, and terminated by the peace of Constantinople, 19 April, 1712.

FALERII, a city of the Falisci, an Etruscan people who joined the Velites against Rome, and were beaten by Cornelius Cossus, 437 B.C. It is recorded that when the city was besieged by Carnius in 394, a schoolmaster offered to betray to him the children of the principal citizens. On his refusal, the citizens from gratitude surrendered.
They opposed Rome during the first Punic war;
and in 231 the city was taken and destroyed.

FALERNIAN WINE, celebrated by Virgil and Horace, was the produce of Falernus, or, as called by Martial, Mons- Missus, in Campania.
Hence in his Odes he etc. some Falernian wine that had been, as it were, born with him, and which reckoned its age from the same consul, 14 B.C.

FALKIRK, Stirlingshire, Scotland, the site of a victory by the English under Edward I. over the Scots, commanded by Wallace, part of whose forces deserted him. It is said from 24,000 to 40,000 Scotts were slain, 22 July, 1298. A battle was fought at Falkirk Muir between the royal forces under Hawley, and prince Charles Edward Stuart, in which the former were defeated, 17 Jan. 1746.

FALKLAND ISLANDS, a group in the South Atlantic, belonging to Great Britain, seen by American Vespucius, 1502, and visited by Davis, 1692; explored by Hawkins, 1594; taken possession of by France, 1764. The French were expelled by the Spaniards; and in 1771, Spain resigned them to England. They having been colonised by us, the depot of Buenos Ayres assumed a right to these islands, and a colony from that country settled at Port Louis; but owing to a dispute with America, the settlement was destroyed by the latter in 1831.
In 1833 the British flag was hoisted at Port Louis, and a British officer has since resided there. Population in 1870 (est.) 2,310. Governor, W. L. Allardyce, May, 1891. Falkland Islands erected a crown colony,

FAMILY of LOVE, a society, called also Philadelphians, from the love they professed to bear to all men, assembled at Brew-house yard, Nottingham. Their founder, David George, an Anabaptist, of Holland, propagated his doctrines in Switzerland, where he died in 1516. The tenets of the society were declared impious, and George's body and books ordered to be burned by the hangman. In England a sect with a similar title was repressed by Elizabeth, 1580; but existed in the following century.

FAN. Used by the ancients; Cope hoc flabel- lum, et ventulum haec facia. "Take this fan, and give her thus a little air." Terence's Eunuchus, 160 n.c.—Fans, together with masks, masks, and false hair, were first devised by the harlots in Italy, and introduced into France from Spain. Now in the British Museum are Egyptian fan-handles.

Great competitive exhibition of fans at Draper's hall, London, opened 2 July, 1878

French Fans and Fan Leaves, collected and described, by Charles M. Schroeder; a magnificent work was published by Mr. John Murray. It includes historical, allegorical and satirical pictures, Jan. 1882; her work on foreign fans was published April, 1890. Lady Schroeder was granted the freedom of the Farnakers' Company, London, 17 Dec. 1891 Exhibition of fans at Draper's hall, London, opened 8 May, 1883. Similar exhibitions 1884 and seq.

FARADAY MEMORIALS, &c. Professor Michael Faraday, noble philosopher and electrician (see Electricit), was born 22 Aug. 1791. A public meeting was held at the Royal Institution, 21 June, 1860, the prince of Wales in the chair, to take measures to provide a public monument to him. A sufficient sum having been subscribed, the production of a statue was entrusted to Mr. Foley. The statue was placed at the Royal Institution, London, in 1870. From the same fund a marble bust was provided and placed in the National Portrait Gallery, 1890. The "Faraday Medal," to be given to distinguished foreign philosophers by the Chemical society, was first awarded to M. Dumas, see Argon, for "Faraday," a treatise, see Steam. The centenary of the birth of Michael Faraday (22 Sept. 1791) was celebrated at the Royal Institution on 17 June, 1891; the prince of Wales, vice-president, R. I., in the chair; on 20 June the duke of Northumberland, president, in the chair.

The "Michael Faraday" Board school, in Faraday-st., Walworth, opened by the united efforts of London Volunteers of the Royal Horse Artillery (see), the marble bust of Faraday in the boys' hall of the school is a copy of one by Matthew Noble. The "Michael Faraday" house of rest for the poor at East Dulwich (the house given by Miss Isabel Faraday), opened 25 Oct. 1891.

PARADISATION, the medical application of the magneto-electric currents which Faraday discovered in 1837. Apparatus for this purpose was first made by M. Pixii, and employed by Dr. Neef of Frankfort. "Farradi" name taken for a unit of electric capacity, 1875.

FARECE, a short comic drama, usually of one or two acts. One by Otway is dated 1677. The best English farces (by Foote, Garrick, Bickerstaff, &c.) appeared from about 1740 to 1780. This species of dramatic entertainments originated in the droll shows which were exhibited by charlatans and their buffoons in the open streets; see Drama.

FARMERS' ALLIANCE, an organization of agricultural reformers; held a provisional meeting 27 May, and a conference 2 July, 1870. It was active during the elections of April, 1880. A Farmers' Alliance for Scotland was founded at Aberdeen, 1 Dec. 1881. The Farmers' Alliance in the United States, N.A., began about 1872, became industrial and elected about 25 representatives for Congress, Nov. 1890, see United States, N.A.

The Farmers' Club was established in 1872 for discussions on agricultural subjects.

FARMERS' UNION, National, established at Leamington, by lord Walsingham and others, to oppose the Agricultural Labourers' Union, June, 1874.

FARNESIE FAMILY became important through the elevation of Alexander Farnese to the papacy as Paul III. He gave his natural son Peter the duchy of Parma, and his descendants ruled till the death of Antony without issue in 1751. Alexander prince of Parma was governor of the Netherlands in 1730.

FARRINGDON-MARKET, erected by the corporation of London, near the abolished Fleet-market, was opened 20 Nov. 1829. After several changes it was re-opened in 1882, but was unsuccessful, occasioning great loss to the corporation; pulled down 1892, and site sold for £8,100, see Smithfield.

FARTHING, an early English coin. Farthings in silver were coined by king John, in copper by James I. and Charles I.; the Irish farthing of John's reign (1210) is rare. Farthings were coined in England in silver by Henry VIII. First coined in copper by Charles II. 1665; and again in 1672, when there was a large coinage of copper money. Half-farthings were first coined in 1843; see Queen Anne's Farthings. A single copy of the "Penn's-week Country Daily Newspaper" (conservative), No. 1, sold for 1d., 25 June, 1873. The Farthings Act, 21, 22 Vict. c. 75, 1858, relates to the payment for portions of a mile travelled by third class railway trains.

FASHODA, on the White Nile (Upper Nile valley), occupied by capt. (ult. major) Marchand, with 8 officers and 120 Senegalese (who had crossed from the French Congo, overcoming great obstacles) in July, 1898; see Africa; Dervish attack repulsed, 25 Aug.; see Sudan, Sept. 1898. Diplomatic correspondence, blue book published, 9 Oct.; the Marchand mission recalled by the French government, 4 Nov.; they leave Fashoda, 11 Dec. 1898.

FASTI CAPITOLINI, marble tablets dug up in the forum at Rome, 1474, contain a list of the consuls and other officers from the year of Rome 250 to 755. Other fragments were found in 1877 and 1878. The "Fasti Consularia," from 507 B.C. to A.D. 292, are given at the end of Smith's "Dictionary of Greek and Roman Antiquities."
FASTS.

FASTS, observed by most nations from the remotest antiquity; by the Jews (2 Chron. xx. 3); by the Ninevites (Jonah iii.), see Jonah, viii. A list was compiled for the Jews on the great day of atonement, Lev. xxi. 30, 32; xix. 30; xix. 32, 33. Moses fasted 30 days and nights on Sinai, Exod. xxiv. 18, 30. The first Christian ministers were ordained with fasting (Acts xvi. 18). Fast days are, as that of Lent, and at other stated times, and on particular occasions. The use of fasting in the Christian church is of the second century, A.D. 178. The Mahomedan fast is termed Ramadhan (which see). Fast days are appointed by the Reformed churches in times of war and pestilence (as 21 March, 1855, for the Russian war, and 7 Oct., 1857, for the Indian mutiny). The Jews, which see, have religious tests of 30 to 40 days' duration. See Assumption.

FEMALE SUFFRAGE, &c., see Women.

FEMALE MEDICAL SCHOOL, London, held its first session in 1863, when courses of lectures were given. Dr. Mary Walker attended Midlothian hospital in 1860. She gave an autobiographical lecture at St. James's Hall, 20 Nov. 1860. In 1864 the decision was reached of laying the foundations of the Royal Free Hospital, and the practice of the Royal Free Hospital is reserved for students of the school. The school was entirely rebuilt and re-equipped in 1900, at a cost of over £5,000. Schools of medicine for women have since been established in London, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Dundee, Dublin, Belfast and Cork. Many women are now (1910) registered as practitioners; many in India and other countries.

FEMALE LIGHT DRAGOONS, a body of cavalry raised voluntarily in various counties of England and Scotland in 1744, to serve during the war in any part of Great Britain. This force (between 12,000 and 15,000), which did its duty with much judgment during a period of intense popular excitement, was disbanded in 1800.

FENCING was introduced into England from France. Fencing-schools having led to duelling in England, were prohibited in London by statute 13 Edw. 1. 1285. Fencing in England now (1909) growing in popularity.

FÉODALISM, a "brotherhood" in the United States and Ireland united to liberate Ireland and establish a republic. The agitation was begun, it is said, by Stephens in March, 1858, and in 1864 enlistments and secret drills took place. A convention was formed in 1865 in America. The movement is opposed by the Roman Catholic clergy. See Ireland.

FÉO DE SE, see Suicide.

FÉCIALES or FEALIES, twenty in number, heralds of Rome, to announce war or proclaim peace, appointed by Numa, about 712 B.C.

FEDERAL STATES are those united by treaty as one state, without giving up self-government—as in Switzerland. The people of the Northern United States of America during the great conflict in 1861-5 were styled Federalists; their opponents Confederates. See Imperial Federation. Federal council of Australasia Act introduced by the earl of Derby 23 April, passed 14 Aug. 1852. See Australia, 1855 et seq.; Argentine, Brazil, &c.

FÉJEE, see Fiji.

FÉLIRIGE. A literary sepulchral festival held in Provence by féliers, writers in prose and verse in the language, founded in 1854, in honour of seven eminent troubadours.

FÉLON, in English law (says Blackstone, in 1765), comprises every species of crime which occasions the forfeiture of land and goods. An act to abolish forfeitures for treason and felony, and to otherwise amend the law relating thereto, passed 4 July, 1879.

FÉLONIES, or Felonies, twenty, in number, heralds of Rome, to announce war or proclaim peace, appointed by Numa, about 712 B.C.

FÉNEAN, a distinguished title of fame, applied by the Romans to a wide group of countries, and persons connected with them, by the common name of Fenianism, established by the United States and Ireland in 1744, to serve during the war in any part of Great Britain. This force (between 12,000 and 15,000), which did its duty with much judgment during a period of intense popular excitement, was disbanded in 1800.

FENCING was introduced into England from France. Fencing-schools having led to duelling in England, were prohibited in London by statute 13 Edw. 1. 1285. Fencing in England now (1909) growing in popularity.

FÉNIX, the name of ancient Irish national heroes, Faneis (Finn), a "brotherhood" in the United States and Ireland united to liberate Ireland and establish a republic. The agitation was begun, it is said, by Stephens in March, 1858, and in 1864 enlistments and secret drills took place. A convention was formed in 1865 in America. FERERECHAMPENOISE (France). Here the French army under Marmon, Mortier, and Arrighi, were surprised and defeated by the allies under the prince of Schwarzenberg, 25 March, 1814, after a heroic resistance. Paris surrendered six days after.

FERGHANA, see Khokand.

FERIE LATINE, solemn Roman festivals, and to have been instituted by Tarquin the Proud, about 534 B.C. The principal magistrates of forty-seven towns of Latium assembled on a mount near Rome, and with the Roman authorities offered a bull to Jupiter Latialis. The ferie were of three kinds: (1) fixed annual festivals, as the Satu nalia, (2) annual festivals, the dates of which were fixed by the magistrates or priests; and (3) special festivals by order of the magistrates for the worship of the gods in times of danger or victory. No business was transacted during the period of the ferie.

FERKEH, in the Soudan. Here the army of the dervishes was skilfully surprised and totally defeated by gen. sir H. H. Kitchener, 7 June, 1896, when on his march toward Dongola. The battle lasted from 5 to 7 a.m. The enemy's loss was about 1,000, including Hammanda, the commander, many emirs, and about 500 prisoners. Egyptian loss, 20 killed. The enemy fought with desperate courage. Few in the action about 300 dervishes were surprised, and refusing to surrender were nearly all killed.

FERMENTATION, termed by Gay-Lussac one of the most mysterious processes in nature: he showed that in the process, 45 lbs. of sugar are resolved into 23 of alcohol and 22 of carbonic acid. His memoir appeared in 1810. In 1861 Pasteur brought forward evidence to show that fermentation depends on the presence of minute organisms in the fermenting fluid, and that the source of all such organisms is the atmosphere. For his researches he was awarded an annual pension of 12,000 francs in 1873.

FERMIERS GENERAUX, officers who formed the French revenues previous to 1789, frequently with much oppression. Lacouer and 27 of these were executed 8 May, 1791.

FERNIER COLLIERY EXPLOSION, 8 Nov., 1871, about 178 lives lost. See under Coal.

FERNS (Ireland), an ancient bishopric, once arch-bishopric. St. Elen was seated here in 503. Leighlin and Ferns were united in 1609, and by the Church Temporalties act, passed Aug. 1833, both were united to the bishopric of Ossory. See Ossory. — FERNS, an order of cryptogamous plants, much cultivated in Wardian cases; which see, and also Nature-Printing.

FERROZESHAH (India). The British, commanded by sir Hugh Gough, attacked the entrenchments of the Sikhs, and carried their first line of works, 21 Dec., 1845; but night coming on, the operations were suspended till daybreak, when their second line was stormed by general Gilbert, and 74 guns captured. The Sikhs advanced to retake their guns, but were repulsed with great loss, and retreated towards the Satlej, 22 Dec., and re-crossed that river unmolested, 25 Dec. The British loss was reckoned at 2,415.
FERRARA. 519

FEUDAL LAWS. The tenure of land by suit and service to lord or owner, partly in use in England by the Saxons, was mainly established by William I. in 1066. The kingdom was divided into baronies, which were given on condition of the holders furnishing the king with men and money. The vassalage, limited by Henry VII., 1495, was abolished by statute, 1660. The feudal system was introduced into Scotland by Malcolm II. in 1008, and the hereditary jurisdictions were finally abolished in that kingdom, 1746-7. The feudal laws, established in France by Clovis I., about 586, were disestablished by Louis XII. in 1470. "Feudal Alps, 1283-1415," vol. 1.

FEUILLANTS, a religious order founded by Jean de la Barrière in 1757 at the abbey of Feuillant, near Toulouse, and settled in Paris in 1787. The Feuillant club, formed in Paris by La Fayette and others in 1789, to counteract the intrigues of the Jacobins, was so named from the convent where they met. A body of Jacobins burst into their hall and obliged them to separate, 25 Dec. 1791; and the club was broken up in 1792.

FEVER, see Scarlet Fever.

FEZ (in the ancient Mauritania, Africa), founded by Edris, a descendant of Mahomet, about 757, was long capital of the kingdom of Fez. After long-continued struggles, it was annexed to Morocco about 1550. Les,Africains describes it as containing more than 700 temples, mosques, and other public edifices, in the 12th century. Jewish quarter burnt, many deaths, Sept. 1786. Prison reforms well carried out, many prisoners freed, &c., Nov. 1901—Sept. 1902. See Morocco.

FICTIONS, see Romances.—FICTIONS IN LAW were invented by the lawyers in the reign of Edward I. as a means of carrying cases from one court to another, whereby the courts became checks to each other. Home, Lord Mansfield, in the court of King's Bench, emphatically declared that "no fiction of law shall ever so far prevail against the real truth, as to prevent the execution of justice," 31 May, 1784. They were mostly abolished in the 14th century.

"FIDELIO," Beethoven's single opera; composed in 1814, produced at Vienna, 20 Nov. 1815.

FIDZEN, a Sabine city, frequently at war with Rome. It was finally captured and the inhabitants enslaved, 126 B.C., by the Romans, whose ambassadors they had slain.

FIELD, The country gentleman's weekly paper, first appeared 1 Jan. 1853.

FIELD OF MARCH AND MAY, see Champ.—FIELD OF THE CLOTH OF GOLD, a plain near Arles, near Calais, in France, on which Henry VIII. met Francis I. of France, 7-24 June, 1520. The nobility of both kingdoms displayed their magnificence, and many involved themselves in debt. Paintings of the embarkation and interview are at Windsor castle.

Public debt, 124,115. The islands offered by the king, Thakombau, and chiefs to the British government, but not accepted July, 1899.

The house of commons granted 1,880l. for expenditure in them; and European settlers made.

Annexation to Great Britain proposed in parliament, declined 30 June, 1874; but unconditional session to the British government accepted and announced 28 Oct. 1874.

His club sent as a present to queen Victoria by the king Thakombau.

About 30,0000 deaths by epidemic measles early in 1795.

Outbreak of cannibal devil worshipers suppressed by the military; about 50ByIders executed about June, 1876.

King Thakombau died 2 Feb. 1878.

Rising of some of the tribes suppressed, reported 19 March, 1894.

Severe hurricane; great damage to Levuka; 53 deaths, reported 13 Jan. 1894.

Severe hurricane in Suva, about 2121 lives lost 2 March, 1910.

FILEES are mentioned (1 Sam. xiii. 21) 1693 R.C. The manufacture of them has attained to great perfection, by means of file-cutting machinery. That set up by Mr. T. Greenwood of Leeds, in 1859, was invented by M. Bernet of Paris.

FILEBUSTERS (properly Filstabs), a name given to the freeholders who plundered the estates of America in the 16th and 17th centuries; see Buccaneers and Nicaragua, Cuba, &c.

FILIOQUE. ("and from the Son"), inserted in the Nicene creed, in respect to the procession of the Holy Ghost from the Father and the Son, by the second council at Constantinople, 381; was rejected, by the Greek church, 341; accepted by the Spanish, 342, and by the Roman 583. The omission of the phrase was considered at the Old Catholic Conference at Bonn, Aug. 1875. See Athenian Creed and Nicer.

FILTERERS. A plan for purifying corrupted water was patented by Wm. Woolcott in 1675. Other modes followed. James Peaceock's method of filtration was patented in 1791; and many others since: Rumsome's, 1856.

Apparatus for freshening salt water, brought forward by Grant, of London, by Macbride, 1849; Gravely, 1848, Dr. Normandy's greatly improved apparatus, 1859, much used in the royal navy.

FINANCES of Great Britain, &c., see Revenue and other articles. A select committee of the commons, consisting of Mr. Goscen, chancellor of the exchequer, Mr. J. Morley, Mr. A. J. Balfour, Mr. Childers, lord R. Churchill, and others, was appointed to consider the Financial Relations between England, Scotland, and Ireland, 1 Aug. 1899. Returns presented for the years ending 31 March, 1895, 1896, 1897; and the Finance Act, the title given in 1894 to the act, granting certain duties of customs and inland revenue, &c.; passed annually.

FINE ARTS. See Arts, Paintings, Sculpture, Engraving, &c.

FINES AND RECOVERIES, conferring the power of breaking ancient entail and alienating estates, began in the reign of Edward IV., but was not, properly speaking, law, till Henry VII., by correcting some abuses that attended the practice, gave indirectly a sanction to it, 1487. Fines and recoveries were abolished in 1835.

FINISTERRE, see Cape Finisterre.

FINLAND. A Russian grand duchy, in the middle of the 12th century was conquered by Eric IX. of Sweden, who introduced Christianity. It was several times taken by the Russians (1714, 1742, and 1808), and restored (1721 and 1743); but in 1809 they retained it by treaty; see Above. Its political constitution was confirmed by the war in 1809, 1812, and 1825. It was made nearly autonomous in 1838. Population in 1862, 1,740,729; in 1867, 1,830,853; in 1875, 1,912,647; in 1889, 2,388,404; in 1897, about 2,572,801; 1893, 2,816,208; 1897, 2,954,330. During a dreadful famine, whole villages were starved. Elias Linnart, editor of the ancient national epic, Kajavalla (1831-9), died 1854. Triennial Diet opened with constitutional speech sent by the Czar, 19 Jan. 1885. The Czar warmly received at Helsingfors, Aug. 1885. FINNEN LIGHT, see Lupus.

FIRE. Heracloitus about 560 B.C. maintained that the world was evolved from fire, which he deemed to be a god omnipotent. Fire was worshiped by the Persians and other ancient nations, see Greeks and Thes.ire.

FIRE-ANNihilator, an apparatus invented by Mr. T. Phillips, and made known by him in 1839. When put in action, steam and carbonic acid are formed, which extinguish flame. It was not successful commercially. L'Extincteur was invented by Mr. P. Carby, and patented by A. Vignon in July, 1842. It is an iron cylinder filled with water and carbonic acid gas, generated by bichromate of soda and tartaric acid. The apparatus was developed and improved by Mr. W. B. Dick, in his Manual and Chemical Fire-Engines, which give a continuous flow of water and gas, patented April, 1869.

The "Mota Fuego," or "Fire-killer," of M. Raudas of Paris, was successfully exhibited at the Alexandria Palace, 16 Oct. 1850.

The Daper-Hetherington sprinkler reported successful, Nov. 1852.

The Keeley Fire Extinguisher invented 1856. Very successful 1857.

M. Monat, the Swiss are said to have had arquebusers (men armed with firearms).

1471.

Fire-arms said to have been used at the siege of Berwick.

1513.

The petronel (from petronemus, the chest) or arquebus, came into use, 1450; and the musket employed in the armies of the emperor Charles V. about 1540.

1530.

The musket, or musket, the chest, or arquebus, came into use, 1450; and the musket employed in the armies of the emperor Charles V. about 1540.

All these were very heavy, and the instrument, was discharged by a straight match, afterwards, about 1577, by a wheellock, then by the flint.

The matchlock and wheellock superseded by the flint-lock, about 1614.

1614.

The rev. Mr. Forsey's patented the percussion principle of igniting gunpowder in matchlocks, by means of detonating powder.

April 1857.

Percussion caps came into use between 1820 and 1825.

FIRE-DAMP INDICATOR. A small apparatus, about the size of a chronometer, invented by Mr. G. F. Ansell, and patented by him in 1875, by which the presence of very small quantities of fire-damp or light carbonated hydrogen gas may be detected in mines. It is an application of the law of the diffusion of gases.

FIRE-DETECTOR and ALARM. A mechanical and chemical apparatus invented by Prof. Brock, which causes a bell to ring and exhibits coloured light, when the temperature of a room is greatly increased. It was tried at the International exhibition, London, 4 June, 1873.

Pearson's automatic fire-indicator, practically a six's thermometer, reported successful. Dec. 1897.

FIRE-ENGINES are said to have been invented by Ctesibius, 250 B.C. They are mentioned by Pliny, A.D. 70. A "water-bow" was patented by Thos. Grant in 1632, one was constructed by John Van der Heyden, about 1683. Brahmah's engine was patented in 1704. Mr. John Brathwaite constructed a steam fire-engine in 1830. A trial of steam fire-engines took place at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, on 2, 3 July, 1867, when prizes were awarded to a large one by Merryweather and a small one by Shand and Mason. Many great improvements since, and electrical and motor engines are now in use.

FIRE-BRIGADE. The "London Fire-engine Establishment," an amalgamation of the engines of the different companies, was established in London in 1812 by Mr. Charles Bell Ford, director of the Sun Fire-office. It then had 30 men and 10 stations. In May, 1862, a commission recommended the establishment of a fire-brigade, which was carried by the Metropolitan Fire-Brigade Act 1865. The establishment then moved up its plant to the Metropolitan Board of Works, and was afterwards taken over by the London County Council under the Local Government Act of 1888. Now named the London County Council Fire-brigade. The fire-brigade is supported by a rate, and by FIRE-ESCAPES. 523

FIRE-ESCAPES. were patented by David Marie (1766), and John Smith (1773). The Royal Society for the Protection of Life from Fire was first established in 1785; its object was not fully attained till 1843, when it was re-organised, beginning with six escape-stations in London. In Aug., 1867, the plant of the society was virtually destroyed by the burning of the house of one of its contrivers. In consequence of the passing of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade Act, 1865, and subsequently passed to the London County Council (see Fire Brigade). The fatal fire in Queen Victoria-street, 6 June, 1862, occasioned an inquiry respecting the adequacy of the fire escapes in use. Vernam's composition for rendering washer-dresses fire-proof was published about 1869. The British Fire Prevention Committee reported an incorporated scientific society, under the Board of Trade, March, 1879.

FIRE INSURANCE. See Insurance.

FIREMAN'S RESPIRATOR. the invention of Dr. Tymall (1870-71), is a combination of his respirator of cotton-wool mixture with 25 cent. of a very pure form of charcoal. Armed with this apparatus a man may remain a long time in the densest smoke.

The Locc respirator was tried in smoke and poisonous vapour, and was reported efficient at Westminster, July, 1873.

FIRE ROYAL SOCIETY FOR PROTECTION FROM. See Fire-Escapes.

FIRE-SALVAGE CORPS formed, in 1865, by the London Fire Insurance Offices.

FIRE-SHIPS. Among the most formidable contrivances of this kind ever used, was an explosion vessel to destroy a bridge of boats at the siege of Antwerp, in 1585. The first use of them in the British navy was by Charles lord Howard of Effingham, in the engagement with the Spanish Armada, July, 1588. Reptas.

FIRE-WATCH or FIRE-GUARD of London, was instituted Nov. 1791.

FIRE-WORKS are said to have been made by the Chinese in remote ages. They were invented in Europe at Florence about 1632; and were exhibited as a spectacle in 1588. Macaulay states that the fire-works let off in England at the peace of Ryswick, in 1697, cost 120,000 of

Very grand fire-works were let off from a magnificently built building erected in the Green-park, London, at the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle, Nov. 1748. Exhibition of fire-works in Paris, in May, 1776, in honour of the marriage of the dauphin, afterwards Louis XVI., nearly 100 persons perished by pressure and drowning, through a panic.

The display of fire-works, under the Will of Congress, at the general peace, and the centenary of the accession of the Brunswick family to the throne, 1 Aug., 1784. Another at the coronation of William IV., 8 Sept., 1831. A grand display of this kind (at cost of 10,000). To celebrate the peace with Russia, 27 May, 1857.

In consequence of explosions frequently occurring at fire-works makers (particularly one on 12 July, 1838, at Mr. Bennett's in the Westminster-road, Lambeth, when five lives were lost, and about 50 persons seriously injured, and much property destroyed), it was determined to enforce a Will. III. c. 77 (1841), an act to prevent the throwing, kindling, firing, or setting, of explosives, and other fire-works. An act regulating the making of fire-works was passed in 1858.

Ralph Fenwicke, a maker, his wife, and six others, burnt, by explosion Nov. 18, 1858. Mr. C. T. Brock, first exhibited at the Crystal Palace, 1871.

FIRES. In London (and elsewhere after 1753), the conflagration of a city, with all its tumult of concomitant distress, is one of the most dreadful spectacles which this world can offer to human eyes.

FIRST-FRUTS.

FIRST-FRUTS were offerings which made a large part of the revenues of the Hebrew priesthood. First-fruits (called annates, from annus, a year, in the Roman church, originally the profits of one year of every vacant bishopric, afterwards of every benefice, were first claimed by pope Clement V. in 1350, and were collected in England in 1319, but chroniclers differ on this point. Pope Innocent II., in 1131, and Henry VIII., 1534, the first-fruits were assigned, by parliament, to the king and his successors. Mary gave the annates to the pope (1555); but Elizabeth resumed them (1559). They were granted, together with the tithes, to the poor clergy, by queen Anne, in 1703. The offices of first-fruits, tithes, and queen Anne's Bounty were consoli-

FISHERIES.

At Hull, 3 steam trawlers hand fish from the White sea, where they have been on a venture; large quantities of pelage discovered, other vessels being dispatched to the same ground. 4 Sept.
South Sea fisheries, United Kingdom, produce 14,648,657 cwt. fish, value £8,675,572, in 1894; 14,711,607 cwt., value £8,764,614, in 1895; 14,571,670 cwt., value £6,745,524; 17,979,453 cwt., value £7,799,027, 1896; 18,734,749 cwt., value £9,481,506, 1897; 14,353,634 cwt., value £7,676,060; 1898; 13,862,957 cwt., value £6,902,597, 1899.

FISHERIES DEPARTMENTS, &c. the fisheries on the North American coast were settled by treaty between Great Britain and the United States in 1818, the privileges of the latter extended to 1866 by treaty in 1854, and renewed for ten years, 1867, and again to 1888 by the terms of negotiations, the restrictions of 1818 were revised March, 1886. A joint commission was appointed, Rt. hon. J. Chamberlain (chair), hon. J. Bright, the former British minister, and sir Charles Tupper, Aug., 1887; received at Washington 19 Nov., met 22 Nov., 1887.
FLAX.

The manufacture in Egypt in very early times was carried thence to Tyre about 578 B.C., and to Gaul about 571 B.C.; and thus reached Britain. It was ordered to be grown in England, by the ensigns of war were extended on cross pieces of wood; see Carroccio. The honour-of-the-flag salute at sea was exacted by England from very early times; but it was formally yielded by the Dutch in 1673, at which period they had been defeated in many actions. Louis XIV. obliged the Spaniards to lower their flag to the French, 1680. Henault. After an engagement of three hours between TOURville and the Spanish admiral Papachin, the latter yielded by firing a salute of nine guns to the French flag, 2 June, 1688. Idem; see Salute at Sea, and Union Jack.

The comte de Chambord definitely declined to give up the white flag for the tricolor (see France), 5 July, 1871, and 27 Oct. 1871.

FLAGELLANTS, at Ponsore, about 1268, during a plague, they maintained there was no remission of sins without flagellation, and publicly lashed themselves. Clement VI. declared them heretics in 1349: and 96 of them and their leader, Conrad Schmidt, were burnt. In 1574, Henry III. of France became a flagellant for a short time.

FLAGOLET, a musical instrument said to have been invented by Juvigny, about 1811: double flagolet patented by Wm. Rainbridge, 1823: improved 1809 and 1810.

FLAMBEAUX, Feast of, see Argos.

FLAMINIAN WAY, the great road from Rome to Ariminum in Umbria, made under the direction of C. Flamininus, when censor in 221 B.C., when he also constructed the Flaminian groves. In 217 B.C. he was defeated and killed at the battle of the Trinimake lake, when resisting the march of Hannibal.

FLAMMACK'S REBELLION, see Rebellion, 1497.

FLANDERS, the principal part of ancient Belgium, which was conquered by Julius Cæsar, 51 B.C. It became part of the kingdom of France, A.D. 853, and was governed by counts subject to the king, from 862 till 1360, the first being Baldwin, Bras de Fer, who is said to have introduced the cloth manufacture. 1204, Baldwin IX. became emperor at Constantinople. 1399, Philip duke of Burgundy married Margaret, the heiress of count Louis II. After this, Flanders was subjected successively to Burgundy (1389), Austria (1477), and Spain (1543). In 1580 it declared its independence, but afterwards returned to its allegiance to the house of Austria. In 1713 it was included in the empire of Germany. France obtained a part of Flanders by treaty in 1659 and 1715. See Burgundy and Belgium.

FLAX. The manufacture in Egypt in very early times was carried thence to Tyre about 578 B.C., and to Gaul about 571 B.C.; and thus reached Britain. It was ordered to be grown in England, by FIUME (meaning river), the port of the kingdom of Austria, on the Adriatic: a very ancient town, built on the supposed site of Tersatia, destroyed by Charlemagne about 799, and afterwards known as Vitopolis, Civita Sancti Viti ad Flumin, and finally Fiume. After being successively subjected to the Greeks, Romans, the eastern emperors, and the pope, it was transferred to the house of Austria. It was captured by the French early in the century, from whom it was taken by the English in 1813, and given to Austria in 1814. It was transferred to Hungary in 1822; to the Croats in 1848; and restored to Hungary in 1868. A new port and railways constructed 1877. Visit of the emperor of Austria, entertained by admiral Hoskins and the British fleet, 23 June et seq. 1891.

Great fire at the railway station; heavy loss.

Disastrous floods, 1 death.

statute. 24 Hen. VIII. 1553. For many ages the core was separated from the flax, the bark of the plant, by the hand. A mallet was next used, but this was slow, and breaking the flax yielded to a water-mill which was invented in Scotland about 1750; see Hemp. The duty imposed on imported flax, 1812, was repealed 1845. In 1851 Cheyvdier Hansen patented a method of "cottonizing" flax.

FLEET, see Navy of England.

FLEET PRISON, MARKET, & c. (London), were built over the small river Fleet, now used as a common sewer. In the reign of Henry VII, this river is said to have been navigable to Holborn-bridge.

Fleet Prison was founded in the first year of Richard I, and was allotted for debtors, 1449; and persons were committed here who had incurred the displeasure of the Star Chamber, and for contempt of the court of Chancery. It was burnt during the Gordon riots, 7 June, 1780, and rebuilt 1782. It was pulled down in 1845 (and the debentures removed to the new prison). The site was sold to the London, Dover, and Chatham railway company for £25,000 on 2 June, 1849.

Fleet Market was opened 29 Nov. 1862. The gigantic edifice in Fleet-street, to the memory of alderman Wattman, was erected 25 June, 1833.

FLEET, an ancient English law treatise, an abridgment of Bracton, dated about 1285, said to have been composed in Fleet, in the Fleet prison, by some lawyer.

FLEUR DE LIS, the emblem of France, said to have been brought from heaven by an angel to Clovis, he having made a vow that if he proved victorious in a pending battle with the Alamanni near Cologne, he would embrace Christianity, &c. It was the national emblem till the revolution in 1790, when the tricolor (white, red, and blue) was adopted. The comte de Chambord declared his adherence to the old national flag, 5 July, 1871, and 27 Oct. 1873, with the armes of the Moselle, the Ardennes, and the north. The term was used a balloon to denote the enemy's army, which, it is said, contributed to their success.

Here Napoleon defeated Blucher at the battle of Ligny (which see) 18 June, 1815.

FLIES. An extraordinary fall of these insects in London covered the clothes of passengers, 1707. Chamberlain. In the United States of America the Hessian Fly, so called from the notion of its having been brought there by the Russian troops in the service of England in the War of Independence, ravaged the wheat in 1777. Before and during the severe attack of cholera in New- castle in Sept. 1853, the air was infected with small flies.

Dr. J. T. C. Nash, medical officer of health, Southend, supplies evidence of the important part played by flies as infective agents in the spread of epidemic diarrhoea, Lancet, 24 Sept., and 8 Oct. 1854.

PLague of flies at Carlitz; docks and principal thoroughfares of the city infected with millions of flies.

The brick arches, begun by Arnolfo, 1294; dedicated by pope Eugene IV., 1439; was completed by Brunelleschi, 1447; the façade was caused with horror by the Italian government and uncovered in presence of the king 12 July, 1882.

Other renovations of public buildings carried on 1883-6.

Equestrian statue of king Victor Emmanuel unveiled 8 Sept., 1889.

The national museum and other buildings greatly damaged by an earthquake 18 May, 1895.

Fine arts exhibition opened by the king and queen 15 Dec., 1896.

Fifth centenary of Amerigo Vespucchio and Paolo Toscanelli, who visited America in 1492, celebrated, 17 April et seq. 1898.

FLORALIA, or Isle of Flowers (one of the Azores, which see), discovered by Vanderberg in 1439; and seen by the Portuguese in 1448.

FLORIDA, a peninsula, one of the southern states of North America, first discovered by Sebastian Cabot in 1497. It was visited by Juan Ponce de Leon, the Spanish navigator, April 3, 1512, in a voyage he had undertaken to discover a fountain whose waters had the property of restoring youth to the aged who tasted them! Florida was conquered by the Spaniards under Ferdinand de Soto in 1539; but the settlement was not fully established until 1565. It was plundered by Sir Francis Drake in 1585; and by Davis, a buccaneer, in 1605. It was invaded by the British in 1702; and again by gen. Ogilthorpe in 1740; ceded to the British crown in 1763; taken by the Spaniards in 1781; and guaranteed to them in 1783. Capital, Tallahassee. Population in 1880, 204,923; 1890, 381,422; 1900, 528,542; 1910, (est.) 708,000.

The Americans purchase Louisiana from the French and claim West Florida 1803.

The Spaniards compelled to cede all Florida to the United States 24 Oct., 1825.

Florida admitted as a state 3 May, 1845.

Seeded from the Union, Dec. 1855; re-admitted (see United States) 1865.

A ship canal proposed; company organised. May, 1883.

After long neglect, this beautiful and fertile wilde was strangled warmly taken up by British and American capitalists 1883-4.

Remains of pre-historic villages, pottery, &c., discovered on the east coast; reported by Dr. De Witt Webb May, 1894.

Destructive cyclone, many deaths 3-5 Aug., 1894.

Great fire in Jacksonville, 148 blocks burnt, several deaths 3 May, 1901.

Destructive cyclone at Miami, reported 19 Oct., 1905.

FLORIN, a coin first made by the Florentines. A florin was issued by Edward III. which was current in England at the value of 6s. in 1337. Camden. This English coin was called florin after the Florentine coin, because the latter was of the best gold. A florin. The florin of Germany is in value 4s.; that of Spain, 4s. 4d.; that of Palermo and Sicily, 2s. 6d.; that of Holland, 2s. 6d. Silver florins (value 2s.) were issued in England in 1819.

FLOWERS. Many of our present common flowers were introduced into England from the reign of Henry VII. to that of Elizabeth (1485-1563). The art of preserving flowers in sand was discovered in 1653. A mode of preserving them from the effects of frost in winter, and hastening their vegetation in summer, was invented in America, by Geo. Morris, in 1772. A very great number introduced into this country from America, Australia, the Cape, &c., during the 18th century. Many of the dates in the following list, given in botanical works, are doubtful:

FLUORESCENCE.

FLUORINE, a gaseous element, obtained from fluorspar; first collected over mercury by Priestley. Its property of corroding all vessels great and small is separated with great difficulty. It was named by Ampere in 1810. Its chemical history was further elucidated by Davy (1809), Berzelius (1824), and succeeding chemists. The corroding property of fluoric acid was employed in the arts in 1760, by Schwankhard of Nuremberg, Gutelin.

FLYING, Artificial. In Greek mythology, Icarus is said to have attached wings of wax to his body, who, on flying, his son being advised of his father, flew so high that the sun melted his wings, and he fell into the Icarian sea. Archytas is said to have made a flying dove, about 400 B.C. Prior Bacon maintained the possibility of the art of flying, and predicted it would be a general practice, 1273. Bishop Wilkins says (1651), it will yet be as usual to hear a man call for his wings when he is going on a journey, as it is now to hear him call for his boots! Borelli (about 1670) showed the futility of these speculations. About 1800 sir George Cayley experimented on the subject, and in 1813 Mr. Henson invented a flying machine; but nothing has been devised capable of leisureing the particular purpose. The motion relative to Aeronautics was much discussed by scientific men in 1867-8, and since. At a meeting of the Aeronautical Society, 26 March, 1868, it was stated that a member had actually, by his muscular force, aided by apparatus, risen from the ground and flown horizontally. Dr. James Pettigrew published a long elaborate research on flying in 1857-74. M. van Groef, a Belgian, the "flying-man," descended from a balloon by means of a parachute resembling wings, in 1874, but was killed by falling through failure of his apparatus at Chelsea, 9 July, 1874.

FONTENAILL, or Fontenay (Fontanaum), a village in Burgundy. Near here Charles the Bold and Louis the German totally defeated the emperor Lothaire I. 25 June, 911. This victory, termed "the judgment of God," conduced to the formation of the French monarchy.

FONTENOY, near Tourna in Belgium, the site of an obstinate sanguinary battle on 30 April (11 May, n.s.), 1745, between the French, commanded by marshal Saxe, and the English, Hanoverians, Dutch, and Austrians, commanded by the duke of Cumberland. The king Louis XV. and the dauphin were present. The success of the British at the commencement is still quoted as an illustration of the extraordinary power of a column; and the advance of the Austrians during several hours at Marengo (14 June, 1800) was compared to it by Bonaparte. The allies lost 12,000 men, and the French nearly an equal number; but the allies were compelled to retire. Marshal Saxe (all of the disorder of which he afterwards died) was carried about to all the posts in a litter, assuring his troops that the day would be their own.

Fonthill Abbey, Wiltshire, founded in 1709, the mansion of William Beckford, author of "Vathek," and that of Alderman Beckford. He died 2 May, 1844. Within this edifice (which alone cost 275,000l.) were collected costly articles of virtue and art, and the rarest works of the old masters. The sale of the abbey and its contents to Mr. Farquhar took place in 1822, 7,200 catalogues at a guinea each were sold in a few days. On 21 Dec. 1825, the lofty tower fell, and in consequence the remaining buildings were sold.

FONTS. Fonts are said to have been set up in churches in the sixth century.

Forbes Mackenzie's Act, see Scotland, 1853.
FOREIGN BOND-HOLDERS were incorporated by licence of the Board of Trade as an association 1 Aug. 1873. A fund was created for the protection of the investing public. Reports issued 1895-99. "Foreign cottons," see Council, 1896.

FOREIGN CATTLE MARKET. The city of London having been required to provide this market before 1 Jan. 1872, by the Contagious Diseases Act (for Animals, 1869), the common council, 7 Nov. 1870, agreed to the expenditure of 160,000l. for the purpose. The site chosen, Deptford dockyard, was much opposed. The requisite alterations were made by Mr. Horace Jones, and the market was formally opened by the lord mayor, 28 Dec. 1871; for use on 1 Jan. 1872.

FOREIGN ENLISTMENT ACT, 59 Geo. III. c. 6 (1816), forbids British subjects to enter the service of a foreign state, without licence from the king or privy council, and prohibits the fitting out or equipping ships for any foreign power to be employed against any power with which our government is at peace; see 7 Geo. IV. 1826, 1832. In 1840, Englishmen were forbidden to enter foreign service, without taking an oath not to be reconciled to the pope. The act was suspended in 1835 on behalf of the British Legion (which see). The act passed 9 Aug. 1870, relates to illegal enlisting, shipbuilding, and expeditions.

FOREIGNERS, see Alien and Law. Foreigners in the United Kingdom: 1871, 113,779; in 1881, 135,640; the Germans being among the third. Foreign prison-made goods act passed (prohibitory), 1897.

FOREIGN JURISDICTION ACTS, passed in 1843, 1865, and 1886, were extended and amended by 41 & 42 Vict. c. 67, passed 16 Aug. 1878; these acts were consolidated in 1890.

FOREIGN LEGION. Foreigners have frequently been employed as auxiliaries in the pay of the British government; see Hessians. An act (18 & 19 Vict. c. 2) for the formation of a foreign legion as a contingent in the Russian war (1855), was passed 23 Dec. 1854. * Queen Victoria and Prince Albert reviewed 3500 soldiers, principally Swiss and Germans, at Shorncliffe, 9 Aug. 1855. On the peace in 1856, many were sent to the Cape of Good Hope; but not prospering, returned.

FOREIGN LOANS, see Loans.

FOREIGN MISSIONS, see Missions.

FOREIGN OFFICE was established at the re-arrangement of the duties of secretaries of state in 1782. It has the exclusive charge of British interests and subjects in foreign countries. The secretary for foreign affairs negotiates treaties, selects ambassadors, consuls, &c., for foreign countries, and grants passports. The foreign office building in the Italian style (designed by Sir Gilbert Scott) was begun in 1864. A portion of it was inaugurated by Mr. Disraeli's reception, 25 March, and it was occupied by lord Stanley, 24 June, 1868. See Administrations under separate heads, and Secretaries.

* The endeavour to enlist for this legion, in 1854, in the United States, gave great offence to the American government. Mr. Crampton, our envoy, was dismissed, 28 May, 1856, in spite of all the judicious pacific efforts of lord Clarendon. Lord Napier was sent out as our representative in 1857.

FOREIGN ORDERS. No British subject is permitted to accept a foreign order from the sovereign of any foreign country, or wear the insignia thereof, without his majesty's consent, by orders issued in 1812 and 1834—regulations published in London Gazette, 10 May, 1855.

FORESTALLING was forbidden by statutes (in 1350, 1352, &c.), all repealed in 1844.

FORESTERS, Ancient Order of, a friendly society, founded on the principle that many can help one; in times of sickness, in old age, in distress and at death; all religious and political questions are strictly avoided. The earliest notice of Forestry is in a list of members made in "Court No. 1" of the "Ancient Royal Order of Foresters" in the parish of Leeds, 1790. In 1834, 204 courts of this order were incorporated in the Ancient Order of Foresters, which held its first court at Salford, 1835; 16,510 certificated members enrolled. Forestry in all adhered to the United States of America as early as 1807, and was later introduced into Canada and Australia. Juvenile Foresters' Society instituted at Hull, 1840. Females admitted 1892. The 7th High Court at Birmingham: number of members reported 600,000, 6 Aug. 1888. Number of members reported Dec. 1901, 826,355; Dec. 1909, 1,215,527. Reported capital, Dec. 1901, 7,172,453l. Dec. 1909, 7,357,342l.

FOREST GATE, Essex, see Fires, 1 Jan. 1890.

FORESTS. There were in England, even in the last century, as many as 68 forests, 18 chase, and upwards of 780 parks. See New Forest.* International Forestry exhibition at Edinburgh, recommended by government, Nov. 1833; opened 1 July; closed 1 Nov. 1834. Parliamentary committee on forestry appointed, May, 1833. Planting of trees increased. 1838, Act of Parliament, 1888; for regulating the affairs of the Forest, see Forests, Charter of the. Charters of Forests, granted by Henry III. in 1217, was founded on Morgan Charter. Charter by king Edward I. in 1366; June, 1215. It was confirmed in 1225 and 1229. See Woods.

FORFARSHIRE STEAMER, on its passage from Hull to Dundee, on 6 Sept. 1838, was wrecked, a violent gale, and of thirty-eight persons on board, only five survived. The Outer-Fern Lighthouse keeper, James Darling, and his heroic daughter

* The commissioners appointed to empire into the state of the woods and forests, between 1877 and 1901, reported the following as belonging to the crown, viz. In Berkshire, Windsor Forest and Windsor Great and Little Park. In Dorset, Cranborne Chase. In Essex, Waltham or Epping and Hamstead Forest. In Gloucestershire, Dean Forests and Hambledon Woods. In Hertfordshire, Alice Holt, Woolmer Forest, and Bere Forest. In Kent, Greenwich Park. In Middlesex, St. James's, Hyde, Bushy, and Hampton court Parks. In Northamptonshire, the forest of Whittlebury, Salcey, and Rockingham. In Nottingham, Sherwood Forest. In Oxford, White Wood Forest. In Surrey, Richmond Park. Several of those above have been destroyed since 1851, viz. Hambledon Whitchurch, and Whittlewood. A commission of the house of commons respecting forests sat in 1836. Motion in parliament to preserve Epping Forest adopted 14 Feb. 1837; and the decision of the Master of the Rolls, Nov. 1874, stopped the encroachments by the lords of manors. The commissioners' new scheme was published July, 1836. Memorial trees were planted by King George IV. in 1823, by his Grace the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, in 1827. The last memorial tree was dedicated to the use of the people by Queen Victoria, 6 May, 1882. 23 acres of land at Yardley-hill, given by Mr. E. N. Buxton to the forest, opened by the duke of Connaught, 1 June, 1895.
FORGERY.

Grace, ventured out in a tremendous sea in a cable, and rescued several of the passengers.

The "Journal of William Parry," from 1734 to 1760, published in 1782, states that forty-three persons out of sixty-one perished.

FORGERY of deeds, or giving forged deeds in evidence, was made punishable by fine, by standing in the pillory, having both ears cut off, the nostrils slit up and scarred, the forfeiture of land, and perpetual imprisonment. 5 Eliz. 1392. Since the establishment of paper credit many statutes have been enacted; the latest Forgery Act passed 6 Aug. 1898. The Forged Transfers Act was passed to serve purchasers of stock from forged transfers, 1871 and 1892. Convictions for forgeries and offences against the currency, 1887-8, 622; 1891, 355; 1890, 527; 1899, 311; 1901, 282; 1906, 301; 1908, 281.

Forgery first made punishable by death 1674
Forging letters of attorney, money capital 1672
Mr. Ward, M.P., a man of wealth, expelled the house of commons for forgery, 15 May 1771, and confined to the pillory 17 July 1777.
The first forgery on the bank of England was Richard William Vaughan, once a linen-draper of Stafford. He employed a number of artists on different parts of the notes fabricated. He filled up two vats of dyes and deposited them in the hands of a young boy whom he was on the point of marrying, as a proof of his being a man of substance. Two persons were employed. One of the artists informed, and Vaughan was executed at Tyburn 1 May 1779.
Value of forged notes presented to the bank 150 to 200 shillings.
The bank presented 1,442 persons for forgery or the uttering of forged notes 1817
These Maynard, the last person executed for forgery, 14 Dec. 1829.

Steeles reducing in one act all such forgeries as shall henceforth be punished with death 1682
The punishment of forgery with death ceased, except in cases of forging of altering wills or powers of attorney to transfer stock 1737
These cases also reduced to transportable offences 1737
A barrister, John Seward, and others, tried for forging numerous drafts on bankers. 5 March 1857.
The Forger's Art amended 1858 and 1860.
For W. Hipwell's case, see Trials Aug.-Sept. 1889.
Holmes' Life of the Forgers, sentenced to fifteen years for forging a cheque of £2,000, on the London & Westminster bank 24 March 1836.
Discontent, Freeman, and Gibbons pleaded guilty, relating in their possession possession to forged Bank of England notes, and to conspiring to forge and alter at as many notes, sentenced each to 14 years, Brown, 10 yrs., two others to 15 yrs., and one to 15 months imprisonment 16 May 1849.
See Forgeries for forgery 1727, 1777, 1797, &c.

Lightly, forgeries, see Economy; Peddling Fugitives; Edit. 18 July, Shipwreck pedlars case, see Trials Nov. 17, 1847, and Common's Bank 1849.

FORKS were in use on the Continent in the 3rd and 14th centuries. Valdier. This is reasonably disputed. In Fane-Mayson's Vassalry, reign of Elizabeth, he says, "At Venice each person was served beside his knife and spoon with a fork to hold his bread while he cuts it, for there they deem it ill manners that one should touch it with his hand." Thomas Coryate describes, with much solemnity, the manner of using forks in Italy, and adds, "I myself have thought it good to imitate the Italian fashion since I came home to England," 1628. Two-pronged forks were made at Sheffield soon after. Three-pronged forks are more recent.

Silver forks, previously only used by the highest classes, came into general use in England about 1814.
Mt. Simeon found a bronze fork with two prongs at Konjurik, Assam, 1871.
A "flesh-hook of three teeth" mentioned 1 Sam. ii. 13, about 1025 BC.

FORMA TAUPERIS. A person having a past cause of suit, certified as such, yet so poor that he cannot meet the cost of maintaining it, has an attorney and counsel assigned him on his swearing that he is not worth 5s., by stat. 11 Hen. VII. 1495.
This act has been amended, and now any person may plead in forma pauperis in the courts of law.

FORMIC ACID, the acid of ants (formic). Its artificial production by Pelouze in 1831 was considered an event in the progress of organic chemistry.

FORMIGNI (N.W. France). Here the constant de Richemont defeated the English, 15 April 1459.

FORMOSA, an island in the Pacific, 90 miles from the Chinese coast. The early Spanish and Dutch settlers were expelled by Chinese colonists about 1641. Island ceded to Japan by Chia a 895. Area, 13,500 square miles; population, 3,000,000, 1905, including 5,000 Japanese. Amoy is the chief port. Savages hold the mountains. In May, 1874, the Japanese, with the consent of a Chinese mandarin, established the railway there for massacring Japanese sailors on their proposed settlement on the island. The Chinese threatened war if they did not quit within 90 days, 18 Aug. 1874. By British interposition the Japanese withdrew, an indemnity having been agreed on; treaty between Japan and China signed 31 Oct. 1874. FORNOVO (Parma, Italy). Near here Charles VIII. of France defeated the Italians, 6 July, 1495.

FORT DU QUESNE, N. America. Near here general Braddock was surprised by a party of French and Indians, his troops routed and himself killed, 9 July, 1755. The fort was named Fort Pitt after its capture by Forbes, 21 Nov. 1758. It is now Pittsburg.

FORT ERIE (Upper Canada). This fortress was taken by the American general Browne, 3 July, 1814. After several conflicts it was evacuated by the Americans, 5 Nov. 1814.

FORT GEORGE, Inverness, N.W. Scotland, was erected in 1747, to restrain the Highlanders.—Fort William, besieged by them in vain in 1746, is now in ruins.

FORTH, a great river of Scotland, rising in Ben Lomond, and entering the North Sea as an estuary, termed the Firth of Forth. The Firth and Clyde Canal was commenced 10 July, 1765, under the direction of Mr. Smouton, and opened 28 July, 1769. A communication was thus formed between the eastern and western seas on the coast of Scotland.
The Firth Railway-Bridge projected, and a raft launched in June, 1866. Mr. (afterwards Sir T.) Bouch, of Edinburgh, was engaged to prepare plans for a suspension-bridge, 1828. The Firth bridge company accepted tenders from Wm. Arrol & Co. (£1,250,000) for constructing bridge and railway, Oct. 1859; through Tay-bridge disaster, etc., the scheme was suspendied and eventually abandoned by the company, 17 Jan. 1871. The construction of the present Firth Bridge was undertaken by the company supported by the North British Railway and the Midland railway companies; the act was passed, June, 1882; engineers, Mr. John Fowler and Mr. Benjamin Baker, whose plans were based on the cantilever or bracket system. Sir John Hawkshaw, Bart. Knight of India, was the contractor. The rocky islet of Inchgarvie was of great importance in the construction of the bridge; the works began by building the foundations, Jan. 1883. The last bolt was driven, 6 Nov. 1885; the strength of the bridge was tested by the passage of nearly 2,000 tons, steamed half way across, 21 Jan.; and officially tested for board of trade, Feb. 1885. The first train which crossed the entire bridge was driven by the march-mossed of Tweeddale, carrying a distinguished company, in five minutes, 24 Jan. 1859. The place of Wales (afterwards Edward VII.), after driving in the last rivet, in the presence of the duke of Edinburgh, the duke of Fife, prince George of Wales, the marquis of Tweeddale, the earl of Rosebery, and other distinguished visitors, including Mr. Ethel and other eminent engineers, said: "Ladies and gentlemen, I now declare the Forth bridge open," r. 30 p.m. 3 March, 1890.
The distance of the bridge (from North to South Queensferry), with the approaching viaducts, is one mile 1,005 yards; the highest part of the bridge is 262 feet; the clear headway under the centre of the bridge is 157 feet above high water. The greatest number of men employed at one time was 5,000. 50 lives were lost during the construction, in spite of great precautions. Wm. Arrol & Co. were the contractors. Estimated cost £6,000,000, ret. maj cost about £2,500,000.

Mr. Matthew William Thompson, chairman of the Forth Bridge and Midland railway companies, and Mr. John Fowler (died 20 Nov. 1859), were created baronets, Mr. Benjamin Baker was made K.C.M.G., and Mr. William Arrol was knighted, 1890.
The bridge was opened for the ordinary railway trains, 2 June, 1890. By the fall of scaffolding through high wind, 3 painters killed . . . . . . 29 Sept. 1891.

FORTIFICATION. The Phoenicians were the first people to fortify cities. Apollodorus says that Persians fortified Myocene, where statues were afterwards erected to him. The modern system was introduced about 1580. Albert Duruy wrote on fortification in 1757; and great improvements were made by Vauban, who fortified many places in France; he died 1707. The new fortifications of Paris were completed in 1857; see Paris. In Aug. 1860, the British parliament passed an act for the expenditure of 2,000,000/. in one year upon the fortifications of Portsmouth, Plymouth, Pembroke, and Portland, the Thames, Medway, and Sheerness, Chatham, Dover, and Cork, and on the purchase of a central arsenal establishment; the estimated expense being 5,500,000/. A committee to investigate further fortifications was appointed, 16 April. 1898. Since 1860 fortification at all the principal forts of the Empire improved steadily. The Gibraltar fortifications are regarded as the most complete system in the world.

FORTIS, a powerful explosive invented in Belgium about 1887, said to be well adapted for mining purposes. In May, 1890, it was manufactured by the Fortis Powder and Explosives company. Successful experiments at Liefé, 8 Sept. 1891.

FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW, first published in 1865, edited by G. H. Lewes, succeeded by John Morley in 1897, and others. It was afterwards published monthly.

FORTUNE-TELLING is traced to the early astrologers, by whom the planets Jupiter and Venus were supposed to betoken happiness. The Siby list are women said to be inspired by Heaven; see Sibyls and Grecians. In England the laws against fortune-telling were at one time very severe. A declaration was published in France, 11 Jan. 1860, of exceeding severity against fortune-tellers and poisoners, under which several persons suffered death. Hewitt. Fortune-tellers, although liable by the acts of 1743 and 1824 to be imprisoned as rogues and vagabonds, still exist in England. See Palmistry.

FORTY-SHILLING FREEHOLDERS, see Freeholders.

FORTY-SHILLINGS' DAY, the name of a quaint custom annually kept up since 1718 on the feast of the Purification (2 Feb.), at Walton, in Surrey. William Glanville left 2½ each for 5½ men who should, playing their fuzions upon his tomb in the churchyard, vent the Creed, the Lord's Prayer, the Ten Commandments, and afterwards read 1 Cor. xx, and write out two verses of the chapter. The number of recipients has since been increased.

gradually adorned with temples and public buildings.—Near Fontevrault, in Moria, the Romans were defeated by the Goths, Nov. 251. After a struggle in the miscues, the emperor Decius and his son were slain and their bodies not recovered. See Rome, 885, 1041, 1062.

FOSSALTA, near Bologna, central Italy. Here Enzo or Enrico, titular king of Sardinia, natural son of the emperor Frederick II., was defeated and made prisoner, 25 May, 1287, and retained. He was kept in honourable captivity till his death, 14 March, 1272.

FOTHERINGAY CASTLE (Northamptonshire), built about 1400. Here Richard III. of England was born in 1450; and here Mary queen of Scots was tried, 11-14 Oct., 1586, and beheaded, 8 Feb., 1587. It was demolished by her son, James I. of England, in 1604.

FOUDROYANT. Nelson's flagship 1708; purchased by Mr. J. R. Cobb, F.S.A., from a German firm, and brought to the Thames, 28 Nov. 1862; proposed to make her a Nelson museum unsuccessful, October, 1893. A company having failed, J. R. Cobb purchased the vessel, 1895-96; it was moored off Woolwich, and open to visitors, 10 June, 1896; wrecked in a gale at Blackpool, crew saved, 10 June, 1897; destroyed in a gale, 28 Nov. 1897; Mr. Cobb died, 6 Dec. 1897.

FOUGHIARD, near Dundalk, N. Ireland. Here Edward, brother of Robert Bruce, after invading Ireland in 1315, was defeated by Sir John Bermingham, 5 Oct. 1318. Bruce was killed by Roger de Maupis, a burgess of Dundalk.

FOUNDLING HOSPITALS are ancient. A species of foundling hospital was set up at Milan in 1758, and in the middle ages was one of the principal cities of the continent possessed one, The French government in 1790 declared foundlings to be "children of the state."

Foundling hospital of Paris incorporated 1737.
No foundling hospital in England when Addison wrote in — 1733.
London foundling hospital, projected by Thomas Coram, a sea-captain, incorporated, Oct. 1739; opened for business, 1741; Handel gave an organ, opened it 1 May, 1790; it succours about 540 infant children; Coram's statue was put up in 1839.
Foundling hospitals founded at Mexico, Rio de Janeiro, and Buenos Ayres — 1774.
Foundling hospital in Dublin instituted in 1794.
Owing to great mortality, and from moral considerations, the infant department was closed by order of government, 31 March, 1855.
Foundling hospital at Moscow, founded by Catherine II. in 1772; about 12,000 children are annually received. Foundling asylum of the Sisters of Charity established in New York City — 1776.

FOUNTAIN COLLECTION of Renaissance works, Louvre, Limoges, Raphæle, and Palissy. Lamented ware, &c. (unequalled); and also a fine collection of coins, medals, carved ivory work, &c., formed by sir Andrew Fountain, in the reigns of Anne and George I.; placed in Narford Hall, Nortolk, about 1750, sold by Christie and Mansis for 81,112l. 14s. 19d. June, 1853; by the sale of ancient drawings, on 11 July, the sum was raised to 196,278l. Sir Andrew Fountain died in 1783.

FOUNTAINS. The fountain of Hero of Alexandria was invented about 150 B.C. Among the remarkable fountains at Rome are the Fontana di Trevi, constructed for pope Clement XII. in 1735; the Fontana Paolina, erected for pope Paul V. in 1615; and the Fontana della Bocca della Verita, called also the Fountain of Moses. The fountains in the palace gardens at Versailles, made for Louis XIV., and the Grand Jet d'Eau, at St. Cloud, are exceedingly beautiful. There are above 100 public fountains in Paris, the most striking being the Château d'Eau on the Boulevard St. Martin (by Girard, 1811) and that at the Palais Royal. London is not remarkable for fountains; the largest are in Trafalgar-square, constructed in 1845, after designs by Sir Charles Barry. There are beautiful fountains at Chatsworth, in Derbyshire, the seat of the duke of Devonshire. The magnificent fountains at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, were first publicly exhibited on 18 June, 1856, in the presence of queen Victoria and 20,000 spectators.

The fountain at Park-lane, London, W., the gift of Mrs. Brown, was inaugurated and uncovered, 9 July, 1875. It has statues of Chaucer, Shakespeare, and Milton, the work of Mr. Thomas Girtin, and cost good.

FOURIERISM, a social system devised by M. Charles Fourier (who died in 1837). The Phalanx (from phalana), an association of 400 families living in one edifice, was to be so arranged as to give the highest amount of happiness at the lowest cost. The system failed; said, it is said, by the smallness of the scale on which it was tried.

The Fourniture, a somewhat similar system, established by M. Godin, a manufacturer of stove, &c., at Guise, N. France, was reported successful in Jan. 1836.

"FOUR MASTERS," a name given to Michael, Cencar, and Cecoegy O'Clery, and For- fenn O'Fenere, who compiled from original documents the annals of Ireland from 222 B.C. to A.D. 1146. An edition of these "Annals," printed from autograph MSS., with a translation edited by Dr. John O'Donovan, was published at Dublin in 1851. The "Four Masters" lived in the first half of the 17th century.

FOURTH ESTATE. Thomas Carlyle states that this term was applied to the newspaper press by Edmund Burke when speaking in the House of Commons. Burke died 9 July, 1797.

FOURTH PART, a name facetiously given to Lord Randolph Churchill, sir Henry Drummond Wolfe, Mr. (att. sir) John Gorst, and a few other conservative members, active opponents of the government, also termed "free lancers." The other parties were liberals, conservatives, and home-rulers (1890-5).

Lord Randolph Churchill and some of his friends desire to imitate radical organization (popular, responsible, and representative), advocating "Everyman's democracy," 11 May, 1894. He and some others took office under the Salisbury administration — June, 1885.

1724. Louis XVI., his grandson; ascended the throne in his 17th year; married the archduchess Marie Antoinette, of Austria, May, 1770; dethroned, 14 July, 1789; guillotined, 21 Jan. 1793, and his queen, 16 Oct. following.

Louis XVII. was beheaded Monday, 21 January, 1793, at eight o'clock a.m. On the scaffold he said, “Frenchmen, I die innocent of the offences imputed to me. I pardon all my enemies, and I implore of Heaven that my beloved France...” At this instant Santerre ordered the drums to beat, and the executioners to perform their office. When the guillotine descended, the priest exclaimed: “Son of St. Louis asseverated to heaven.” The bleeding head was then held up, and a few of the populace shouted, “Vive la Republique!” The body was interred in a grave that was immediately afterwards filled up with quicklime, and a strong guard was placed around until it should be consumed.”
1795. Louis XVI., son of Louis XV. He never reigned; and died in prison, supposed by poison, 5 June, 1794; aged 10 years 2 months. It is believed by some that he escaped to England, and lived there some time as Augustus Meves.* In 1874 a person calling himself Auguste de Bourbon claimed to be his son. In France also Albert de Bourbon, son of one Naundorff, claimed to be son of Louis XVII. At a trial in Paris, when Jules Favre was his counsel, the verdict was strongly against his claim, 27 Feb. 1874.

FRANCHE COMTÉ, in upper Burgundy, E. Eiff, son was conquered by Julius Cæsar, about 45 B.C.; by the Burgundians, early in the fifth century, A.D.; and by the Franks about 534. It was made a county for Hugh the Black in 915, and received its name from having been taken from Renaud III. (1127-48), and restored to him. By marriage with the count's daughter, Beatrice, the emperor Frederick I. acquired the county, 1158. Their descendant, Mary of Burgundy, by marriage with the archduke Maximilian, conveyed it to the house of Austria, 1477. It was conquered by the French, 1668; restored by the treaty of Aix la Chapelle, 2 May, 1668; again conquered; and finally annexed to France by treaty, 1678.

FRANCHISE. A privilege or exemption from ordinary jurisdiction, and anciently an asylum or sanctuary where the person was secure. In Spain, churches and monasteries were, until last century, franchises for criminals, as formerly in England; see Monasteries. In 1429, in England, the elective franchise for counties was restricted to persons having at least 40s. a year in land, and resident; for recent changes, see Reform.

FRANCIS' ASSAULT ON QUEEN VICTORIA. John Francis, a youth, fired a pistol at queen Victoria as she was riding down Constitution-hill, in an open barouche, accompanied by prince Albert, 30 May, 1852. The queen was uninjured. Francis was condemned to death, 17 June following, but was transported for life. He was liberated on ticket-of-leave in 1867.

FRANCISCANS. Grey or Minor Friars, an order founded by St. Francis d'Assisi, about 1209. Their rules were chastity, poverty, obedience, and very austere regulations. About 1221 they appeared in England, where, at the time of the dissolution of monasteries by Henry VIII., they had fifty-five abbeys or other houses 536-38.

Earthquake, followed by fires all over the city, 1871. 25 lives lost in the city riot, May, 1871. April 1867, Senate passed resolution approving the action of President Lincoln's ministers in dealing with the civil war. Major issues proclamation stating that peace people are homeless. April 1864. Indictment of Eugene Schmitz, mayor of San Francisco, and Reid, the police officer, "Beneath the city on charges of extortion," May 1866. Schmitz sentenced to 5 years' imprisonment, 8 July, 1867. Abe Reed sentenced to 14 years' imprisonment, 29 Dec. 1868.

FRANCONIA, or FRANKENLAND on the Main, formerly a circle of the German empire, part of Thuringia, was conquered by Thierry, king of the Franks, 530, and colonized. Its count or duke, Conrad, was elected king of Germany, 5 Nov., 914; and his descendant was the emperor Conrad III., elected 1138, and another duke. Franconia was made a distinct circle from Thuringia in 1512. At its subdivision in 1866 various German princes obtained part of it. In 1814 the largest share was awarded to Bavaria.

FRANCO-PRUSSIAN WAR originated in the emperor of the French's jealousy of the greatly increased power of Prussia, through the successful issue of the war with Denmark in 1864, and with Austria in 1866. The German Confederation was thereby annulled, and the North German Confederation established under the supremacy of the king of Prussia, to whose territories were further annexed Hannover, Hesse-Cassel, Nassau, Frankfurt, and other principalities. This great augmentation of the power of Prussia was mainly due to the energetic policy of Count Bismarck-Schönhausen, prime minister since Sept., 1862.

In a draft treaty, secretly proposed to the French government by the French emperor in 1866, 1. the German princes recognize the emperor of France as the head of the German nation; 2. Prussia has made in the last war; 3. The king of Prussia promises to institute the acquisition of Luxembourg, by France; 4. The emperor will not negotiate a peace agreement upon the acquisition of the nation, and southern states of Germany, excluding Austria; 5. The king of Prussia, in case the emperor should enter into emperor Belgium, will support him in arbitrary power. They enter into an alliance offensive and defensive.

This draft treaty was sent to Bismarck-Schönhausen, prime minister, by the French government. In March, 1867, a dispute arose through the French emperor's proposal for purchasing Luxembourg from the king of Holland, which was strongly opposed to its acquisition. In part of the desired German confederation, and the offer was only settled by a compromise of the representatives of the great powers at London, at which the 19th century of Luxembourg was determined, to the monarchs of the Prussian and the possession of the nation, and the destruction of the boundaries.

1821 May, 1867

Prince Leopold of Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen (son of the Prussian dynasty, and brother of Charles, prince of Reuss), determined to become a candidate for the throne of Saxony July, 1870.

This was denounced by the French government.

The emperor, in the presence of the great powers, chamber by the de Grandmont, the foreign minister, and eventually, after some negotiation and the intervention of Great Britain, prince Leopold, with the consent of his son, 2, and the present German crown, 13 July, 1870.

The submission did not satisfy the French government and nation, and the demand for a guarantee against the repetition of such an acceptance irritated the French government, and led to the termination of the negotiations, the king refusing to receive the count Benoît, the French minister.

Energetic but fruitless efforts to avert the war were made by Earl Granville, the British foreign minister, about 15 July.

War was announced by the French emperor, with the hearty consent of the great majority of the chambers of deputies, 15 July, 1870, in opposition to the war; M. Thiers, and a few others only protested against it as premature, 15 July.

(After his surrender on 2 Sept., the emperor told Count Bismarck that he did not desire war, but was forced into it by public opinion. He appears to have been greatly deceived as to the numerical strength of his army, and its state of preparation.)

"The greatest national crime that we have had to face of France since the days of the first French revolution has been consummated. War is declared; an unjust but premeditated war."

Tues 16 July, 1870.

(FOR DETAILS SEE PRIVATE ARTICLES.)

FRENCH ARMY, about 360,000—

1. 1st corps, under marshal MacMahon; 2, corps, under general Frassard; 3, corps, under marshal Bazaine; 4, corps, under general de Patay, 5, corps, under general de Flahys, 6, corps, under Marshal Cambefort.

Imperial guard, under general Bonhaki; Commander-in-chief, the emperor, general Le Boeuf, second; succeeded by marshal Bazaine.

PRUSSIAN ARMY, about 60,000—

1. Northern, under general Vogel von Maximilian, about 20,000, defending the Elbe, Hanover, etc.; 2. Right, under prince Frederick Charles, about 150,000; 3. Centre, under generals Von Bittenfeld and Von Steinfurth, about 50,000; 4. The left, under the crown prince of Prussia, about 180,000; Commander-in-chief, king William, second; general Helmuth von Moltke (born 26 Oct., 1828; died 24 April, 1890).

The North German army, at the beginning of August, consisted, firstly, of 550,000 line, with 1,220 guns and 47,500 cavalr?, and about 8,000 regulars and 12,000 cavalry; and, thirdly, of 200,000 landwehr or militia, with 10,000 cavalry, making a grand total of 614,000 men, with 1,880 mobilised guns and 550,000 horses.

To these must be added, firstly, the Bavarians, 60,000 line, with 162 guns and 12,400 horses—25,000 reserve with 2,400 horses and 22,000 landwehr; secondly, the Wurttemberg, 20,000 line and 24 guns and 6,000 horses, 5,600 reserve, and 6,000 landwehr; and, thirdly, the Badens, 60,000 line with 54 guns and 4,000 reserve, and 7,500 landwehr.

All the German troops taken together as under arms in Aug., 1870, 1,120,000 men.

Four weeks previously, on the peace footing, they numbered only 330,000.

The French generals appear to have acted greatly upon impulse. The Germans seem to have been invariably guided by a well-matured plan, their tactics mainly consisting in bringing vast masses to bear on the point where they were anxious to prevail. From Naumburg to Sedan, Moltke appears to have left nothing to chance; and all his arrangements were ably carried out.

The causes of the early ruin of the French army were: 1. the empire's superiority of the French in regard to numbers; 2. the absolute unity of their command and concert of action; 3. their superior mechanism in equipment and supplies; 4. the superior intelligence, strategy, and discipline of the soldiers; 5. superior education of the officers, and the dash and intelligence of the cavalry. FRANKLIN. SEARCH FOR, Sir John Franklin, with captains Crozier and Fitzjames, in H. M. ships Erebus and Terror (carrying in all 138 persons), sailed on his third arctic expedition of discovery and survey, from Greenhithe, on 10 May, 1815; see Northwest Passage. Their last dispatches were from the Whalsh-Islands, dated 12 July, 1845. Their protracted absence caused intense anxiety, and several expeditions were sent from England and elsewhere in search of them, and coals, provisions, clothing, and other necessary, were deposited in various places in the Arctic seas by our own and by the American government, by lady Franklin, and numerous private persons. The Teutenor, captain Parker, which arrived at Hull, 4 Oct. 1849, from Davis's Straits, brought intelligence (not afterwards confirmed) that the natives had seen Sir John Franklin's ships in the previous March, frozen up by the ice in Prince Regent's inlet. Other accounts were equally illusory. The English government, on 7 March, 1850, offered a reward of 20,000£, to any party of any country, that should render efficient assistance to the crews of the missing ships. Sir John's first winter quarters were found at Beechy island by captains Ommannay and Penny.

1. H. M. Sir, cap. Moore (afterwards under capt. Maguire), sailed from Sheerness to Behring's Straits, in search

2. 1 Jan. 1848

3. Land expedition under sir John Richardson and Dr. John Rae, of the Hudson's Bay Company, England.

25 March.

[Sir John Richardson returned to England in 1849, and Dr. Rae continued his search till 1851.]

3. Sir James Simpson, with the intrepid, (16 June, 1849), having also sailed in search to Barrow's Straits, returned to England (Scarborough)

3 Nov. 1849.

4. The Enterprise, capt. Collinson, and intrepid, commander Mclure, sailed from Plymouth for Behring's Straits.

20 Jan. 1850.

[Both ships proceeded towards the eastward.]

25 April.

[Returned Sept. 1851.]

6. The Lady Franklin, capt. Penny; and Sophia, capt. Stewart, sailed from Aberdeen for Behring's Straits.

13 April.

[Returned home Sept. 1851.]

7. The American expedition in the Advance and Ranger, under lieut. De Haven and Dr. Kane (son of the judge), towards which Mr. Grinnell subscribed 300,000 dollars, sailed for Lancaster Sound and Barrow Straits; after shifting in the pack south from Baffin's Bay, the ships were reported in 1851 uninjured.

26 May.

8. The Felix, sir John Russ, fitted out chiefly by the Hudson Bay Company, sailed to the same locality, 22 May.

[Returned in 1851.]

9. H. M. S. North Star, commander Saunders, which had sailed from England in 1849, wintered in Woktshelmie Sound, and returned to Spithead, 1852.

28 Sept.

10. H. M. S. Herald, captain Kellett, C.B., which had sailed in 1848, made three voyages to Behring's Straits, and returned in 1851.

14 Aug. 1852.

[The Assistance and Investigator (see No. 4 above) had not having been heard of for two years.]

[This expedition arrived at Beechy Island 14 Aug., 1852. The Assistance and Pioneer proceeded through Wellington Channel, and the Resolute and Intrepid to Melville Island, the North Star remaining at Beechy Island.]

LADY FRANKLIN'S EQUIPMENTS.

Lady Franklin, aided by a few friends (and by the "Tasmanian Tribute" of 1851), equipped four expeditions (1852, 1853, 1854, 1855).

1. Prince Albert, capt. Forsyth, sailed from Aberdeen to Barrow Straits.

5 June, 1850.

[Returned 1 Oct. 1850.]

FRANKLIN.

13. The Prince Albert, Mr. Kennedy, accompanied by lieut. Bellot, of the French navy, and John Hepburn, sailed from Stromness to Prince Regent's Inlet, on 4 June, 1851. (Returned Oct. 1852.)

14. The Isabel, commander Ingheldie, sailed for the head of Baffin's Bay, Jones's Sound, and the Wellington Channel, 6 July; and returned Nov. 1852.

15. Mr. Kennedy sailed again in the Isabel, on a renewed search to Behring's Straits.

H. M. S. Rattlesnake, commander Tollope, despatched to assist the Flora, capt. Maguire (who succeeded Capt. Moore), at Point Barrow in August, met it Aug.

17. The second American expedition, the Advance, under Dr. Kane, lay early in June.

18. The Phoenix (with the Ecossebank transport), commander Ingheldie, accompanied by lieut. Bellot, sailed in May: he returned, bringing despatches from Sir E. Belcher.

The Investigator and Sir E. Belcher's squadron were safe; but no traces of Franklin's party had been met with. Lieut. Bellot was unfortunately drowned in August.

Sir E. Belcher (No. 11), after mature deliberation, in April, 1854, determined to abandon his ships, and gave orders to that effect to all the captains under his command; and capt. Kellett gave similar orders to capt. M'Clure, of the Investigator. The vessels were abandoned in Baffin's Bay on 15 May. The Phoenix and Tolloth (under capt. Ingheldie) arrived (19). On their return to England all the captains were tried by court martial and honourably acquitted.

Capt. Franklin's fate was long uncertain, and another expedition was in contemplation; but intelligence came, in Feb. 1855, that he had met the Rattlesnake (16) at Fort Clarence on 21 Aug. 1854, and had sailed immediately, in her (returning capt. Maguire) the Phoenix (1), which had sailed two days previously. Capt. M'Clure having failed in getting through the ice in 1850 with capt. M'Clim's, returned to Hong Kong in winter 1854; when, being more released from duty, he sailed for Fort Clarence, where he arrived as above mentioned. Captains Collinson and Maguire arrived in England in May, 1855.

The third American expedition in search of Dr. Kane, in the Advance, consisted of the Release and the steamer Arctic, the barque Elrene, and another vessel under the command of Lieut. H. J. Hartstone, accompanied by a brother of Dr. Kane as surgeon.

[On 17 May, 1855, Dr. Kane and his party quitted the Advance, and overland in about 1100 miles, to the Danish settlement; on their way home in a Danish vessel, they fell in with Dr. Hartstone, 18 Sept.; and arrived with him at New York, 11 Oct. Dr. Kane visited England in 1856; he died in 1857.]

The Hudson's Bay Company, under advice of Dr. Rae and Sir G. Back, sent out an overland expedition. In June 1855, which returned in the following spring. Some more remains of Franklin's party were discovered.

The 18th British expedition (equipped by lady Franklin and her friends, the government having declined to fit out a vessel) was still the Far, screw steamer, under capt. (since Sir) E. L. M'Cintyre, R.N. (see No. 11) — sailed from Aberdeen 1 July, 1857; returned 22 Sept. 1859.

On 6 May, 1857, H. F. Hudson found at Point Victory, near Cape Victoria, besides a caribou, a tin case, containing a paper, signed 23 April, 1848, by capt. Fitzgibbon, which verified that the ships Erebus and Terror, on 12 Sept. 1846, were beset in lat. 7° 05' N., and long. 86° 23' W.; that Sir John Franklin died in June, 1847; and that the ships were deserted 22 April, 1848. Captain M'Cintyre continued the search, and discovered skeletons and other relics. His Journal was published in Dec. 1859; and on 28 May, 1860, gold medals were given to his friends, and to lady Franklin by the Royal Geographical Society.

Mr. Hall, the arctic-explorer, reported, in Aug. 1853, circumstances that led him to hope that capt. Crozier and others were surviving. A national monument by Noble, set up in Waterloo-place, was inaugurated, 15 Nov. 1863. It is inscribed to "Franklin the great navigator and his brave companions who sacrificed their lives in completing the discovery of the north-west passage, A.D. 1547."*

Sir John Franklin discovered the north-west passage by sailing down Peel and Victoria Straits, now named Franklin Straits.

* "Franklin's search for expedition," underlieut. Schwartza, of U.S. navy, in an overland expedition of autumn and winter of 1859, discovers some human remains of the crews of the ships and other things; he set up memorials, and brought away the remains of Sir John Franklin, living on the Terror; and returned to Massachusetts about 23 Sept. 1860.

Remains of lieut. John Irving buried at Edinburgh, 27 Jan. 1857; and 28 July 1875, 50th anniversary of the departure of Sir John Franklin's expedition, celebrated by the Royal Geographical society.

FRANKS (or freemen), a name given to a combination of the North-western German tribes about 210, which invaded Gaul and other parts of the empire with various success in the 5th century; see Gaul and France; see Franking.
FRATRICELLI, (Little Brethren), a sect of the middle ages, originally strict Franciscan monks. Their numbers increased, and they were condemned by a papal bull in 1377, and suffered persecution; but were not extinct till the 14th century. They resembled the "Brethren of the Free Spirit."

FRATDS, STATUTE OF. 29 Charles 1., c. 3, 1677. An act for prevention of frauds and perjury.

FRAUDULENT TRUSTEES ACT, 20 & 21 Vict. c. 54, passed Aug. 1857, in consequence of the delinquencies of sir John D. Paul, the British Bank. It was brought in by sir R. Bethell, then attorney-general, afterwards lord Westbury, and is very stringent.

FRAXHOFFER'S LINES, see Spectrologia.

FREDERICKSBURG (Virginia, N. America). On 10 Dec. 1862, general Burnside and the federal army of the Potomac crossed the small deep river Rappahannock. On 11 Dec. Frederick'sburg was burned by the federals and destroyed. On the 13th commenced a series of desperate mis succeeds attacks on the confederate works, defended by generals Lee, Jackson, Longstreet, and others. General Hooker crossed the river with the reserves, and joined in the conflict, in vain. On 15 and 16 Dec. the federal army recrossed the Rappahannock. The battle was one of the most severe in the war.

FREDERIKSHALD (Norway). Charles XII. of Sweden was killed by a cannon-shot before its walls, while examining the works. His body was seen on his sword, and a prayer-book in his pocket. 11 Dec. 1788.

FREDERICTON, the capital of the province of N. B., New Brunswick, Canada, and the centre of a large lumber trade. Population 6,532.

FREE CHURCH COUNCIL, see National Council of the Evangelical Free Churches.

FREE CHURCH OF ENGLAND (Evangelical). An Episcopal Church founded in 1844, and enrolled in her majesty's High Court of Chancery in 1853. See Cathecism, 1891.

Through great part of the early tractarian movement of 1833. The first church was planted at Bridge town, Devon, by the Rev. James Store, M.A., curate of the parish; it was built by the duke of Somerset, and opened in 1842. Two other churches were established in the same year at Exeter, and the other at Birnands. But it was not till 1845, that much progress was made, when an impulse was given to the movement by the late bishop of Exeter's (Philipps) prosecution of Mr. Shaw, for preaching in his diocese without his license. The work speeded, and the organization was easily and under a lead plug as an "Episcopal Church." In 1872, the tractarian "congregation" could not be obtained a bishop of the Church of England, but a bishop of the Church of Ireland, who was consecrated by the archbishop of Canterbury at Lambeth Palace chapel, in 1872, attended an opportunity, which was embraced, of obtaining episcopal consecration for the bishops of the Free Church of England in the Canterbury line of episcopal succession.

The services of the Free Church are conducted on similar lines to those of the evangelical sect. Formerly, each church, excepting the omission of some words in the offices, which the Free Church considers express doctrines opposed to the Protestant Reformation.

FREE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND was formed by an act of secession of twenty half the body from the national church of Scotland, headed by Dr. Thomas Chalmers and other eminent ministers, 18 May, 1843. The difference arose on the question of the right of parishes to nominate to livings; see Patronage. The Free Church claims for the parishioners the right to dispose of the produce of parishes. It was formed the first year by the ministers of the new church, although 367,719 £. 135 l. had been subscribed. In 1853 there were 850 congregations; in 1873, 954. A large college was founded in 1836. In 1856 the sustentation fund amounted to 108,631 l., and was paid the sum of 19,360 l., each to 700 ministers.

The Rev. Mr. Keith, remonstrated for opinions respecting the apex of vision, to the General Assembly, 23 Oct. 1873. The Reformed Presbyterian Church (see Church, Reformed Presbyterian), joined the Free Church, 26 May, 1876.

Professor Robertson Smith, generally remonstrated for his article "Bible, &c." in the "Encyclopedia Britannica," 1875, after long consideration by the assembly, remonstrated only in 27 May, 1880. FREEHOLDERS. Those under forty shillings per annum were not qualified to vote for members of parliament by 8 Hen. VI. c. 7, 1429. Various acts have been passed for the regulation of the franchise at different periods. The more recent were, the act to regulate polling, 9 Geo. IV. 1828; act for the disfranchisement of freeholders in Ireland, which deprived those of forty shillings of this privilege, passed 15 April, 1829; Reform act, 1832, 1867, 1868. County elections act, 7 Will. IV., 1839. See Oddes 2. CHANGE.

FREE HOSPITAL, ROYAL, Gray's Inn-road, founded in 1828 by Dr. William Maraden (born Aug. 1796), who actively superstitioned it till his death, 16 Jan. 1865. In 1841, he founded the Free Hospital (Brompton), which see. First established in Greville-street, Batton-garden, 28 Feb. 1828; removed to Gray's Inn-road, 1832. The hospital contains 165 beds; over 2,000 in-patients and 30,000 out-patients yearly receive the benefits.

FREE LABOUR REG'N. SOC. established for the benefit of employers and non-unionist workmen, in opposition to 'trades' unions, July, 1867. The struggle of free labour and the unions was very severe 1860 et seq. See under Shipping, Strikers, &c. 1st congress of the national free labour association met in Clerkenwell, 31 Oct. 1893.

FREE LAND LEAGUE, see Land.

FREE LIBRARIES, see Libraries.

FREE MASONS. Writers on masonry, themselves masons, affirm that it has had a being "ever since symmetry began, and harmony displayed her charms." It is traced by some to the builders of the temple of Solomon; and others to the architects from the African coast, Mahometans, brought it into Spain, about the 9th century. A modern speculative cosmopolitan freemasonry with some analogies has essential differences from some early secret societies, and is not earlier than the seventeenth century. In 1717, the grand lodge of England was established at Drury Lane, 1730; and that of Scotland in 1732. Freemasons were excommunicated by the pope in 1738; again condemned, 30 Sept. 1865. Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, London, built 1775-6. Partly burnt, 3 May, 1853. A portrait of George Washington, gift of Mr. Wellesley, unveiled here by Mr. Chancellor, 25 July, 1862. The charity instituted, 1788. The duke of Saxe-Gotha and the earl of Zetland were for 30 and 25 years respectively grand-masters of England. Earl Grey, afterwards marquis of Ripon, was installed grandmaster of the English freemasons in room of the earl of Zetland, 14 May, 1870. The marquis (on becoming a Romanist) resigned 1 Sept. 1874. He was succeeded by the prince of Wales, afterwards Edward VII.; installed in the Royal Albert Hall, 28 April, 1875. The duke of Leinster, grand-master for Ireland for 60 years, died 10 Oct. 1874; succeeded by the duke of Abercorn. The prince of Wales was installed at Edinburgh as patron of the freemasons of Scotland, 12 Oct. 1870. As grand-master past and present of the mark masons, London, 8 Dec. 1883. Installed as Grand Master of Mark Masters, 1 July, 1886; re-elected, March 2, 1886; again 25 April, 1900; resigns, entitled Protector of English Freemasons. The duke of Connaught grand-master, 17 July, 1901; installed grand-master of mark masons, 3 June, 1902. Prince Leopold installed as master of the "lodge of antiquity," 25 June, 1879. Duke of Connaught re-elected grand-master of English freemasons, March, 1906. Royal Masonic institutions: for girls (Battersea), founded 1798; for boys (Wood Green), 1798, removed to Hasley, Herts, 1903; for the aged and widows. 1847

FREE PORTS, see House Towns.

FREE THINKERS, professors of natural religion; see Divits.

FREE TRADE principles, advocated by Adam Smith in his "Wealth of Nations" (1776), triumphed in England when the corn laws were abolished in 1826, and the commercial treaty with France was adopted in 1860. Richard Cobden, who was very instrumental in passing these measures, and termed "Apostle of Free Trade," died 2 April, 1865. Since 1830 the exports have been tripled. See French Treaty. An agitation for free trade existed in the United States. A reform league was formed at Boston, 20 April, 1860; and the movement became active in New York, and has since continued. A free-trade budget was brought in by the ministry in Sydney in 1873. A new free-trade league was inaugurated in London in Dec. 1873; and one at Melbourne, Australia, Sept. 1876; free-trade union inaugurated, July, 1903; women's free-trade union, 17 May, 1904; free food league formed, 13 July, 1904. Free trade warmly advocated in New South Wales, supported by the marquis of Salisbury; opposed in Canada and in Victoria, Australia, 1877-80 (see infra). Much agitation against free-trade in 1880-2 and in 1903 et seq. See Anti-Corn Law League, Free Trade, and Preferential Tariffs. American Free Trade League formed at Detroit, June, 1883. Protection, which see, Dominant in Europe, Feb. 1858 et seq.

FRENCH LANGUAGE is mainly based on the rude Latin of the western nations subjungated by the Romans. Germain was introduced by the Franks in the 8th century. In the 9th the Gallo-Roman dialect became divided into the Langue d'où of the south and the Langue d'où of the north. The dialect of the Isle of France became predominant in the 12th century. The French language as written by Fréossart assimilates more to the modern French, and its development was almost completed when the Académie Française (established by Richelieu in 1634) published a dictionary of the language in 1674. The French language, laws, and customs were introduced into England by William the Silent. Laws were changed from French to English in the reign of Edward III., 1362. See Drama.

FRENCH NATIONAL SOCIETY. Founded in 1750 to maintain poor descendants of French protestant refugees, 40 females, 20 males.

FRENCH REFORMED CHURCH FUND. The French Reformed church fund, originated by the Daily News, in Sept. 1870, was closed April 1871.

FRENCH NATIONAL ACADEMY. Founded in 1778, the French national academy published a dictionary of the language in 1774. The French language, laws, and customs were introduced into England by William the Silent. Laws were changed from French to English in the reign of Edward III., 1362. See Drama.

FRENCH RELIEF FUND. The French peasant relief fund, originated by the Daily News, in Sept. 1870, was closed April 1871.

FRENCH REVOLUTIONARY CALENDAR. In 1792, the French nation adopted a calendar professedly founded on philosophical principles. The first year of the era of the republic began at midnight, between 21 and 22 Sept. 1792; and its establishment was not decreed until the 4th Frimaire of the year II., 24 Nov. 1793. The calendar existed until the 10th Nivose, year of the republic XIV., 31 Dec. 1805, when the Gregorian mode of calculation was restored by Napoleon I. 1800 was not a leap year.

FRENCH REVOLUTIONS, see France.

FRENCHECTOWN (Canada), was taken from the British by the American general Washington, 22 Jan. 1813, during the second war with the United States of America. It was retaken by the British forces under general Proctor, 23 Jan., and the American commander and his troops were made prisoners.

FRENCH TREATY, the term given to the treaty of commerce between Great Britain and France, signed 23 Jan. 1860, at Paris, by lord Cowley and Richard Cobden and by the ministers M. Baroche and Rouher. The beneficial results of this treaty established for the first time in the trade occasioned by the civil war in North America (1861-3). The French assembly determined that on 15 March, 1871, this treaty should cease in 12 months from that date. A fresh treaty was signed at Paris 20 Jan. 1873. Free trade was somewhat restricted, but the new French navigation law was relaxed. Negotiations for a new treaty began in London, 26 May, 1881. See France, 1881-2; see also Anglo-French Agreement; 14 June, 1898; 14 Oct. 1903; and 8 April, 1904.

FRENCH WEST AFRICA includes Senegal, part of the Soudan, French Guinea, French Congo, Ivory Coast, and Dahomey. See French Africa under Africa.

FRIENDLY SOCIETIES.

FRENCH PAINTINGS are executed on plaster while fresh. Very ancient ones exist in Egypt, Italy, and England, and modern ones in the British houses of parliament, at Berlin, and other places. The fresco paintings by Giotto and others at the Campo Santo, a cemetery at Pisa, executed in the 13th century, are justly celebrated. See Stereochromy.

FRESHWATER FISH. see Fish.

FRÉTEAU (Central France). Here Richard I. of England defeated Philip II. of France, and captured his royal seal, archives, &c., 15 July, 1104. Fréteau was taken by the English, 18 Dec., 1870, and soon abandoned.

FRIARS (from the French frère, a brother); see Minorites, Carmelites, Dominicans, Franciscans, Crotcheted Friars, and other orders.

FRIDAY, the sixth day of the week; so called from Friga, or Freca, the Scandinavian Venus, the wife of Thea, who presided over peace, fertility, and riches, who with Thor and Odin composed the supreme council of the gods. See Good Friday and Black Friday.

FRIENDLAND (Prussia). Here the allied Russians and Prussians were beaten by the French, commanded by Napoleon, on 14 June, 1807. The allies lost eighty pieces of cannon and about 18,000 men; the French about 16,000 men. The peace of Tilsit followed, by which Prussia was obliged to surrender nearly half her dominions.

FRIENDLY ISLES, in the Southern Pacific, consist of a group of more than 180 islands, the largest of which is Tonga-taabo, the sacred isle, 1.30 sq. in. These islands were discovered by Tas- man, in 1643; visited by Wallis, who called them Keel Island, 1767; and by captain Cook, who named them on account of the then friendly disposition of the natives, 1777. Pop. 1899, 24,177.

The isles were visited by missionaries in 1797; of whom the Wesleyans were most successful in conversions, 1826, of 6 sq.

Many chiefs submitted to king George I. in 1845. He set up a constitution and summoned a parliament of 40 members in 1862. He concluded a treaty with Germany, 1 Nov. 1856; and with Great Britain, 29 Nov. 1870. His chief adviser, the rev. Shirley Baker, who had, it is said, assisted and amused much power, was expelled by sir John B. Thurston, the British high commissioner of Fiji, and replaced by Mr. Basil Thompson, who published an account of the affair in 1875. Baker died Dec. 1903.

King George I. died, aged upwards of 60, 19 Feb. 1853; and was succeeded by his great-grandson, Joaqui Tubon II., born 12 June, 1784. German claims renounced, reported, 6 Nov. 1899.

British protectorate proclaimed at Tonga, 16 May, 1900. Death of the queen of the Tonga islands, 10 April, 1905. Financial control of the Tonga islands taken over by Great Britain, Feb. 1905.

FRIENDLY SOCIETIES, which originated in the clubs of the industrious classes, were subjected to slight control in 1705, and have been regulated by various enactments. Other acts were passed in 1855, 1856 and 1860; important ones, 1875, 1876, 1878, 1883, 1893 and 1895. Law consolidated in 1896. In London, the Home Friendly Society dates from 1865; the Norman, 1703; the Lintot, 1708.

An example of fraud, credibility, and mismanagement was given an investigation by the registrar-general into the FRIENDS, see Quakers, and under Clergy.

FRIENDS OF THE PEOPLE, an association formed in London to obtain parliamentary reform, 1792.

FRIESLAND: EAST (N. Germany), the ancient Frisia, formerly governed by its own counts. On the death of its prince Charles Edward, in 1744, it became subject to the king of Prussia; Hanover disputed its possession, but Prussia prevailed. It was annexed to Holland by Bonaparte, in 1806, to form the French empire, 1810; and awarded to Hanover in 1815. The English language is said to be mainly derived from the old Frisian dialect.—FRIESLAND, West, in Holland, was part of Charlemagne’s empire in 800. It passed under the counts of Holland about 936, and was one of the seven provinces which renounced the Spanish yoke in 1585. The term Chevaux de Frise (or Cheval de Frise, a Friesland Horse) is derived from Friesland, where it was invented.

FRIULI (Venetia), made a duchy by Alboin the Lombard, when he established his kingdom about 570. It was conquered by Charlemagne. Henri, a Frenchman, made duke, was assassinated in 799, which was the fate of duke Berengarius, king of Italy and emperor, in 924. The emperor Conrad gave the duchy to his chancellor Poppe, patriarch of Aquileia, in the 11th century; it was conquered by Austria in 1260; annexed to Austria, 1797; France, 1805; Austria 1814; Italy, 1866.

FROBISHER’S STRAITS, discovered by sir Martin Frobisher, who tried to find a north-west passage to China, and after exploring the coast of New Greenland, entered this strait, 11 Aug. 1576. He returned to England, bringing with him a quantity of black ore, supposed to contain gold, which induced queen Elizabeth to patronise a second voyage. This led to a third fruitless expedition. He was mortally wounded at Brest, Nov. 1594.

FREBEL SOCIETY, see under Kindergarten.

FROGMORE, near Windsor, Berks. A house here, built by Nash, was purchased by queen Charlotte 1801, and afterwards became a residence of the duchess of Kent. Here is situated the mausoleum of the late prince consort whose remains were transferred to it 1862. See Albert. Queen Victoria was buried here 4 Feb. 1901. The queen’s (Alexandra) memorial to queen Victoria, a statue of the Sixtus, about 17 ft. high, was shown on the 11th of October, erected at the royal mausoleum. 7 Nov. 1873. Memorial window to queen Victoria placed in the royal mausoleum by king Edward VII. 1 Jan. 1906.

FROHSORD, a village 30 miles south of Vienna on the river Leitha, with a magnificent castle, which from 1844 to 1883 was the head-quarters of the elder Bourbon party. The late comte de Chambord, who chiefly resided here, improved and beautified the interior of the castle.

FROISART’S CHRONICLE, a history of the period between 1326 and 1400, treating chiefly of contemporary events in France, England, Scotland and Flanders, which are described in a vivid and interesting manner, with valuable information also about Italy and Spain. The first part of the Chronicle, the period 1326-56, is based on the writings of Jean de Bel, canon of Liége. Froissart (1337-1410), whose life was one of travel and adventure, was educated for and took orders in the church, but his inclination for poetry and gallantry led him to a roving life. He visited England in 1390, where his reputation of being a gay poet and narrator of chivalric deeds had preceded him, and became secretary to queen Philippa of Hainault, wife of Edward III., a post he held for some years; he revisited England in 1395, and spent some time at the court of Richard II. Among his various patrons was Wenceslaus-duke of Brabant, whose poems, with certain pieces of his own, Froissart gathered together under the title of "Melibaeus, or the Knight of the Golden Sun." this work was dis-covered in 1891. On the death of his patron, he entered the service of Guy, count of Blois, who presented him with the canony of Chimay. About 1398 Froissart visited the comte de Foix, of whose court he gives a delightful description. He died at Chimay 1410. The earliest translation of the Chronicle is that of sir John Bourchier, lord Berners, 1525; Buech edited the Chronicle, 1524-26; Johnes, 1570; and Lucas 1609-88.

FROUDE, CIVIL WARS OF, in France, in the minority of Louis XIV. (1648-52), during the government of queen Anne of Austria and cardinal Mazarin, between the followers of the court and the nobility, and the parliament and the citizens. The latter were called Frondes (as they were), it is said, from an incident in a street quarrel. In a riot on 27 Aug. 1648, barricades were erected in Paris.

FROSTS, the following are some of the most remarkable recorded: (see Cold.)

1. The Exmoor Sea frozen over for 20 days. 1820.
   A frost at Constantine, when the two snows there were frozen a hundred miles from the shore, Oct. 26—Feb. 12.
   2. A frost in England on Midsummer-day is said to have destroyed the fruits of the earth. 1835.
3. Thames frozen for 14 weeks. 1893.
4. Dreadful frosts in England from Nov. to April 1897.
5. The Cattlegait entirely frozen. 1897.
7. The Baltic frozen from Pomernia to Denmark. 1899.
8. In England, when all the small birds perished. 1899.
9. The ice here riding upon it from Lubeck to Prussia. 1899.
10. Severe frost, when large bow of the air sought shelter in the towns of Germany. 1899.
11. The river frozen from London Bridge to Gravesend, from 24 Nov. to Feb. 10. (1834).
12. The Baltic frozen, and horse passengers crossed from Denmark to Sweden. 1899.
13. The winter so severe in Flanders that the wine distributed was cut by hatchets. 1816.
14. Carriages passed over from Lambeth to Westminster 1812.
15. Wine in Flanders frozen into solid lump. 1805.
16. Sedges drawn, and the fruit on the sea from Rostock to Denmark. 1806.
17. Divisions on the Thames. 1806.
18. The Schelt frozen so hard as to sustain labour wagons. 1806.
19. The Rhine, Scheldt, and sea at Venice frozen. 1804.
20. Fires and destructions on the Thames. 1805.
21. The rivers of France below Lorraine and the Zuyder Zee frozen. 1802.
22. The ice covers the Hellespont. 1801.
FRUITS. Several varieties introduced into Italy, 70 a.m. et seq. Many exotic fruits and flowers, previously unknown in England, were brought thither between 1500 and 1578, and very many in the present century. See Gardening, and Flowers. A conference of British fruit-growers was held at the Crystal Palace, London, 7 Sept.; association formed 11 Oct., 1888. Many donations were made to the fund for the encouragement of fruit-culture, founded by the lord mayor and the Fruiterers' Company, autumn, 1889. Successful fruit-growing reported, Dec., 1890. Experimental fruit farm at Weoburn, founded by the duke of Bedford and Mr. Spencer Puckering, F.R.S., was inspected by a scientific party, and reported very successful; 12 June, 1895. FUCHSIA, an American plant named after the German botanist Leonard Fuchs, about 1542. The Fuchsia fulgens, the most beautiful variety, was introduced from Mexico, about 1839. In S. America a black dye is obtained from the wood of some species.

FUEL, see Coal, Bags. In the autumn of 1873, it was announced that Louis Baynecker, a French peasant, had discovered that earth mixed with coal and a little soda made good fuel.

FUENTES DE ONORO (central Spain). On 2 May, 1811, Massena crossed the Agueda with 45,000 infantry and 10,000 horse, and about 30 pieces of artillery, to relieve Almeida. He expected every day to be superseded in his command, and wished to make a last effort for his own military character. Wellington could muster no more than 32,000 men, of which only 12,000 were cavalry. He however determined to fight rather than give up the blockade of Almeida. After much fighting, on 5 May, night came on and stopped the conflict. Next day Massena was joined by Bossiers with a body of the Imperial guard; and on 5 May, made his grand attack. In all the war there was not a more dangerous hour for England. The fight lasted until evening, when the lower part of the town was abandoned by both parties—the British maintaining the chapel and crags, and the French retaking a cannon-shot from the stream. Napier.

FUSSSEN. Bavaria. By a treaty signed here, 22 April, 1745, peace was made between Maria Theresa, queen of Hungary, and the elector of Bavaria, the latter renouncing his claim to the imperial crown and recovering his lost territories.

FUGITIVE OFFENDERS ACT passed, 27 Aug., 1851.

FUGITIVE SLAVE BILL passed by the American legislature in 1850. It imposed a fine of $1000 dollars and six months' imprisonment on any person harbouring fugitive slaves or aiding in their escape. This law was declared to be unconstitutional by the judges of the superior court on 3 Feb., 1855, was carried into effect with great difficulty, and was not received by Massachusetts. It was repealed 13 June, 1864; see Slavery in America.

FUGITIVE SLAVE CIRCULARS. see Slavery.

FUGUE in Music (in which one part seems to chase another), is described in Morley's "Introduction to Practical Musick," 1597. Sebastian Bach and Handel were eminent fugue-writers.

FULDA (W. Germany), the seat of an abbey, founded by St. Boniface, the apostle of Germany, in 744. It was made a bishopric in 1753, and a principality in 1803. Napoleon incorporated it with Frankfort in 1810; but in 1815 it was ceded to Hesse-Cassel.

FULFORD, Yorks. Here Harold Hardrada, King of Norway, and Tostig, brother of Harold of England, defeated the earls Edwin and Morcar, 20 Sept., 1066; and the people near York submitted to them; see Stamford-bridge.

FULHAM PALACE, the official residence of the bishops of London since 1111. The present building is comparatively modern. Many of the bishops are interred in the church.

FULLER CASE, see Indist, 1870.

FUMIGATION. Acon, a physician of Agri- gentum, is said to have first caused great fires to be lighted and aromatics to be thrown into them to purify the air, and thus to have stopped the plague at Athens and other places in Greece, about 473 B.C.

FUNDS, see Stocks, and Staking Fund and Foreign Bondholders.

FUNERALS. 2 Sam. 1, and iii. In Greece, Solon was the first who pronounced a funeral oration, according to Herodotus, 580 B.C. The Romans pronounced harangues over their illustrious dead. Thopompous obtained a prize for the best Funeral Oration in praise of Mausolus, 355 B.C. Popilia was the first Roman lady who had an oration pronounced at her funeral, which was done by her son, Crassus; and it is observed by Cicero that Julius Cesar did the like for his aunt Julia and his wife Cornelia.—Funeral Games, among the Greeks and Romans, included horse-races, dramatic representations, processions, and mortal combats of gladiators. These games were abolished by the emperor Claudius, A.D. 47. A tax was laid on funerals in England, 1793.

FURNACE. Specimens of Egyptian furniture, represented on the interior walls of the pyramids, appear in Rosellini's "Monumenti dell'Egitto," 1832-44, Vol. II.

FUSSERKÜNIG (N. India), a province acquired by the East India company in June, 1802. Near the capital of the same name, 17 Nov., 1804, Lord Lake defeated the Mahatta chief Holkar and about 60,000 cavalry, himself losing 2 killed and about 20 wounded.

FURS were worn by Henry I. about 1125. Edward III. enacted that all persons who could not spend 100l. a year should be prohibited to keep fur. 23 March, 1339. Furs of various kinds are now extensively worn. The chief supplies come from Siberia and N. America, chinchillas (the finest and most delicate of all furs) from S. America, opossum and kangaroo from Australia, and leopard skins from Africa. Europe produces large quantities of common furs, as those of the fox, hare, and rabbit. The principal fur companies are the Hudson Bay co., founded 1670, and the N. America Fur-selling co., established 1870. Formerly the Skinners' company, one of the city guilds, possessed many privileges and rights connected with the trade in fur. These ancient rights are now in abeyance. Great fur sales are held periodically at Leipzig, and at Nijni Novgorod.

FUSILIERS. Foot soldiers, formerly armed with muskets, with slings to sling them. The 7th regiment (or Royal English Fusiliers), now Royal Fusiliers (City of London Regt.), was raised 11 June, 1685; the 21st (or Royal North British), now Royal Scots, 23 Sept., 1670; the 23rd (or Royal Welsh), 17 March, 1688. Grose. The Lancashire Fusiliers (old 20th foot); the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers (old 27th and 109th foot); the Royal Dublin Fusiliers (old 102nd and 103rd foot); the Royal Munster Fusiliers (old 104th and 109th foot); the Northumberland Fusiliers (the old 5th foot); the Royal Irish Fusiliers (old 87th and 89th foot), are famous regiments in the British army.

FUSION of the French legitimists and Orleanists into one monarchical party, 5 Aug., 1873. See France.

FUTTEHGHUR (India). Here Nana Sahib massacred both the English defenders of the fort and their Sepoy assailants, July, 1857; and here the Sepoy rebels were defeated by Sir Colin Campbell, 2 Jan., 1858.
GABELLE (from Gabe, a gift), a term applied to various taxes, but afterwards restricted to the duty upon salt, first imposed by Philip the Fair on the French in 1286.

GAILANT AND GALEKAS, see Kaffarou.

GALAPAGOS, islands ceded to the United States by Ecuador, 3 Nov. 1853, the British, French, and other powers protesting against it.

GALATIA, a province of Asia Minor. In the 3rd century A.D. the Gauls under Brennus invaded Greece, crossed the Hellespont, and conquered the Troas. 278 B.C. were checked by Attalus I. in a battle about 244 B.C., and then settled in what was called afterwards Gallicarca and Galatia. The country was ravaged by Cneius Manlius, 189 B.C., and was finally annexed to the Roman empire, 25 B.C., on the death of the king Amyntas. St. Paul's Epistle to the Galatians was probably written A.D. 58.

GALATZ (Moravia). The preliminaries of peace between Russia and Turkey signed here, 11 Aug. 1791, led to the treaty of Jassy, 9 Jan. 1792. The site of several conflicts, in which the Russians defeated the Turks, Nov. 1769; 10 May, 1828.

GALICIA, a province, N.W. Spain, was conquered by D. Janius Brutus, 136 B.C. and by the Vandals A.D. 419; and was subdued by successive invaders. In 1605, on the death of Ferdinand I., king of Castile and Leon, when his dominions were divided, his son Garcia became king of Galicia. Ruling tyrannically, he was expelled by his brother Sancho; returned at his death in 1672; was again expelled by his brother Alfonso, 1673; and died in prison in 1691. Alfonso, son of Ursula, queen of Castile, was made king of Galicia by her in 1109. He defended his mother, a dissolute woman, against her husband, Alfonso VII., and at her death in 1120, acquired Castile, and once more reunited the kingdoms.

GALICIA, Poland. East Galicia was acquired by the emperor of Germany at the partition in 1772; and West Galicia at that of 1795. The latter was ceded to the grand duchy of Warsaw in 1807; but recovered by Austria in 1815. The appointment of Count Goluchowski, a Pole, as governor, in Oct. 1860, gave much satisfaction to the Poles, about 2,500,000 in this province; see Poland, note. Pomp, 1860, 8,075,000.

GALLEYS, long boats, sometimes with sails, and seats for rowers, varying in number, much employed by the Venetians and Genoese till the 16th century. "Galley slaves" were condemned criminals employed in navigation. In France they had a general of galleys, of whom the baron de la Garde was the first, 1544. The punishment of the galleys (gendar) was superseded by the "ferrets forcés," forced labour, regulated by a law of 1834, the men being called "ferrets."

GALILEE, the porch or small chapel annexed to a church, in which public penitents stood, dead bodies were placed preparatory to interment, and religious processions formed. Here, in certain religious houses, the women were only allowed to worship, or, if relatives of the monks, to converse with them, a practice based on the words of St. Matt. xxviii. 7, "He goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see Him." Galleries are attached to Durham, Ely, and Lincoln cathedrals.

GALL, ST. (in Switzerland). The abbey, founded in the 7th century, was surrounded by a town in the 10th. St. Gall became a canton of the confederation in 1815.

GARDEN CITIES are designed to provide settlements for workpeople and others in healthy and open neighbourhoods where every hygienic safeguard is applied to the aggregation of an industrial population, so controlled that rural conditions may be associated with many of the conveniences of urban life. The earliest attempt to give practical effect to the idea was the foundation, in 1859, of the model village of Port Sunlight, on the Mersey. In 1891 Mr. Cadbury placed in operation the Garden City at Bournville, near Birmingham, for the benefit of future residents, and his own employés, for the erection of dwellings on the principle of building societies, a provision being made that a certain area of land should be kept clear around each house in perpetuity. Mr. Ebenezer Howard first introduced the scheme for founding Garden cities in 1889. In 1894 the Garden City Association was formed, followed by the Garden City Pioneer Company, Ltd., in 1892, with a nominal capital of 20,000. Mr. Cadbury, Mr. Alfred Harmsworth (now baron Northcliffe), and Mr. H. W. Lever being among the first subscribers. This company was the forerunner of a larger undertaking, the Garden City Company, formed September, 1905, with a capital of 30,000. An estate at Letchworth, of 3,818 acres, was secured at the cost of about 40s. per acre, and named Letchworth Garden City. There are two villages on the estate, and roads, water, and drainage works, gas works, and a railway station have all been constructed; postal banking, and other facilities have also been secured, and in November 1908, 1,122 houses were, or were being, erected. Population, January 1909, estimated 6,000. Several large manufacturers have selected sites for the erection of workmen's cottages on the removal of...

their works to the Garden City. L’Association des Cité-Jardins de France, on similar lines, was founded in France in 1894, Hampstead Garden Suburb Trust, Ltd., to purchase about 240 acres adjoining Hampstead Heath for residential purposes; registered 6 March, 1900.

GARDENERS' CHRONICLE, a weekly paper, first appeared, 2 Jan. 1841.

GARDENING. The Scriptures abound with allusions to gardens, particularly the Song of Solomon and the prophets; and Christ's agony took place in a garden. Xenophon describes the gardens at Sardis; and Epicurus and Plato taught in gardens. Theophrastus' History of Plants was written about 322 B.C. Horace, Virgil, and Ovid derive many images from the garden (50 B.C. to A.D. 50); and Pliny's Tusculan villa is circum-tantly described (about A.D. 100). The Romans introduced gardening into Britain, the religious orders maintained it, and its cultivation increased in the 16th century, when many Flemings came here to escape the persecutions of Philip II. Miller's dictionary was published in 1725. See Horticultural Society (which see) was established in 1804; Loudon's Encyclopaedia of Gardening was first published in 1822, and his Encyclopaedia of Plants in 1829; an act for the protection of gardens and ornamental gardens in cities was passed in 1863. See Botany, Flowers, Fruits. Gardeners' Royal Benevolent Institution, founded 1835. See Gardening for list of practical gardening for boys in successful operation at Swamley, Kent, and elsewhere. Exhibition of Gardening and Forestry at Earl's-court, Kensington, opened by the Duke of York, 15 May, closed, 14 Oct. 1893. School of practical gardening for boys established by the Technical Education Board at the Royal Botanic Garden, Regent's Park, early 1894.

GARIGLIANO, a river (S. W. Italy). After long waiting and refusing to receive a step, the great captain Gonsealvo de Cordoba made a bridge over this river, 27 Dec. 1503, and surprised and totally defeated the French army. Garret surrendered a few days after.

GAROTTE, a machine for strangling criminals, used in Spain. After five years' interval, a young woman, her lover, and an accomplice thus executed in Madrid for murder, 11 April, 1888. Many attempts to strangle made by thieves (termed "garotters") in the winter of 1892-3, led to the passing of an act in July, 1893, termed the "Garrotting Act," to punish these acts by flogging. The machine is now abolished.

GARDER, ORDER OF. Edward III., at war with France and eager to draw the best soldiers of Europe into his interest, projected the revival of King Arthur's round table, and proclaimed a solemn truce. On New Year's day 1343-4, he published letters of protection for the safe coming and returning of such foreign knights as would venture their reputation at the jousts and tournaments about to be held. These took place 23rd April, 1344. A table was erected in Windsor castle of 200 feet diameter, and the knights were entertained at the king's expense. In 1346 Edward gave his garter for the signal of a battle that had been crowned with success (supposed to be Cressy), and being victorious on sea and land, and having David, King of Scotland, a prisoner, he, in memory of these exploits, is said to have instituted this order, 23 April, 1349. See below.

Edward III. gave the garter pre-eminence among the ensigns of the order; it is of blue velvet bordered with gold, with the inscription in old French — "Honi soit qui mal y pense" (Evil be to him who evil thinks). The knights are installed at Windsor, and styled Eques armorum Perseolitidi, knights of the golden garter. Botan.

The order until king Edward VI. 's time was called the order of St. George, the patron saint of England. He figured on horseback, presented as holding a spear, and killing the dragon, was first worn by the knights of the institution. It is suspended by a blue ribbon across the body from the shoulder.

Instituted, according to Selden, 23 April, 1344; according to Nicholas, 1347; to Ashmole, 1549.

The order of "Garter king of arms of England" instituted between May and July, 1447.

Additions to the statutes decreed, 1472. 1473.

Order of the Garter in Ireland instituted by Edward IV., 1461; abolished, 1494.

Collar and George of the order, instituted by Henry VII., 1503; about 1477.

The statutes reformed by order, 28 May, 1519; issued, 23 April, 1522.

The ceremonies altered in consequence of the reformations, 22 April, 1548.

Revision of the statutes, 1569.

The annual feast of St. George discontinued, 1567.

The escocheon converted into a star, 1629.

The number of knights increased by seven, 1785.

The order reconstituted; to consist of the sovereign, the prince of Wales, 15 knights companions, and 150 lesser descendants of George III., when elected, 17 Jan., 1803.

GATESHEAD, a borough in Durham, on the Tyne, opposite Newcastle. At Gateshead-fell, William I. defeated Edgar Atheling and his Scotch auxiliaries in 1068. Gateshead was made a parliamentary borough by the reform act in 1832. Returns: one member. Population, 1901, 109,587; 1999 (est.) 111,024.

Between twelve and one o'clock, 5, 6 Oct. 1854, a fire broke out in a woollen manufactury here, which set fire to a local warehouse containing a great quantity of nitre, sulphur, &c., causing a terrific explosion, felt at nearly twenty miles' distance, and totally destroying many buildings, and burying many persons in the ruins. At the moment of the explosion, large masses of burning materials fell over the Tyne and set fire to many warehouses in Newcastle. About fifty lives were lost, and very many persons were seriously wounded. The damage was estimated at about a million pounds. Collapsed chemical works through fire on the Feather Moor, 25, July, 1891, Estimation cost about £30,000.

At the Theatre Royal, by a panic caused by an alarm of fire, 11 persons, chiefly young, were crushed to death; the exit from the gallery was insufficient, 26 Dec. 1891.

GATLING GUN OR BATTERY. Invented by Mr. R. J. Gatling, an American, in 1862 (he died 26 Feb. 1903). It was intended to discharge at once a number of projectiles smaller than the shells of field guns, and it had as many locks as barrels. Tried at Shoeburyness and rejected as inferior to a field gun fired through a single barrel. A powder to be used in the Gatling, invented by M. Pertuiset, was tried in London, Aug. 1870. The Gatling which was employed in Egypt in 1881 is no longer used in the army or navy, the maxim gun having entirely superseded it.

GAUGES (in railways). Much discussion (termed "the battle of the gauges") began among engineers about 1833. Mr. I. M. Brunel approved of the broad gauge, adopted on the Great Western Railway; and Mr. R. Stephenson, Joseph Locke, and others, chose the narrow. A 2-foot gauge was recommended in Feb. 1870, having been successful on the Festiniog railway, Wales; with Robt. Fairlie's "bogie" engine was much adopted at home and abroad. About 200 miles of the S.W. lines of the Great Western were altered from the broad to the narrow gauge in a few days, June, 1874, and on 20-23 May, 1872, the broad gauge was totally superseded on the Great Western.

GATING, measuring the contents of any vessel of capacity, with respect to wine and other liquids, was established by a law, 27 Edw. III. 1352.

GAUL AND GAULS. Gallia, the ancient name of France and Belgium. The Gauls, termed by the Greeks Galate, by the Romans, Galli or Celti, came originally from Asia, and invading Eastern Europe were driven westward, and settled in Spain (in Galicia), North Italy (Gallia Cisalpina), France and Belgium (Gallia Transalpina), and the British isles (the lands of the Cymry or Gaels).

The Phocaeans found Massilia, now Marseilles.

The Gauls (or Huns) under Brennus defeated the Romans at the river Alia, and sack Rome, but are repulsed from the Capitol, accept a ransom and retire; a fabulous legend asserts that they were defeated and expelled by Camillus.

The Gauls defeated by the Romans at Sentinum, 275.

The Romans defeat the Gauls at Arretium; nearly exterminated by Delubella.

The Gauls overrun Northern Greece, 210 B.C.; are beaten at Delphe, 279; and by Antigonus, King of Macedon.

The Gauls defeated with great slaughter near Tysa, 273.

The Insubres totally overthrown by Marcellus, and their king Vindomarum slain.

They resist Hannibal, 218, &c.

The Romans conquer Gallia Cisalpina, 218; invade Gallia Transalpina, with varied success, 123-58.

They colonize Aix, 123 B.C.; and Narbonne.

Julius Cesar subdues Gaul in 8 campaigns, 58.

Invasion and settlement of the Burgundians, Franks, Visigoths, &c., 478.

Chlothar, chief of the Saxon Franks, invades Gaul; is defeated by Attila, 497.

The Huns under Attila defeated by Attila near Chalons.

Chlodius, the Roman commander, murdered, 494.

Chlodier the Frank takes Paris, 477.

All Gaul, west of the Rhone, ceded to the Visigoths.

End of the Roman empire of the West, and establishment of the kingdom of the Franks, 476.

GAVEL-KIND. (See Saxon gîf-eal cap, "give all suitably;" or from gafoleud (g) and yielding rent), the custom in Kent of dividing patrimonial estates in land, the wives to have half, the rest equally among male children, without any distinction. By the Irish law of gavel-kind, even bastard children are bastards. Not only the lands of the father were equally divided among all his sons, but the lands of the brother also among all his brethren, if he had no issue of his own.

Law Dict.

GAZA. A city of the Philistines, of which Samson carried off the gates about 1120 B.C. (Judges xvi.) It was taken by Alexander after a long siege, 332; and near it to Ptolemy defeated Demetrius Poliorcetes, 312 B.C. It was taken by Saladin A.H. 1170; by Bonaparte, March, 1799; and by the Egyptians under Ibrahim Pacha in 1831.

GELHEIM, near Worms, central Germany. Here the emperor Adolphus of Nassau was defeated and slain by his rival Albert I. of Austria, 2 July, 1788.

GEMARIA, or GEMLARA, see TALMUD.

GEMS. The Greeks excelled in cutting precious stones, and many ancient specimens remain. The art was revived in Italy in the 15th century. In France, the collection of gems was sold for 10,000 livres. Rev. C. King’s “Antique Gems” appeared in 1809, and his “Natural History of Precious Stones and Gems” in 1865. Dr. A. Billing’s “Science of Gems,” 1868. Artificial gems have been produced by chemists (Ebelmen, Deville, Wohler, and others), 1858-65.

The duke of Marlborough’s collection, valued at 400,000 guineas, was sold for 37,550, on June 1715; again sold for 15,257 76 livres. A pearl necklace (London-Denney jewels, realized 15,660).

Sale of jewels at Christies, realized 25,600 livres. on June 1851.

Mrs. Langton’s jewels realize 20,975 livres. including a long brilliant necklace with pearl-chased pendant with brilliant, sold for 9,525 livres. on June 1859.

Marquis of Anglesey’s jewels realize 4,310 livres.

Amethyst diamond (see DIAMOND) sold at Christie’s for 50,000 livres. on Feb. 1858.

Mrs. Lewis Hall’s (deceased) jewels and silver have realized 10,250, 11,17 livres. at Christie’s on April 1859.

The Blue Hope diamond (see DIAMOND) sold in Paris for 60,000 francs. on June 1860.

See also DIAMOND, etc.

GENERALS. Matthew de Montmorency was the first general of the French armies, 1205. Hugues de Burgh, who commanded the vanguard, at Cresson, 1356. His son, the cardinal, Michel de Burgh, commanded the vanguard at the battle of Poictiers, 1356, and was taken prisoner. In 1357, he was raised to the supreme command of the French armies in Italy, in 1359. Ulry-ès-Grant was the first general of the army of the United States of America, so styled in 1861; see Commanders-in-Chief.

GENERATION (in Chronology), the interval of time between the birth of a father and the birth of his child: 33 years are allowed for the average length of a generation. See SPONTANEOUS.

GENEVA, a town of the Allobroges, a Gallic tribe, 35 B.C.; became part of the empire of Charle- magne, about A.D. 800; and capital of the kingdom of Burgundy, 126.

The Republic founded in 1411.

Emancipation of Geneva, 1536. Calvin settled here, and obtaining much influence, Geneva was termed the “Home of Calvinism”

Geneva allied to the Swiss Cantons, 1564.

Insurrection, Feb. 1793; about 1000 Genevese, in consequence, applied, in 1792, to cast Temple, lord-lieutenant of Ireland, to settle in that country: the Irish parliament voted 2500l. to defray the expenses of their journey, and to purchase their lands near Wargrave. Many of the fugitives came to Ireland in July, 1793; but they soon after abandoned it: many Genevese settled in England.

A revolution, executions, etc. 1783.

Geneva incorporated with France, 26 April, 1798.

Admitted into the Swiss Confederation, 30 Dec. 1813.

The constitution made more democratic, 1849.

Resolution of the Catholic cantons to introduce Jesuits as teachers: a provisional government set up. 7 Oct. 1848.

[The scheme was withdrawn.]

About 30 persons from Geneva land at Thoum and Evian, to set up the Swiss flag; but are brought back by Swiss troops, 30 Mar. 1860.

Election riots, with loss of life, through the indis- cipline of the Swiss troops, 22 Aug. 1873.

Violent peace congress Garibaldi present. 12 Sept. 1877.

The Albanian arbitration commission met: received the cases and adjourned to 15 June, 1878. 18 Dec. 1877.

Formal meeting of the commission (see Albanian) 15 June, 1879.

Monsignor Mermillod, nominated bishop of Geneva on the death of the bishop of Geneva, signed a de- clared act of reconciliation, 1875. Established a vicar apostolic: his arrest proposed, 2 Feb.; ordered to quit, if he will not submit to the civil government by 15 Feb.; he is expelled 17 Feb.

The ex-duke of Brunswick dies here and bequeaths his vast property (above 254,000 livres) to the city of Aug. 1873.

Rousseau centenary celebrated. 2 July, 1875.

The duke of Brunswick’s remains placed in the grand mausoleum de Savoy, 7 Sept. 1872.

Collision of steam boats on the lake, 20 persons drowned. 23 Nov. 1879.

Explosion of a boiler on the steamer Mont Blanc on the lake; 26 persons perish. 9 July, 1879.

Swiss national exhibition opened. 1 Max. 1876.

Bomb outrage at the entrance to the cathedral, windows of the cathedral set on fire, 16 Dec. 1875.

The 40th anniversary of the birth of Calvin; celebrations begun. 2 July, 1879.

Population, 152,000; canton, 122,051; city, &c. 157,552.

GENEVA CONVENTION, for the succour of the wounded in time of active warfare. Having been a witness of the horrors of the battle-field of Solferino, 21 June, 1859, M. Henri Dunant, a Swiss, published his experiences, which induced the Société Genevoise d’Utile Publique in Feb. 1863 to discuss the question whether relief societies might not be formed in time of peace to help the wounded in time of war by means of qualified volunteers.

At an international conference held 26 Oct. 1863, fourteen governments, including Great Britain, France, Austria, Prussia, Italy, and Russia, were represented by delegates. The propositions then drawn up were accepted as an international code by a congress which met at Geneva, 8 Aug. 1864, and on 22 Aug. was confirmed, was signed by twelve of the delegates, and it was eventually adopted by all civilized powers except the United States.

International conferences were held at Paris in 1867 and at Berlin in 1886 for further developing in a practical manner the objects of the Geneva conference.
GENOA

The International Society (termed "the Red Cross Society"), established in consequence of these proceedings, was very energetic in relieving the wounded and sick during the Franco-Prussian war in 1870, its flag being recognized as neutral. See Ad. to Sick and Wounded. Above 12,000 volunteers said to be employed in attending the sick and wounded, Sept.—Dec., 1870. Additional articles applying to naval warfare adopted during the Spanish-American war, 1898. International conference for the revision of the Geneva convention with a view to improving the condition of soldiers wounded in war, appointed to be held at May, 1903, postponed till June the 11th. See notes on these war, Feb., 1901.

Red Cross Conference convened for revision of the terms of the convention, 11 June; convention signed at Genoa.

GENOA, the ancient Genoa (N. Italy). Its inhabitants were the Ligures, who submitted to the Romans, 113 B.C. It partook of the revolutions of the Roman empire. Population, 1901, 213,800; 1909, 257,680.

Genoa becomes a free commercial state about 1600.

Frequent wars with Pisa, 1079—1284.

Frederick II. captures 22 galleys, and vainly besieges Genoa.

Simon Boccanegra made the first doge, 1339; set aside by the nobles, 1344; re-appointed 1356.

Great discord; many degrees appointed.

Spinola's army, destroyed the naval power of Pisa at Meloria (which see).

Frequent wars with Venice, 1218—32; 1294—99.

Ricci Doria and Gabbevo Spinola appointed captains.

Simon the younger led the Austrians and Italians under Prosper Colonna.

Andrew Doria deserts the French service and restores the independence of his country.

Genoa bombardeled by the French May, 1684.

By the British Sept. 1745.

Taken by the imperialists, who are soon expelled.

Sept. 1746.

Another siege raised Nov. 1747.

The celebrated bank failed.

Genoa made the Ligurian republic.

May, 1797.

The city, blockaded by a British fleet and Austrian army, until literally starved, evacuated by capitulation, 5 June; it was surrendered to the French soon after their victory at Marengo 14 June, 1800.

Genoa annexed to the French empire, 4 June, 1805.

Surrenders to the English and Sardinians, 18 April, 1814.

United to the kingdom of Sardinia.

Dec. 1849.

The city seized by insurgents, who, after a murderous struggle, drove out the garrison and proclaimed the Ligurian republic, 3 April; but surrendered to general La Marmora, 17 April, 1849.

Columbus's first voyage, 1492, celebrated, the king and queen present, and many foreign ambassadors.

The Genoese and Spanish, 8 Sept., 1482.

GENS-D'ARMES were anciently the king's horse-guards only, but afterward the king's gardes-du-corps; the musqueteers and light horse were reckoned among them. There was also a company of gentlemen (whose number was about 250) bearing this name. Scots guards were formed of the persons of the kings of France from the time of St. Louis, who reigned in 1200. They were organized as a royal corps by Charles VII., about 1411; the younger sons of Scottish nobles being usually the captains. The name gens-d'armes was afterwards given to the police; but becoming obnoxious, was changed to "municipal guard" in 1830.

GENTLEMAN (from gentilis, of a gens, a race or clan). The Gauls observing that during the empire of the Romans, the scutarii and gentiles had the best appointments of all the soldiers, applied to them the terms ceugers and genshominis. This distinction of gentleman was much in use in England, and was given to the well-descended about 1380, Sir John. Gentlemen by blood were those who could show four descents from a gentleman who had been created by the king by letters patent.

GENTLEMEN-AT-ARMS (formerly styled the Band of Gentleman Pensioners) is the oldest corps in England, with the exception of the Yeomen of the Guard. The band was instituted by Henry VIII. in 1513, for 90 of gentlemen of noble blood, whom he named his pensioners or yeomen. William IV. commanded that it should be called his majesty's honourable corps of gentlemen-at-arms, 7 March, 1834. The corps is now formed of 1 captain (1,200. a year), 1 lieutenant (500.), 1 standard bearer (300.), 1 clerk of the cheque (120.), and 39 gentlemen (each 70.). Their attendance is only required at drawing rooms, levees, and other state functions.

GENTLEWOMEN'S SELF-HELP INSTITUTION. London, established by the earl of Shaftesbury, duchess of Sutherland, and others, May, 1870.

GEODESY (from delta, I divide), the art of measuring the surface and determining the figure of the earth, &c. Col. A. Clarke's "Geodesy," published 1880. See also "latitude." The 7th international geodetic congress met at Rome 13—24 Oct., 1822. It recommended the international unification of the hour, and longitude with Greenwich. An international conference of 14 delegates met at Washington, I. Oct., president John Rogers, agree to recommend Greenwich as prime meridian; France and Brazil abstain; 15 Oct., 1829; the terms of a universal day also agreed to. 1 Nov., 1839, at Berlin, 27 Oct., 1839; at Salzburg, 17 Sept., 1839; at Paris, 9 Oct., 1842; at Berlin, 9 Sept., 1851; Stuttgart, 4 Oct., 1853; Copenhagen, 4 Oct., 1853.

The international geographical congress at London declare for Greenwich as prime meridian, July, 1839.

GEOGRAPHY. The first geographical records are in the Pentateuch, and in the book of Joshua. Homer describes the shield of Achilles as representing the earth surrounded by the sea, and also the countries of Greece, islands of the Archipelago, and site of Troy. Heil. The priests taught that the temple of Apollo at Delphi was the centre of the world. Anaximander of Miletus was the inventor of geographical maps, about 540 B.C. Hipparchus attempted to reduce geography to mathematical science, about 150 B.C. The great Greek geographer, lived 75—14 B.C. Ptolemy flourished about 150 B.C. The science was brought to Europe by the Moors of Barbary and Spain, about 1240. Longfellow. Maps and charts were introduced into England by Bartholomew Columbus to illustrate his brother's theory respecting a western continent. 1274. Geography is now divided into mathematical, physical, and political, and its study has been greatly promoted during the present century by expeditions at the expense of various governments and societies. The Royal Geographical Society of London was established in 1830; that of Paris in 1821. The geographical society in the United States was organized 6 Dec., 1835. The society issued a circular for promoting a more uniform spelling of geographical names, Dec. 1891.

GEOLoGY, the science of the earth, is said to have been cultivated in China before the Christian era, and occupied the attention of Aristotle, Theophrastus, Pliny, Avicenna, and the Arabian writers.

In 1574 Mercati wrote concerning the fossils in the pope's museum: "Geolipno Majoll, and others (1595), Steno (1669), Scilla (1679), Quinell (1797). Pit and Nestor (1796). Leibnitz (1760) recorded observations, and put forth theories on the various changes in the crust of the earth. Hooke (1668), in his work on Earthquakes, said that fossils, "as monuments of nature, were more certain tokens of antiquity than coins or medals, and though difficult, it would not be impossible to raise a chronology out of them.

Burnet's "Theory of the Earth" appeared 1690, Whiston's (1697; Hutton's "Theory of the Earth" 1795.

Buffon's geological views (1749) were censured by the Sorbonne in 1751, and recanted in consequence. The principle he announced was that the present condition of the earth is due to secondary causes, and that these same causes will produce further changes. His more eminent followers (Alexanders and successors were Geyer (1758), Micheli (1760), Rasp (1762-73), Pallais and Horace B. de Saussare (1793-1823).

Werner (1759) described all rocks to an organic origin, and even flanced the existence of volcanoes in primitive geological times, and had many followers, Kirwan, Do Lac, etc., James Hutton (1788), supported by Playfair (1802) was the first to oppose Werner's view. He asserted that the principal changes in the earth's crust are due to the energy of fire. The rival parties were hence termed Neptunists and Vulcanists.

Mr. (Alt. Sir) A. Gercke and other eminent modern geologists, ascribed the origin of the landscape features of the earth chiefly to denudation by the action of water, 1856. A. Sir A. Gercke's "Founders of Geology" (1828). Harrietta, Desmarets, and others in the 19th century, published 1857.

William Smith, the father of British geology (who had walked over a large part of England in the Making of a Geologist, or A General View of British Strata, in 1759), and published it and his Geological Map of England and Wales, 1822-15; died 28 Aug. 1819. The Rev. Adam Sedgwick, another father, died 20 Sept. 1875, aged 87. Sir Charles Lyell, died 22 Feb. 1875.

The rev. Wm. Buckland, D.D., born 1754; Reafer in geology, Oxford, 1816; published "Reliquiae Divivan," which contains the results of his excavations of bones of large mammals, elephants, hippos, etc., discovered in the Kirkdale cave, Pickering, Yorkshire, in 1811 "Geology and Mineralogy," in relation to nature, the History of Earth, and the Kirkdale caves. 1797. Dean of Westminster, 1816; died Aug. 1856. In 1853 the Royal Institution possessed the best geological collection in London, comprising specimens of every geological formation and every rock in nature. C. Hatchett, the Rev. A. John St. Asby, sir Abraham Hume, and the right hon. C. F. Greville, to send the government in establishing a school of mines there in 1842-47, was declined, 13 Nov. 1857.

GEODESY.

In 1807 the Geological Society of London was established. By collecting a great mass of new facts, it greatly tended to check the disposition to theorise, and led to the introduction of views midway between those of Werner and Hutton.

The Geological Society of Dublin, 1832; of Edinburgh, 1834; of France, 1830; and of Germany, 1842.

In 1833 Mr. (afterwards Sir Henry) De la Beche suggested the establishment of the present Museum of Geology, which began at Craig's-court, and which was removed to its present position in Jermyn-street. To him are also due the valuable geological maps formed on the ordnance survey. The building was erected by Mr. Pennethorne, and formally opened by the prince consort, 14 May, 1851. Attached to the Museum are the Mining Records office, a lecture theatre, laboratories, &c. Sir H. De la Beche, the first director, died 13 April, 1855; succeeded by Sir Roderick Murchison, who died 22 Oct. 1871; succeeded by professor (afterwards sir) A. C. Ramsay, March, 1872, died 9 Dec. 1899; by Archibald Geikie, 1882, Knt., 1894. A similar institution founded at Calcuta in 1839.

A great many maps have been published, with memoirs. The survey of England, on the scale of an inch to a mile, was completed in Jan., 1889. Some maps have been made on a scale of six inches to a mile. The surveys of Scotland and Ireland are in progress. New geological map of England and Wales, a miles to the inch, published by the government, 1858.

International geological congress originated at the Buffalo meeting of the American association for the advancement of science in 1857.

The English standard rocks on geology at the present time are those of Lyell, Murchison, Phillips, De la Beche, Prestwich, Geikie, Dana, Jukes-Brown, Green, Judd, Page and Lapworth, Agassiz, Ramsay, and Nicholson.

The strata composing the earth's crust may be divided into two great classes:

I. Those generally attributed to the agency of water;

II. To the action of fire: which may be subdivided as follows:

A. Aquatic formations, stratified, rarely crystalline:—Sedimentary or fossiliferous rocks.

Metamorphic or unstratified.

Igneous formations, unstratified, crystalline:—Volcanic, as basalt, &c.

Plutonic, as granite, &c.

Fossiliferous, or Sedimentary, rocks are divided into three great series:

The Palaeozoic (most ancient forms of life) or Primary.

The Mesozoic (middle life period), or Secondary.

The Neozoic or Cainozoic (more recent forms of life), or Tertiary.

Table of Strata (chiefly from Lyell).

NEOZOIC:

I. Post-Tertiary:

A. Post-Frisian:

1. Recent: Marine strata: with human remains; Danish peat; kitchen middens; bronze and stone implements: Swiss lake-dwellings: temple of Scopas at Puzzoloni.

2. Post-Frisian: Birchenbury cove, with herring bones of living and extinct quadrupeds; ancient valley gravels; glacial drift; ancient Nile mud; postglacial N. American deposits: remains of mastodon; Australian beeches.

II. Tertiary or Cainozoic Series:

B. Pliocene:

3. Lower Pliocene (or Pleistocene) Mammoth beds, Norwich Gras. [Marine shells.]

4. Older Pliocene: Red and Coralline Crag (Suffolk, Antwerp).

C. 5. Wensley Upper and Lower; Bordeaux; Virginia sands and Tournay beds: limerock deposits near Athens: volcanic tuff and limestone of the Azores, &c.; brown coal of Germany, &c. [Mammalia, Gigantic Elk, Salmander, &c.]

III. Secondary or Mesozoic Series:

E. 10. Colubroidea: Upper: British Chalk; Marniferous beds; chalk with and without flints; Chalk Marl, Upper Green Sand, Gault, Lower Green Sand, [Mammalia; Fish, Mollusca, &c.]

11. Lower (or Neocomian or Wooden): Kentish rag; Wood Clay; Hastings Sand. [Iguanodon, Hylorossa, &c.]

F. 12. Oolite: Upper; Purbeck shales; Portland stone and Sand, Kimmeridge Clay; Lithographic stone of Solnhofen with Archaeopteryx. [Fish.]

13. Middle: Calabrian Grit, Coral Rag, Oxford Clay, Kelloway Rock. [Reptilia and Ammonoidea.]

14. Lower: Cornbrash, Forest Marble, Redcliff Clay, Great Oolite, Stongesfield, Fuller's Earth, Inferior Oolite. [Ichno-vores, Placoda, etc.]

16. Trias: Upper; White Lias, Red Clay, with Salt in Cheshine; Coal Fields in Virginia, N.A. [Fish, Denostracoe.]

17. Middle or Muschelkalk (wanting in England) [Exnurina, Placoda, etc.]

IV. Primary or Palaeozoic Series:

20. 21. Carboniferous, Upper and Lower: Coal Measures, Millstone Grit, Mountain Limestone. [Fires, Invertebrata, Reptilia, etc.]

L. 22. 23. 24. Deostron, Upper, Middle, and Lower: Sandstones, Cones, and Marl. Quartzites, Conglomerates. [Shells, Fish, Tri-bites.]

M. 25. 26. 27. Silurian, Upper, Middle, and Lower: Ludlow Shales, Astonly Limestone, Wenlock Limestone, Wenlock Shale, Coal Sandstone, Llandeilo Flags; Nigara Limestone. [Sponges, Corals, Tri-bites, Shells.]

GEORGE'S CONSPIRACY, in France. General Moreau, general Pichegru, George Cadoudal, and others, were arrested at Paris, charged with a conspiracy against the life of Bonaparte, and for the restoration of Louis XVIII., Feb. 1815. Pichegru was found strangled in prison, 6 April. Twelve of the conspirators, including Georges, were executed 25 June, and others were imprisoned. Moreau was exiled, and Cadoudal went to America. In 1813 he was killed before Dresden (which see).

GEORGIA, the ancient Iberia, now a province of S. Russia, near the Caucasus, submitted to Alexander about 331 B.C., but there began the line of his successors. It was subjugated to Rome by Pompey, 48 B.C. But retained its own sovereignity, Christianity was introduced into it in the 3rd century. In the 5th century, after severe struggles, Georgia was subdued by the Arab caliphs; by the Turkish sultan Alp-Arslan, 1068, and by the Tartar hordes, 1223. From the 14th to the 18th centuries, Georgia was annexed, first to Persia, and then to Turkey. In 1730 Nadir Shah established part of Georgia as a principality, of which the last ruler Heraklis, surrendered his territories to the czar in 1792, and in 1802 Georgia was declared to be a Russian province. — Georgia, in North America, was settled by gen. Oglethorpe, in 1732. Separating from the congress of America, it surrendered to the British, Dec. 1778; and its possession was of vast importance to the royalists in the war. Count d'Estaing joined the American general Lincoln, and made a desperate attack on Georgia, which failed, and the French fleet returned home; the colony was given up to the Union by the British in 1783. It seceded from the Union, by ordinance, 15 Jan. 1861, and was conquered by Sherman in 1864-5, and readmitted as a state Jan. 1868. A ridiculous negro insurrection suppressed Aug. 1875. GERM THEORY OF DISEASE supposes that many diseases are due to the presence and propagation in the animal system of minute organisms [termed microbes having no part or share in its normal economy. M. Maclagan, 1870. See Animalcula and Bacteria. Dr. Cohn, of Breslau, whose work was published in 1872, classifies bacteria as 1. Sphero or microscopic; 2. Micro-bacteria, or bacteria proper (real-shaped); 3. Hemocacteria, the same bugs. J. van't Hoff, on bacteria, spiral-shaped or corkscrew. Translation of his work, 1881. See Cholera.

The doctrine of contagion animadvert was held in the middle ages and put forth in the 17th century, but contagious organisms were not discovered till the 19th by professors Pasteur, Tyndall, Dr. Win. Field, and others, 1875 et seq. At the British Association, 14 Sept. 1870, professor Huxley expressed his齐nference with the germ theory. See under Dest and Tyndall, 1852.

Dr. Robert Koch is said to have identified the microscopical germs of cattle disease, of consumption, of cholera, and other diseases, 1887 et seq. Disseminated in England, May, June, 1885. See Tuberculosis.

Dr. E. Klein, Feb. 1885, reported his investigations on the relation of bacteria to choler. At the Royal Institution, Feb. 27, 1882, he demonstrated the propagation of scarlet fever by microbes in cow's milk. Numerous specimens of these germs were exhibited at the Royal Institution in illustration of professor Tyndall's discoveries. Living organisms, 1882. By taking means to exclude these germs from wounds, e.g., sir Joseph Liston (baron 1869) introduced anti-septic surgery with great success. The picture level is now carried to a high level, and it is not now considered necessary. Louis Pasteur,' by M. Rabot, his son-in-law, gives an account of the great scientist's successes with the propagation of some diseases by inoculation. A translation by lady Claud Hamilton was published in Feb. 1835. M. Pasteur's 70th birthday celebrated in Paris, 27 Dec. 1857. He died 28 Sept. 1895; see Hydrophobia.

M. Engelmann demonstrated the action of microbes in the development of vegetable cells from carbonic acid and moisture in the atmosphere.

Mal. K. Ross’s paper at the Royal Colonial Institute on “Malaria and Its Treatment,” he shows that three great laws had been established by science regarding malaria—(1) that it was caused by numbers of microscopical parasites, which live and propagate themselves in the blood; (2) that these parasites are carried from sick persons to healthy ones by the agency of a genus of mosquitoes called Anophelus; (3) that these kinds of mosquitoes breed principally in shallow and terrestrial waters, 10 Nov. 1903.

GERMANY (Germany, Germania), anciently, as now, divided into independent states. The Germans long withstood the attempts of the Romans to subdue them; and although that people conquered some parts of the country, they were expelled before the close of the 1st century. In the 2nd century the Romans and their tribes prevailed over the greater portion of Germany. In the latter part of the 8th century, Charlemagne subdued the Saxons and other tribes, and was crowned emperor at Rome, 25 Dec. 800. A list of his successors is given in another place. At the extinction of his family, the empire became elective, 911, and was subsequently obtained by members of the house of Hapsburg from 1438 till 1806). Germany was divided into circles, 1501-12. The confederation of the Rhine was formed 12 July, 1866; the German confederation, 5 June, 1815; and the North German confederation, 18 Aug. 1867; the treaty ratified, 8 Sept. 1866. Resignation of Herr Bernburg, and appointment of Herr von Landequist as secretary of state for the colonies, officially announced, 14 June.

The minister-president, Herr von Bethmann Hollweg, replied in the lower house of the Prussian diet to three interpretations concerning the recent encyclical of the pope which had been much resented by protestant Germany. He stated that he had instructed the Prussian minister to the vatican to make an official protest, and to express the hope that the curia would counteract the injurious effects of the encyclical, 9 June.

Reply, signed by the cardinal-secretary of state, to the protest against the publication of the recent encyclical, expressed the regret of his holiness of the excitement of opinion raised, as no intention of slighting the non-catholics of Germany or their provinces had ever entered his mind. The Prussian minister was officially informed that the pope had already instructed the Prussian bishops to abstain from the publication of the encyclical, 11 June.

GLENALMOND, Perthshire. Trinity College here, projected in 1831, was opened in 1837. It was founded principally by the exertions of Mr. W. E. Gladstone and Mr. Hope Stone, aided by Dean Ramsay, the duke of Buccleuch, the marquis of Lothian, and other gentlemen, to support the Scottish episcopal church. The site was given by Mr. George Patton, afterwards lord Glenalmond, 1836. The foundation-stone of a new wing was laid by Mr. W. E. Gladstone, 1 Oct. 1891. The building was finished by fire; damage about $5,000, to again 18 Oct. 1894; Alan W. J. Ferguson, a pupil (mentally weak), charged with arson 27 Oct.; acquitted; sentence of 12 months' imprisonment—24 Nov. 1894.

GLOENCE MASSACRE of the MacDonalids, a Jacobite clan, for not surrendering before 1 Jan. 1692, the time stated in king William's proclamation. Sir John Dalrymple, master (afterwards earl) of Stair, their enemy, obtained a decree "to extirpate that set of thieves," which the king is said to have signed without perusing. Every man under 70 was to be slain. This mandate was treacherously executed by 120 soldiers of a Campbell regiment, hospitably received by the Highlanders, 43 Feb. 1692. About 60 men were slain; and many women and children, turned out naked in a freezing night, perished. This excited great indignation; and an inquiry was set on foot, May, 1693; but no capital punishment followed.

The warrant for the massacre of Glencoe sold. See Books, 29 May, 1907.

GLENALOUGH, or "Seven Churches," an ancient Irish bishopric, said to have been founded by St. Keven before 612; united with Dublin, 1214.

The globular form of the earth, the fire zones, some of the principal circles of the sphere, the opacity of the moon, and the true causes of the universe, were discussed, by Thales of Miletus, about 640 n.c. Pythagoras demonstrated, from the varying altitudes of the stars by change of place, that the earth must be round; that there might be antipodes on the opposite part of the globe; that Venus was the morning and evening star; that the universe consisted of twelve spheres—the sphere of the earth, the sphere of the water, the sphere of the air, the sphere of fire, the spheres of the moon, the sun; Venus, Mercury, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, and the spheres of the stars, about 500 n.c.—Aristarchus of Samos maintained that the earth turned on its own axis, and revolved about the sun, which doctrine was held by him, and was so absurd that the philosopher nearly lost his life, 280 n.c.; see GREGORIAN CALENDAR.

To determine the figure of the earth, a degree of latitude has been measured in different parts of the world; by Bouger and La Condamine in Peru, and by Merid—

Estimated density 5.6 that of water; weight—6,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 tons—Proc. Harv. 1875.

Francis and Spain measured by Mechain, Delambre, Biot, and Charpentier, between 1792 and 1821. Measurements in India by col. (afterwards sir George) Everest, published in 1830. Experiments made by Galileo, to demonstrate the rotation of the earth by Foucault in 1843; and to determine its density by Mascardi, Hailly, and others; and in 1826, 1828, and 1834, by Mr. (unc. sir) G. B. Airy, the astronomer-royal.

ARTIFICIAL GLOBES. It is said that a celestial globe was brought to Greece from Egypt, 368 n.c., and that Archimedes constructed a planetarium about 212 n.c. The globe of Goggin, containing a terrestrial globe of 2 inches diameter, containing a table and seats for twelve persons, and the inside representing the visible surface of the heavens, the stars and constellations, all distinguished according to their respective magnitudes, and being turned by means of curios mechanism, their true position, rising, and setting, are shown. The outside is a terrestrial globe. The machine, called the globe of Goggin, from the patronymics of that name, which, at the expense of Frederick II. duke of Holstein, was erected at Gogtorp, under the direction of Adam Olearius, and was planned after a design found among the papers of the celebrated Tycho Brahe. Frederick IV. of Denmark presented it to Peter the Great in 1733. It was nearly destroyed by fire in 1757, but it was afterwards re-constructed. The Globe at Penhallow, Cambridge, erected by Dr. Long (master, 1733), eighteen feet in diameter.

In 1837 Mr. Abrams erected in Leicester-square, Mr. Wyld, a globe 60 feet 4 inches in diameter, lit from the centre by day, and by gas at night. It was closed in July, 1839; the models were sold, and the building eventually taken down.

Mr. James Wyld, geographer to the queen, died 17 April, 1837.

GLOBE THEATRE, BANKSIDE (London), was built by agreement dated 22nd Nov. 1593, and licensed to Shakespeare and others; see THEATRES, and SHAKESPEARE, W. The Globe, "Theatre," erected on the site of Lyon's-inn, Strand, was opened 28 Nov. 1868, Mr. Sefton Parry, manager; closed 1903. Hick-theatre, Shaftesbury-avenue, re-named the Globe and opened with His Borrowed Phrones, 6 July, 1809.

GLOIRE, French steam frigate, see NARY, French.

GLOORY, the nimbus drawn by painters round the heads of saints, angels, and holy men, and the circle of rays on images, adopted from the Cæsars and their flatterers, were used in the 1st century. The doxology, "Gloria Patri," is very ancient, and originally without the clause "as it was in the beginning," &c. In the Greek it began with "duru," glory.

GLOUCESTER (Roman Glevum), submitted to the Romans about 45, and to the Saxons 577. The statutes of Gloucester, passed at a parliament held by Edward I. 1278, relate to actions at law. This city was incorporated by Henry III.; and was fortified by a strong wall, which was demolished after the Restoration, in 1660, by order of Charles II., as a punishment for the successful resistance of the city to Charles I., under col. Massey, Aug., Sept. 1643. The Gloucester and Berkeley canal was completed in April, 1827. Gross bribery took place here at the election for the parliament in 1826. The bishopric was one of the six erected in the 212th. its bishop was Henry VIII. in 1540, and was formerly part of Worcester. It was united to Bristol in 1836, but in 1884 an act was passed to provide for their again becoming separate bishoprics. The bishopric of Bristol reconstituted 7 July, 1857. The church, which belonged to the abbey, and its revenues, were appropriated to the maintenance of the see. The abbey, which was founded by Henry I., was called the abbey of Worcester, about 503, was burnt in 1102, and again in 1122. In it are the tombs of Robert, duke de Normandy, and Edward II. In the king's books, this bishopric is valued at 315/ 17s. 6d. per annum. Present income, 800£. Restoration of the cathedral, 1853-7; the lady chapel reopened 29 Sept. 1897. Population, 1901, 17,444; 1911, 5,475.

RECENT BISHOPS OF GLOUCESTER AND BRISTOL.

1802. George Isaac Huntford, translated to Hereford, June, 1784.
1824. Christopher Bethell, translated to Exeter, 1830.
1863. Edgar Charles Summer Gibson, consecrated, 1 June, 1875.

GLOVES. Woodstock and Worcester leather gloves are of ancient celebrity. In the middle ages, the giving a glove was a ceremony of investiture in bestowing lands and dignities; and two bishops were put in possession of their sees by each receiving a glove, 1002. In England, in the reign of Edward II., the deprivation of gloves was a ceremony of degradation. The Glovers' company of London incorporated in 1557. Embroidered gloves are presented to judges at maiden assizes. The importation of foreign gloves was not permitted till 1825.

GLUCINUM (from glukos, sweet). In 1798 Vanquelin discovered the earth glucina (so termed from the sweet taste of its salt). It is found in the beryl and other crystals. From glucina Wohler and Bissy obtained the rare metal glucinium in 1828. Gmelin.

GLUCOSE, see Sugar.

GLUTEN, an ingredient of grain, particularly wheat, termed the vegeto-animal principle (containing nitrogen). Its discovery is attributed to Becaria in the 15th century.

GLYCERINE, discovered by Scheele, about 1770, and termed by him the "sweet principle of fats," and further studied by Chevrel, termed the "father of the fatty acids." It is obtained pure by saponification of animal fat with oxide of lead, or litharge. Glycerine is much employed in medicine and the arts, and in the manufacture of nitro-glycerine (which see), and other explosives.

GLYOXYLINE (invented by Mr. (aft. sir) F. A. Abel, the chemist of the war department, in 1807), an explosive mixture of gun-cotton, pulp and saltpetre saturated with nitro-glycerine. It was abandoned for compressed gun-cotton.

GNOMIUM, a new element discovered by Gerhard, Kruss, and F. W. Schmitt in 1896.

Gnostics (from the Greek gnosis, knowledge), a sect, who, soon after the preaching of Christianity, endeavoured to combine its principles with the Greek philosophy. Among their teachers were Saturnus, 111; Basilides, 134; and Valentine, 140. Priseilian, a Spaniard, was burnt at Treves as a heretic, in 384, for endeavouring to revive Gnosticism.

GOA (S. W. Hindostan), was taken by the Portugese under Albuquerque in 1510, and made their Indian capital. It was visited by the prince of Wales, 27 Nov. 1875. New harbour and railway works inaugurated, 31 Oct. 1882.

Treaty between Portugal and India, attributed to the governor-general, prince Alphonso appointed governor-general; amnesty promised without effect, 23 March, 1896; the prince leaves, reported . . . . 16 June, 1896.

Renewed disturbances, the rebels attacked Perniao and burn the treasury; rebels dispersed, reported . . . . 17 Dec.

Lord Curzon, viceroy of India, received by the governor-general . . . . 14 Nov. 1899.

GOAT SHOW at Alexandra Palace, 10-22 Sept. 1880, supported by the British Goat Society, recently established. A goat farm for the supply of milk established near Borking, 1882. Annual shows of the British goat society have been held.

GOBELIN-TAPESTRY, so called from a house at Paris, formerly possessed by wool-dyers, whereof the chief (Johan Gobelin), in the reign of Francis I., is said to have found the secret of dyeing scarlet. This house was purchased by Louis XIV. about 1662, for a manufactory of works for adorning palaces (under the direction of Colbert), especially tapestries, designs for which were drawn by Le Brun, about 1660. Establishment (1789) cost about 8000, a year.

"GOD SAVE THE KING." This melody is said to have been composed by John Bull, Mus.D., in 1606, for a dinner given to James I. at Merchant Taylors' Hall; others ascribe it to Henry Carey, author of "Sally in our alley," who died, 4 Oct. 1743. It was much sung 1745-6. It has been claimed by the French. The controversy on the subject is summed up in Chappell's "Popular Music of the Olden Times" (1859). The melody has been adopted for the German national anthem ("Heil dir im Siegerkranz!") and also for the Danish, "God save the king," revised version, 1902.

GODERICH ADMINISTRATION. Viscount Goderich, afterwards earl of Ripon, became first minister on the death of Mr. Canning, 8 Aug. 1827; he resigned 8 Jan. 1828.

Viscount Goderich, first lord of the treasury.

Duke of Portland, president of the council.

Lord Lyndhurst, lord chancellor.

Earl of Carlisle, lord privy seal.

Viscount Dudley, Mr. Huskisson, and the marquess of Lansdowne, foreign, colonial, and home secretaries.

Lord Palmerston, secretary-at-war.

Mr. C. W. Weld, president of the India board.

Mr. Charles Grant (afterwards lord Glinelg), board of trade.

Mr. Herries, chancellor of the exchequer.

Mr. Tierney, master of the mint, &c.
GODFATHERS AND GODMOTHERS, or sponsors. The Jews are said to have had them at circumcision; but there is no mention of them in scripture. Tradition says that sponsors were first appointed by Hyginus, a Roman bishop, about 154, during a time of persecution. In Roman Catholic countries bells have godfathers and godmothers at their baptism.

GODOLPHIN ADMINISTRATIONS (see Administrations), 1684 and 1690. Lord Godolphin became prime minister to queen Anne, 8 May, 1702. The cabinet was notified in 1704. The earl resigned 8 Aug. 1710, and died 1712.

Sidney, lord (afterwards earl) Godolphin, treasurer.
Sir John Wright, iow secretary.
Thomas, earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, lord presi- dent.
John Sheffield, marquis of Normandy (afterwards duke of Normandy and Buckingham), privy seal.
Hon. Henry Boyle, chancellor of the exchequer.
Sir Charles Hedges and the earl of Nottingham (the latter succeeded by Robert Harley, created earl of Oxford in 1704), secretaries of state.

GODS, Greek and Roman; see under Mythology.

GOODWIN (or GOODWIN) SANDS, sand-banks off the east coast of Kent, occupy land which belonged to Goodwin, earl of Kent, the father of king Henry I. The sands are said to have been washed away suddenly, 15 April, 1053. This ground was afterwards given to the monastery of St. Augustine at Canterbury; but the abbot neglecting to keep in repair the wall that defended it from the sea, the tract was submerged about 1100, leaving these sands, upon which many ships have been wrecked. Solomon.

GOG AND MAGOG, see Gathhathl.

GOLD (mentioned Gen. ii. 11), the purest, and most ductile of all the metals, for which reason it has been considered by almost all nations as the most valuable. It is too soft to be used pure, and to harden it it is alloyed with copper, silver: our coin contains about one-fifth of gold, and two of copper. By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 94 (1854), gold wares are allowed to be manufactured at a lower standard than formerly;—welding rings excepted, by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 60 (1855). The present stated price is 3s. 17s. 10d. per oz.; see Coin of England, and Scotland. In 1810, it was emended by 56 Geo. III. c. 68, that "gold coins only should be legal tender in all payments of more than 40s.," the tender of silver being previously unlimited.

The value of gold compared with silver is said to have been estimated in the time of Herodotus, B.C. 450, about 10 to 1 of Plato, B.C. 48, 12 to 1; A.D. 1876, more than 20, the price of which is 6s. 8d.

The weight of the maharajah of Travancore in gold given in charity (an old custom), May, 1854.

The discovery of gold in Australia by Phillip (about 1775) and Vitrumius (about 272 B.C.) the alchemist Basil Valentine (in the 15th century) was acquainted with the solution of the chloride of gold and fulminating gold. Andreas Cassius, in 1655, described the preparation of gold purple, which was then adapted by Kunckel to make red glass, and to other purposes. OMelia. Gold has been subjected to the researches of chemists since the time of Berzelius and Parady.

Mr. Rowland Jordan, of London devised a new and successful method of preventing waste, in separating gold from its ore. See Jordan, Aug. 1854.

H. R. Osgood's process for extraction of chlorine used in London, 1855.

Mr. B. C. Molloy's hydrogen-amalgam process for extracting gold from the ores exhibited by Messrs. Johnson of Finsbury, London, Aug. 1855.

Mr. T. Rowland Jordan's method of extracting gold, exhibited in George Street, London, E.C., Oct. 1858.

GOLD MINES. Gold was found most abundantly in Africa, Japan, and South America. In the last it was discovered by the Spaniards in 1548, from which time to 1731 they imported into Europe 6,000 millions of pieces of eight, in register gold and silver, exclusively of what were unregistered.

Peter the Great re-opened ancient gold mines in Russia, 1673.

The Ural mountains of Russia long produced gold in large quantity.

A piece of gold weighing ninety marks, equal to sixty pounds troy (the mark being eight ounces), was found near La Paz, in the town of San Juan, Peru; and it was described by Mr. Cuvelier, and in the first edition of his "Dictionnaire," 1778, as weighing 90 pounds 4 ounces 10 dec. 3 grains; and the weight of 5,058,400 oz. was imported into Europe from the mines of New Granada, 1832-35.

GOLD COAST

Gold mining successfully carried on in Nova Scotia; gold found in large quantities at Whycomecooah; reported Feb. 18, 1854.

Gold obtained in United Kingdom; value in 1861, 10,280; in 1882, 2,500; in 1890, 5,750; in 1897, 12,147.

Estimated value of production of gold throughout the world, 1877, 21,755,000; 1887, 49,061,000; 1897, 50,946,000.

The Transtral output of gold valued at 16,223,000, in 1899, 20,514,500.

Gold discovered in S. Australia, early 1893.

Gold Wire was found in the U.S. West about 1850. An ounce of gold is sufficient to gild a silver wire above 1,000 miles in length; and such is its tenacity that a wire of No. 10 size in the seventh part of an inch will bear the weight of 90 Ib. without breaking.

Gold Leaf. A single grain of gold may be extended into a leaf of fifty-six square inches, and gold leaf can be reduced to the 300,000th part of an inch, and gliding to the ten-millionth part. Kelly's Chemist.

Gold Robbery. Three boxes, hooped and sealed, containing gold in bars and coin, to the value of between 50,000 and 60,000 were sent to London, 21 May 1885. On their arrival in Paris, it was found that tickets to the value of 12,000 had been abstracted, and shot substituted, although the boxes bore no mark of violence. Many persons were apprehended on suspicion; but the police obtained no trace till Nov. 1885. Three men named Pierre, Burgess, and Outter were tried and convicted 15 Jan. 1897, on the evidence of Edward Levitan, an accomplice. They had been preparing for the robbery for eighteen months previous to its perpetration.

Bullion to the value of about 1,265,000, landed at Plymouth from India and Australia; this makes the largest quantity ever landed at this port, 16 Feb. 1896. Discovery of gold-bearing rocks of great value, by the Government surveyors, at a point about 35 miles from Fort St. John, reported, 5 Sept. 1896. Two nuggets weighing 373 and 607 oz. respectively were unearthed near Taranzillia, Australia, 17 Dec. 1896. Government geologists in Uganda report the finding of gold in considerable quantities in several parts of the Mbuga country, Oct. 1897. One containing veins of gold discovered in Anglesey, Dec. 1897.

Discovery of gold-bearing stone at Ballarat officially reported to the Victorian government, 16 July, 1897. Gold here found, apparently of the date 600-500 B.C., weighing 9 oz. 24 cwt. 16 lb. 10 oz. 14 dec. 1898. Gold discovered by the grand trunk pacific engineers in the neighbourhood of Stewart, B.C., 24 June, 1899.

GOLD COAST, West Africa, see Guinea; settlements made by the Dutch; transferred to Great Britain by treaty, signed 2 Feb. 1872; joined with larger part of the "Gold Coast Colony," May, 1895, under Capt. Geo. Cumnor Strahan, appointed 1874; Lagos separated in 1876; Sandiford Freeling, 1876; Herbert Taylor Usher, 1879; Sir Samuel Rowse, 25 Jan. 1881; William A. G. Young, died 25 April, 1885; Sir W. Brandon Griffiths, 1886; Sir G. E. Maxwell, Jan. 1895; died at sea, Dec. 1897; Mr. G. A. H. Maitliew, March, 1899; Capt. Matthew Natchan (alt. sir.), Oct. 1898; Sir J. P. Rodger, Oct. 1903. Area of the Gold Coast, Ashanti and Protectorate, 82,500 sq. miles. Population of the colony and protectorate, estimated at 1,750,000. Chief towns, Accra, Cape Coast Castle, and Elmina. Exports, palm oil and cocoa, indiarubber, and gold. Output of gold, 1899, about 1,000,000.

British mission (42), under Rev. Henderson, attacked at Dawkta by Sofas, 28 March; fought its way to Wa, 3 April; Mr. George Ferguson, British post commissioner, killed, in the fighting 31 March, 1897. Rev. Henderson goes alone to arrange peace with Sofas, and is kept a prisoner, April; but released 4 May. Settlement of peace with Samory made by Sir Wm. Maxwell Aug., 1897. Road construction is proceeding rapidly, about 200 miles are kept up for vehicular traffic, and 1,500 miles for tracks and bumpy paths. There are in the colony 1,350 miles of telegraph line, 47 officers and telephone exchanges at Accra, Cape Coast, Sekondi and Tarkwa.

GOLD FISH (the golden carp, cyprinus auratus), brought to England from China in 1691; but not common till about 1723.

GOLDEN BULLS, ROSE, see Bulls, Rose, note.

GOLDEN FLEECE (see Argonauts). Philip the Good, duke of Burgundy, in 1429, at his marriage, instituted the military order of "Toison d'or" or "golden fleece," which was said on account of the profit he made by wool. The number of knights was thirty-one. The king of Spain, as duke of Burgundy, afterwards became grand master of the order. The knights wore a scarlet cloak lined with crimson, with a collar opened, and the duke's éphémère, in the form of a B, to signify Burgundy, together with furs striking fires, with the motto, "Ante frons, quem flemma mictat." At the end of the collar hung a golden fleece, with this device, "Patria non videtur laborum." The order afterwards became common to all the princes of the house of Austria, as descendants of Mary, daughter of Charles the Bold, last duke of Burgundy, who married Elizabeth, sister of Maximilian of Austria, in 1477, and it now belongs to both Austria and Spain, in conformity with a treaty made 30 April, 1725. The prince of Wales, the duke of York and other royal princes are knights (1895); president Faure, 1898; the duke of Connaught, 6 May, 1902; the shah of Persia, 6 Sept. 1902. For the legend of the Golden Fleece, see Argonauts.

GOLDEN HORDE, a name given to the Mongolian Tartars, who established an empire in Kaptchak (or Kibzak), now S.E. Russia, about 1224, the last of the descendants of Genghis Khan. They invaded Russia, and made Alexander Newski grand-duke, 1232. At the battle of Biala-wisch, in 1231, they were crushed by Ivan III. and the Nogai Tartars.
GOLDEN LEGEND. "Legenda Aurea." A name given to a collection of the lives of our Lord, the Old Testament worthies, and many Christian saints, with much Bible narrative, compiled by Giacomo Varragio, or Jacobus de Voragine, a Dominican monk, archbishop of Genoa, 1292-5. The work, which is of a very varied character, has afforded many subjects for poets and painters. A translation of "The Golden Legend," by William Caxton, was printed by him in 1483, and became very popular.

GOLDEN NUMBER, the cycle of nineteen years, or the number that shows the years of the moon's cycle; its invention is ascribed to Meton, of Athens, about 338 B.C. Play. To find the golden number or year of the lunar cycle, add one to the date, and divide by 19; the quotient is the number of cycles since Christ, and the remainder the golden number. The golden number for 1902, 3; 1903, 4; 1904, 5; 1905, 6; 1906, 7; 1907, 8; 1908, 9; 1909, 10; 1910, 11; 1911, 12.

GOLDSMID FAMILY. Aaron Goldsmid, a native of Holland, settled in London in 1703, and brought with him wealth and important commercial influence. His son Asher joined in establishing the firm of Moscati and Goldsmid, bullion brokers to the Bank of England. The Goldsmids became at the end of the 18th and the beginning of the 19th century most distinguished financiers of the realm.

GOLDSMITHS' COMPANY (London) began about 1537, and incorporated 16 Rich. II., 1392. The old hall was taken down in 1829, and the present magnificent edifice by Philip Hardwick, was opened 15 July, 1835. See Assay, and Standard. The first bankers were goldsmiths.

Goldest's' hall marks on gold and silver plate are five:—
1. The sovereign's head (after 1724); 2. Lion passant (the standard mark), probably introduced between 1538 and 1535; 3. The standard mark, fixed 8 & 9 Will. III. 1698-9; 4. Leopard's head, the hall mark; 5. The maker's mark (an onus autors).

The date-letter is one of an alphabet of 20 letters; A to O or V, if being omitted. The letter is changed on 30 May annually, and the shape of the letter every 20 years; thus 1716, A, &c.; 1717, B, &c.; 1718, C, &c.; 1719, D, &c.; 1720-1815, A, &c.; 1816-36, B, &c.; 1837-56, C, &c.; 1857-69, D, &c.; 1870-97, E, &c.

The earliest known alphabetical series began 1483-91.

A parliamentary commission on hall marking reported in favour of its continuance with modifications, May, 1879.

The company offer about 5,000 for the establishment of the goldsmiths' company's polytechnic institute, New Cross, Surrey, Oct., 1883; accepted by the Charity Commissioners, 1889. See Polytechnic institute.

Goldsmiths' exhibition at Vienna opened, 22 April, 1889. Hall-marking of Foreign Plate act (royal assent, 22 July, 1904) came into operation, 1 Nov., 1904.

GOLF or Goff, an ancient Scottish game in which the rival players drive hard white balls with clubs into holes placed at certain distances in the turf, according to rules laid down by the St. Andrews golf club, established 1554. The game was checked by the Scottish parliament, 1437 and 1481, but it continued and was played at Leith in 1545. The oldest existing English golf club at Blackheath was founded by James L., 1608, but the game did not become popular till recent years. Golf clubs have been formed in the United Kingdom, colonies and abroad, 1893 et seq.

James Braid, playing against Mr., now sir George Reid, at Balston Heath, drove a ball on a frost-bound ground, 395 yards, a world's record drive, 1905

GOOD FRIDAY (probably God's Friday), the Friday before Easter day, on which a solemn fast has long been held, in remembrance of the crucifixion of Christ on Friday, 3 April, 33, or 15 April, 29. Its appellation of good appears to be peculiar to the church of England; our Saxon forefathers denounced it Long Friday, on account of the length of the offices and fastings enjoined on this day. See Easter.

GOODMAN'S FIELDS THEATRE, London, opened 1729. Here David Garrick made his debut as Richard III., 19 Oct. 1741. The new theatre, erected about 1740, was burnt down, June, 1802. The Garrick Theatre was opened in 1830; burnt, 4 Nov. 1846; and since rebuilt.

GOOD TEMPLARS (first lodges formed in America, 1851), pledge themselves not to make, buy, sell, furnish, or cause to be furnished, intoxicating liquors to others at a sale of severance. The first English lodge was formed by Joseph Malms at Birmingham, 8 Sept., 1868. Grand Lodge of England instituted by him, 1870. 1,536 lodges, and 102,270 members of the Grand lodge in 1910. Annual sessions of the Grand lodge of England are held. Triennial congress held at Washington, U.S.A., to be held at Hamburg, 6 June, 1910. The Grand lodge of Scotland has 1,171 lodges, and 69,000 members, 1,500 lodges in Ireland and Wales.

GOODWOOD RACES, see Races.

GOOJERAT (N. India), see Guzerat.

GOORKHAS, a warlike tribe of Nepal, became prominent in the 17th century. Their invasions were defeated about 1791 by the Chinese, whose vessels they became. In a war with the British in 1814 they were at first successful, but were eventually subdued, and a treaty of peace was signed in Feb. 1816. Since 1841 the native regiments have been largely recruited by Goorkhas, who have rendered valuable service in nearly all our Indian wars, and in Afghanistan, 1879-9.

GOOSE, see Michaelmas.

GORDIAN KNOT, is said to have been made of the threads that served as harness to the waggons of Gordius, a husbandman, afterwards king of Phrygia. Whosoever loosed this knot, the ends of which were not discoverable, the oracle declared should be ruler of Persia. Alexander the Great cut away the knot with his sword until he found the ends of it, and thus, in a military sense at least, interpreted the oracle. 330 B.C.

GORDON MEMORIAL: proposed by lady Burdett-Coutts in the TIMES, 24 Feb. 1885. See Khorston and Mansion House.

Committee formed: the prince of Wales, duke of Cambridge, archbishop of Canterbury, M. Gladstone, marquis of Salisbury, cardinal Manning, Chinese minister, marquis of Lorne, earl Granville and other persons, 24 Feb. 1885. Proposed grant of 25,000l. to the Gordon family, March, 1885.

Gordon Memorial Hospital at Port Said proposed at Mansion House, London, 14 March, 1885. Subscriptions 20,000l. 19 Oct. 1885; given to trustees of Gordon boys' home. Port Said hospital scheme given up, 30 May, 1885. Opening of penny subscription to establish a Gordon camp at Aldershot for the military training of destitute boys; originated by Mr. Hallam Tennyson, May, 1885.
GORDON'S "NO POPERY" RIOTS. 635

GOTHIC ARCHITECTURE.

Gordon league to provide entertainment for the very poor, instituted by the princess Louise and others, 15 May, 1885; first meeting 18 Oct. 1885.

A Gordon memorial boys' home proposed 1 July, united with the precedent, 22 Nov., opened at Farnham near Portsmouth, Oct. 1885. Writing: "Boys in the home, during 1902. Of those who left 38 joined the army and navy, making a total of 769 who have joined these two services direcdy from the home since 1885. Enlisted after leaving the home, too.

A statue proposed by government, about 14 July, 1885. Statue by Mr. Hamo Thornycroft set up in Trafalgar-square Sept.; uncovered by Mr. R. R. Plunket, 16 Oct. 1885.

Another statue, by Mr. Osmow Ford, at the school of military engineering, Chatham, uncovered by the prince of Wales, May, 1885; and one at Gravesend, unveiled by the mayor, Mr. G. M. Arnold, 4 Oct. 1885. Gordon memorial college at Kharloun, proposed by lord Kitchener, supported by the marquis of Salisbury, 23 Nov. 1890. Opened 7 Nov. 1892.

GORDON'S "NO POPERY" RIOTS, occasioned by the zeal of lord George Gordon, June 2–9, 1780.

On 4 Jan. 1780, he tendered the petition of the Protestant Association to lord North. On Friday, 2 June, he headed the mob of 40,000 persons who assembled in St. George's Fields, under the name of the association, to carry up a petition to parliament for the repeal of the act which granted certain indulgences to the Roman Catholics. The mob proceeded to pilage, burn, and pull down the chapels and houses of the Roman Catholics in London; and the riot, which had started by the mob, was quelled on the 8th. 230 rioters were killed and 248 wounded, of whom 75 died afterwards in the hospitals, and many were tried, convicted and executed.

The loss of property was estimated at £30,000.

Lord George was tried for high treason and acquitted, 1 Feb. 1782. He died a prisoner for libel, 1 Nov. 1793. Alderman Kennedy was found guilty of a delinquency of duty, 10 March, 1781.

GOREE, a station near Cape Verde, W. coast of Africa, planted by the Dutch, 1607. It was taken by the English admiralty Holmes in 1663; seized by the French, 1677; and ceded to them by the treaty of Nimcoen in 1678; taken by the British in 1758, 1779, 1800, and 1804; ceded to France, 1814. Governor Wall was hanged in Lon- don, 28 Jan. 1862, for the murder of sergeant Armstrong, committed while governor at Goree in 1782.

GOREY (S. E. Ireland). Near here the king's troops under colonel Walpole were defeated, and their leader slain, by the Irish rebels, 4 June, 1798.

GORGET, the ancient breast-plate, was very large, varying in size and weight.

GORHAM CASE, see Trials, 1839-40.

GORILLA, a powerful ape of W. Africa, about 5 feet 7 inches high. It is a match for the lion, and attacks the elephant with a club. It is considered to be identical with the hairy people called Gorrilas by the navigator Hanno, in his Periplus, about 400 n.c. In 1837 a sketch of a gorilla's cranium was sent to professor Owen by Dr. Savage from the Gaboon river, and preserved specimens have been brought to Europe, and a living one died on its voyage to France. In 1851 professor Owen described specimens to the Zoological Society; in 1859 he gave a summary of our knowledge of this creature at the Royal Institution, London; and in 1861 several skins and skulls were there exhibited by M. Du Chaillu (died 29 April, 1903), who stated that he killed 21 of them in his travels in Central Africa. The gorilla was not known to Cuvier.

A large one brought from the French Congo to the gardens, 6 March, 1892. Johanna, the "educated" gorilla, performs at Olympia, 27 Dec. 1897.

GOSPELLERS, a name given to the followers of Wickliffe, who attacked the errors of popery, about 1377. Wickliffe opposed the authority of the pope, the temporal jurisdiction of bishops, &c., and is called the father of the Reformaiton.

GOSPELS (Saxon god-spell, good story). Matthew's and Mark's are conjectured to have been written between A.D. 38 and 65; Luke's 55 or 65; John's, about the 3rd century. "Gospel" is a name widely used, by the early Christians, to refer to the biographies of the gospels by name. Dr. Robert Bray was one of the authors of the society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Countries, incorporated in 1701. A body termed "Bray's Associates," still exists; its object being to assist in forming and supporting clerical parochial libraries.

GOSPORT (Hampshire), contains the Royal Clarence victualling yard. The great Haslar hospital, near Gosport, was built in 1702.

GOTHA, capital of the duchy of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha. Here is published the celebrated Almanach de Gotha, which first appeared in 1764, in German. Population, 1890, 29,134; 1890, 34,651; 1890 (est.), 37,230.

GOTHARD, see Gotthard and Alps.

GOTHENBURG SYSTEM (in Sweden and Norway, about 1871). By this alcholic drinks are dispensed by persons deriving no profit from the sale. It was advocated in England by Mr. Chamberlain, M.P., and much discussed, 1875-7. The bishop of Chester introduced a bill for establishing the system, read first time, 2 March, 1875; rejected by the lords, 6 June, 1873. The system advocated at the Duke of Westminster's, 6 July, 1894. Much controversy ensued, 1894-95. GOTHIC ARCHITECTURE began about the 11th century after Christ, and spread over Europe. Its great feature is the pointed arch; hence it has been suggested to call it the pointed style. "Gothic" was originally a term of reproach given to this style by the renaissance architects of the 16th century. His invention has been claimed for several nations, particularly for the Saracens. The following list is from Godwin's Chronological Table of English Architecture:—

Anglo-Roman—b.c. 55 to about A.D. 250—St. Martin's church, Canterbury.

Anglo-Saxon—A.D. 500 to 1066—Earl's Barton church, St. Peter's, Lincolnshire.

Gothic Anglo-Roman—A.D. 1066 to 1135—Rochester cathedral nave; St. Bartholomew's, Smithfield; St. Cross Church, &c.

Early English, or Pointed—A.D. 1135 to 1272—Temple church, London; parts of Winchester, Wells, Salisbury, and Durham cathedrals, and Westminster Abbey.

Pointed, called Pure Gothic—A.D. 1272 to 1377—Exeter cathedral, Waltham Cross, &c., St. Stephen's, West- minster.
FLORIN POINTED—A.D. 1177 to 1500.—Westminster Hall; King's College, Cambridge; St. George's Chapel, Windsor; Henry VII's Chapel, Westminster.

For 350 years, from 1535 to 1685, Northumberland House, Strand, pulled down 1875, part of Windsor Castle: Hatfield House, Schools at Oxford.

Revival of Greekian architecture about 1625. Banqueting House, Whitehall.

The revival of Gothic architecture commenced about 1255. The mainline the exertions of A. W. Pugin. The controversy as to its expediency was rife in 1860-1.

GOTHLAND, an isle in the Baltic sea, was conquered by the Teutonic knights, 1307-8. At this time King Albert I and Duke Leopold I of Austria were defeated and killed by a battle of Chalons, 1251, but were defeated at Naisus by Claudius, hence surmamed Gothicus, 350,000 being slain, 250. Auerhard cereed Ura to them in 272; but they long troubled the empire. After the destruction of the Roman western empire by the Heruli, the Ostrogoths under Theoderic, became masters of the greater part of Italy, where they retained their dominion till 553, when they were finally conquered by Narses, Justinian's general. The Visigoths settled in Spain, and founded a kingdom, which continued until the country was subjugated by the Saracens.

GOTHARD, ST., near the river Rab, Hungary. Here the Turks, under the grand vizier Kaprjaliy, were totally defeated by the Imperialists and their allies, commanded by Monteucen, 1 Aug. 1642. Peace followed this great victory. St. Gotthard tunnel opened 1882. See Alps.

Gettysburg on the St. Gotthard tunnel burnt down, 13 March, 1865.

GOTTINGEN (Hanover), a member of the Hanseatic league about 1350. The university "Georgia Augustana," founded by George II. of England in 1734, was opened 1737. It was seized by the French, 1790, and held till 1792. In 1813 several of the most able professors were dismissed for their political opinions. Pop. 1890, 30,234.

GOVERNANCES' BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION, was established in 1813, and incorporated in 1828. It affords to aged governesses annuities and an asylum; and to governesses in distress a temporary home and assistance.

GOVERNMENT ANNUITIES ACT, see Annuities.

GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS, select committee (fairs wages resolution of 13 Feb., 1891), appointed 1877-9; report issued 21 July, 1879. See Secretory.

GOVERNMENT OF IRELAND BILLS, see Ireland, 1830, 1839.

"GOVERNOR. THE," a moral and educational work, full of anecdotes, by Sir Thomas Elyot, first published in 1531; an annotated edition with a glossary by Mr. H. H. S. Crew was published in 1870.

GOWRIE CONSPIRACY. John Ruthven, 3rd earl of Gowrie, in 1560, reckoning on the support of the burghs and the kirk, conspired to dethrone James VI. of Scotland, and seize the government. For this purpose the king was decoyed into Gowrie's house in Perth, on 5 Aug. 1560. The plot was frustrated, and the earl and his brother, Alexander, were slain on the spot. At the time, many persons believed that the young men were rather the victims than the authors of a plot. Their father, William, was treacherously executed in 1564 for his share in the raid of Ruthven, in 1582, and he and his father, Patrick, were among the assassins of Rizzio, 9 March, 1566.

GRAAL, HOLY (Sangreal). The publication of Tennyson's poem "Holy Grail," Dec. 1869, led to much discussion. Tennyson treats it as the cup in which Christ drank at the Last Supper. The medieval romances treat it as the dish which held the paschal-lamb. The word is probably old French, from the old Latin gradalis, a dish.

GRACE, a title assumed by Henry IV. of England, on his accession, in 1399. Excellent Grace was assumed by Henry VI. about 1425. Till the time of James I. 1603; the king was addressed by this title. But afterwards by the title of Majesty only. "Your Grace" is the manner of addressing an archbishop and a duke in this realm. The term "Grace of God" is said to have been taken by bishops at Ephesus, 431 (probably from 1 Cor. xvi. 10), by the Carlovvingian princes in the 9th century, by popes in the 13th century; and about 1440 it was assumed by kings as signifying their divine right. "Des grâces" was put on his great seal by William II. of England, and on his gold coin by Edward III. The king of Prussia's saying, that he would reign "by the grace of God," gave much sense, 18 Oct. 1891.

GRACE AT MEAT. The ancient Greeks would not partake of any meat until they had first offered part of it, as the firstfruits, to their gods. The short prayer said before, and by some persons after, meat in Christian countries is in conformity with Christ's example, John vii. 11, &c.

GRECIA MAGNA, colonies planted by the Greeks, 07, 7, 48 B.C.; see Italy.

GRAFFITO, a term given to the scribblings found on the walls of Pompeii and other Roman ruins; selections were published by Wordsworth in 1837, and by Garucci in 1850.

GRANTON ADMINISTRATION, succeeded that of lord Chatham, Dec. 1767. The duke resigned, and lord North became prime minister, Jan. 1770; see North's Administration.

Augustus Henry, duke of Grafton, first lord of the treasury (born, 1725; died 1811). Frederick, lord North, chancellor of the exchequer.

Earl Gorey, lord president.

Earl of Chatham, lord privy seal.

Earl of Shrewsbury and Viscount Wemouth, secretaries of state.

Sir Edward Hawke, first lord of the admiralty.

Marquis of Granby, master-general of the ordnance.

Lord Sandwich and Lord Despencer, joint postmasters-general.

Lord Hertford, duke of Newcastle, Thomas Townshend, &c.

Lord Camden, lord chancellor, succeeded by Charles Yorke (created lord Morden), died (it is said by his own hand) 26 Jan. 1799.

GRAHAM'S DIKE (Scotland), a wall built in 299 by Severus Septimius, the Roman emperor, or, as others say, by Antoninus Pius. It reached from the Firth of Forth to the Clyde. Buchanan relates that there were considerable remains of this wall in his time, and vestiges of it are still to be seen.
GRAIN. Henry III. is said to have ordered a grain of wheat gathered from the middle of the ear to be the original standard of weight: 12 grains to be a pennyweight; 12 pennyweights one ounce, and 12 ounces a pound Troy. Laureson.

An act for the safe carriage of grain (43 & 44 Vict. c. 43) passed 7 Sept. 1830.

GRAMMARIANS. A society of grammarians was formed at Rome so early as 270 B.C. Blair. Apollodorus of Athens, Varro, Cicero Messala, Julius Caesar, Nicias, Elius Donatus, Remmius, Palemon, Tyrannion of Pontus, Athenaeus, and other distinguished men, were of this class. A Greek grammar was printed at Milan in 1476. La. Latin grammar (Breviss Instituti), 1513; Lindley Murray's English Grammar, 1765; Cobbett's English Grammar, 1818. Harris's Hermes was published in 1750, Horne Tooke's "Epen Pteroeota," or the "Diversions of Purley," in 1756, treatises on the philosophy of language and grammar. Cobbett declared Mr. Canning to have been the only purely grammatical of his time; and Dr. Parr, speaking of a speech of Mr. Pitt's, said, "We threw our whole grammatical mind upon it, and could not discover one error."

GRAMMAR SCHOOLS, see Education.

GRAMME, see Metric System. Gramm machine, see under Electricity.

GRAMMOPHONE AND GRAPHOPHONE, see under Phonograph.

GRAMPAN HILLS (central Scotland). At Ardoch, near Mons Graupius of Tacitus, the Scots and Picts under Galgaen were defeated by the Romans under Agricola, 84 or 85.

GRAMPUND (Cornwall) was disfranchised in 1821, for bribery and corrupt practices in 1819. Sir Manasseh Lopez was sentenced by the court of king's bench to a fine of 10,000l. and two years' imprisonment.

GRAN (Hungary). Here the Hungarians defeated the Austrians, 27 Feb. 1849.

GRANADA, a city, S. Spain, was founded by the Moors in the 8th century, and formed at first part of the kingdom of Cordova. In 1236, Mohammed-al-Hamar made it the capital of his new kingdom of Granada, which was highly prosperous till its subjugation by the "great captain," Gonzalez de Cordova, 2 Jan. 1492, who is interred in the monastery of St. Geronimo. In 1609 and 1610 the industrious Moors were expelled from Spain by the bigoted Philip III., to the lasting injury of his country. Granada was taken by marshal SoulI in 1810, and held till 1812. See New Granada. Granada is the seat of an archbishopric. The cathedral, begun in 1526, contains the tombs of Ferdinand and Isabella, and of Philip I. and his consort Juana. The university was founded 1531. Population, 1867, province, 477,898; city, 75,554. In the province of Granada, five towns were destroyed, 640 persons killed, with immense loss of property, through the earthquakes of 25 Dec. c. 1854.

GRANARIES were formed by Joseph in Egypt, 1715 B.C. (Genesis xii. 48). There were three hundred and twenty-seven granaries in Rome. Univ. Hist. Twelve new granaries were built at Bridewell to hold 6000 quarters of corn, and two store houses for sea-coal to hold 4000 loads, thereby to prevent the sudden dearth of these articles by great increase of inhabitants, 7 James I. 1610. Stow.

GRAPES. Previously to the reign of Edward VI., grapes were brought to England in large quantities from Flanders, where they were first cultivated about 1276. The vine was introduced into England in 1553; being first planted at Bloxhall, in Suffolk. In the gardens of Hampton-court palace is a vine, stated to surpass any in Europe; it is 72 feet by 20, and has in one season produced 2572 bunches of grapes, weighing 18 cwt.; the stem is 13 inches in diameter; it was planted in 1767. Leigh.

GRAPHITE. (from the Greek graph, to write), a peculiar form of mineral carbon, with a trace of iron, improperly termed black lead and plumago. In 1809 sir Humphry Davy investigated into the relations of three forms of carbon, the diamond, graphite, and charcoal. A rude kind of black-lead pencil is mentioned by Gesner in 1565. Interesting results of sir B. C. Brodie's researches on graphite appeared in the International Exhibition of 1862. Fresh discoveries were made in the nearly exhausted Borrowdale mines, Cumberland, in 1875.

Grand Alliance between the emperor and the Dutch States-General (principally to prevent the union of the French and Spanish monarchies in one person), signed at Vienna, 12 May, 1689, to which England, Spain, and the duke of Savoy afterwards acceded.

GRAND JUNCTION CANAL (central England), joins several others, and forms a water communication between London, Liverpool, Bristol, and Hull. The canal commences at Braunston, on the west borders of Northamptonshire, and enters the Thames near London. Constructed 1792-1805.

GRAND PENSIONARY, a chief state functionary in Holland, in the 16th century. In the Constitution given by France to the Batavian republic, previously to the elevation of the kingdom of Holland, the title was revived and given to the head of the government, 29 April, 1805. Simon Jan Schimmelpenninck being made the grand pensionary; see Holland.

GRANICUS (a river N.W. Asia Minor), near which, on 22 May, 334 B.C. Alexander the Great signally defeated the Persians. The Macedonian troops (30,000 foot and 5000 horse) crossed the Granicus in the face of the Persian army (600,000 foot and 20,000 horse). Justin. The victors lost fifty-five foot soldiers and sixty horse. Sardis capitulated, Miletus and Halicarnassus were taken by storm, and other great towns submitted to the conqueror.

GRANSON, near the lake of Neuchatel, Switzerland, where Charles the Bold, duke of Burgundy, was defeated by the Swiss, 3 March, 1476.

GRANTON PIER, breakwater, &c. forming a harbour, on the Forth, three miles from Edinburgh, were constructed by Balfour and Stevenson, at the cost of about 500,000l., given by Walter, duke of Buccleuch, 1835-44.

GRAPEFRUIT, &c. forming a harbour, on the Forth, three miles from Edinburgh, were constructed by Balfour and Stevenson, at the cost of about 500,000l., given by Walter, duke of Buccleuch, 1835-44.

GRECO-TURKISH WAR

GREAT BRITAIN, the name given in 1604 to England, Wales, and Scotland (which see). King James I, styled himself king of Great Britain, 1604. See Population.

GREAT EASTERN, &c., RAILWAYS, see under Stowon.—The Eastern Counties Railway assumed the name of Great Eastern in 1862, when it was incorporated. The Great Northern Railway Company, an amalgamation, was incorporated in 1870. Their station at King's-cross, London, was opened in Oct. 1873. The Great Western Railway opened its line to M. 4 June, 1838; to Twyford, 1 July, 1839; between London and Bristol, 30 June, 1841; was remodelled by acts of 1867 and 1869. Great Central name given to the Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire railway in 1897. Extension to London terminus, Marylebone-road, opened 9 March, 1899.

GREAT SEAL OF ENGLAND. The first seal used by Edward the Confessor was called the broad seal, and affixed to the grants of the crown, 1048. Baker's Chron. The most ancient seal with arms on it is that of Richard I. James II, when fleeing from London in 1688, dropped the great seal in the Thames. GREECE, anciently termed Hellas. The name of Greece first occurs in the writings of Aristotl e (B.C. 385-322). Greece was so called from an ancient king, Greece, and Hellas from another king, Hellen, the son of Deucalion. From Hellen's sons, Dorus and Eolus, came the Dorians and Eolians; another son Xuthus was father of Achæus and Ion, the founders of the Achæans and Ionians. Homer calls the inhabitants indifferently Myrmidons, Hellenes, and Achaioi. They were also termed Danaoi, from Danaus, king of Argos, 1474 B.C. Greece anciently consisted of the peninsula of the Peloponnese, Greece outside of the Peloponnese, Thessaly, and the islands. The principal states of Greece were Acarnania, Epirus, Thessaly, Epeiros, Arcadia, and afterwards Macedon (all which see). The limits of Modern Greece are much more confined. Greece became subject to the Turkish empire in the 15th century. The population of the kingdom, established in 1829, 99,810; in 1861, 1,096,810, with the Ionian islands (added in 1864), about 1,338,522; in 1891, 4,445,796, 4,433,806, 1910 (est.), 3,000,000. The early history is mythic, and the dates purely conjectural.

Grenville Administrations.

The first succeeded the Bute administration, 8 April, 1763; and resigned in July, 1765.

George Grenville (born 1712, died 1770), first lord of the treasury and chancellor of the exchequer.

Earl Grenville (succeeded by the duke of Bedford), lord president.

Duke of Marlborough, privy seal.

Earls of Halifax and Sandwich, secretaries of state.

Earl Gower, lord chamberlain.

Earl of Egmont, admiralty.

Marquis of Granby, ordnance.

Lord Holland (late M. Fox), paymaster.

Wellesley, secretary at war.

Viscount Barrington, treasurer of the navy.

Lord Hillsborough, first lord of trade.

Lord Henley (afterwards earl of Northington), lord chancellor.

Duke of Rutland, lord North. Trevor, Hyde, &c.

Second Grenville Administration, formed after the death of Mr. Pitt, 23 Jan. 1806. From the ability of many of its members, their friends said it contained "all the talents, wisdom, and ability of the country," a term applied to it derisively by its opponents.

The death of Mr. Fox, 13 Sept. 1806, led to changes, and eventually the cabinet resigned, 25 March, 1807: —

Lord Grenville, the lord of the treasury.

Lord Henry Petty (afterwards marquis of Lansdowne), chancellor of the exchequer.

Earl Fitzwilliam, lord president.

Viscount Sidmouth (late M. Addington), privy seal.

Charles James Fox, foreign secretary.

Earl Spencer, home secretary.

William Windham, colonial secretary.

Lord Erskine, lord high commissioner.

Sir Charles Grey (afterwards viscount Howick and earl Grey), admiralty.

Lord Minto, board of control.

Lord Auckland, board of trade.

Lord Moira, master-general of the ordnance.

R. B. Sheridan, treasurer of the navy.

Richard Fitzpatrick, &c.

Lord Eldon (lord chief justice) had a seat in the cabinet.

Gresham College (London), established by Sir Thomas Gresham in 1575, founder of the Royal Exchange. He left a portion of his property in trust to the city and the Mercers' company to endow this college for lectures in divinity, astronomy, music, geometry, civil law, physic, and rhetoric; he died on 21 Nov. 1579. The lectures commenced in Gresham's house, near Broad-street, June, 1597 (where the founders of the Royal Society first met in 1645). The buildings were pulled down in 1758, and the Excise office erected on its site, the property having been acquired by the crown for an annuity of 500£. The lectures were then read in a room over the Excise building. In 1848 the buildings were burned down, and the college acquired a valuable collection of books and pictures. Bequeathed by Mrs. Hollier. Changes respecting the lectures were advocated in 1875, and some made in 1876.

The amalgamation of the university teaching extension society advocated by Mr. Goschen, 15 Oct. 1833.

The proposal to make the college a teaching university for London was referred to a royal commission, March, Earl Cowper, chairman; first meeting, see London University, 1854. 30 June, 1852.

Sir Evelyn Wood opens the new Gresham school building (cost 40,000£) at Holt, Norfolk, 30 Sept. 1893.

Gretna Green (Dumfries, S. Scotland, near the border). Here runaway marriages were contracted for many years, as Scots law ruled that an acknowledgment before witnesses made a legal marriage. John Paisley, a tobacco dealer, and married a blacksmith, who officiated from 1760, died in 1814. His first residence was at Megg's hill, on the common or green betwixt Gretta and Springfield, to the last of which villages he removed in 1782. A man named Elliot was afterwards the principal officiating person. The general assembly, in 1826, in vain attempted to suppress this system; but an act of parliament, passed in 1826, made these marriages illegal after that year, unless one of the persons married had lived in Scotland 21 days.

Grey Administration succeeded the Wellington administration, which resigned 16 Nov. 1850. It carried the Parliamentary and Corporation Reform acts (which see), and terminated 9 July, 1834.

Earl Grey, first lord of the treasury.

* Born 13 March, 1764; M. P., 1786; first lord of the admiralty and afterwards foreign secretary in 1806; resigned in 1808 on account of his favourable Roman catholic emancipation; died July, 1845.
GRIQUALAND, West and East, two districts in British South Africa, containing diamond fields. The first diamond was discovered in West Griqualand in March, 1867, and caused a great influx of immigrants from all nations, ancient and modern, to seek their fortunes of these settlements. Diamonds value $12,000,000, found there between 1871 and 1880; about $15,000,000, between 1883 and 1887: 3,359,994, in 1902. The district annexed to Cape Colony 27 Oct. 1871, incorporated with it in 1880. Kimberley, the capital, was founded and named after Lord Kimberley (then col. sec., died 8 April, 1872) in 1871; for its title defence against the Boers, 15 Oct. 1899-19 Feb. 1900, see South African War. Population in 1890, about 6,000 Europeans and 10,000 natives. GRIQUALAND East, between the Katirief border and Southern Natal, was annexed to Cape Colony in 1875; population in 1888, 98,000. By a tremendous explosion of stored-dynamite near Kimberley, only two men were killed. Jan. 1884. Kimberley was the site of the South African and International exhibition, opened by sir H. H. Bux, 2 Sept., not financially successful; closed 8 Dec. 1892. Col. Kekewich, the defender of Kimberley, 15 Oct. 1899-19 Feb., 1900, presented with a sword of honour, &c., 19 July, 1902; visit of Mr. Chamberlain, 29-31 Jan. 1903. Duke and duchess of Connaught accorded a public welcome to Kimberley. 27 Jan. 1905.

GRIONS, a Swiss canton; see Cabdce. It was overruled by the French in 1798 and 1799. The ancient league was abolished, and the Grisons became a member of the Helvetian confederation, 19 Feb. 1803.

GRISSELL CASE, see Parliament, 1879-80.

GRIST-TAX (imposta sul macinato). Principle of the tax adopted by the Italian parliament, 1 April, 1868.

GROAT, from the Dutch groot, value of fourpence, was the largest silver coin in England until after 1531. Fourpenny pieces were coined in 1836 to the value of 70,884½; in 1837, 160,038½; discontinued since 1839.

GROCERS: anciently meant "ingrossers or monopolisers," as appears by a statute 36 Edw. III. 1393: "Let merchants henceforward vender no merchanteries or de merchandises vendables." The Grocers' company, one of the twelve chief companies of London, was established in 1342, and incorporated in 1429.

The Grocers' and Shopkeepers' Licensing acts, passed in 1862 and 1891, authorise the sale by them of wine, spirits, and beer, in bottles; (No. 2 Ireland) act passed 30 July, 1872.

GROCHOW, near Praga, a suburb of Warsaw. Here took place a desperate conflict between the Poles and Russians, 20 Feb. 1831. The Poles remaining masters of the field of battle. The Russians shortly after retreated, having been foiled in their attempt to take Warsaw. They are said to have lost 7,000 men, and the Poles 2,000; see also Poland, 1891.

GROG, see term for rum and water, derived its name from admiral Edw. Vernon, who wore program breeches, and was hence called "Old Grog." About 1745, he ordered his sailors to dilute their rum with water.

* He did great service in the West Indies, by taking Porto-Bello, Chacor, &c.; but his disagreement with the commander of the land forces, the expedition against Cartagena, in 1741, is said to have failed. He was dismissed the service for writing two pamphlets attacking the admiralty; he died 30 Oct. 1757.

GUERREES (from the Arabic Kafir, unbeliever), a name given to the descendants of the fire-worshippers of Persia by their Arab conquerors, in the 7th century. They are now represented by the Parsies of Bombay, whether they migrated, see Parsies.

GUERPHIC ORDER of knighthood was instituted for Hanover by the prince regent, afterwards George IV., 12 Aug. 1815.

GUEPHS and GHIBELINES, names given to the papal and imperial factions who destroyed the peace of Italy from the 12th to the end of the 13th century (the invasion of Charles VIII. of France in 1495). The origin of the names is ascribed to the contest for the imperial crown between Conrad of Hohenstaufen, duke of Swabia, lord of Wiblingen (later, Ghildelin), and Henry, nephew of Welf, or Guelf, duke of Bavaria, in 1138. The former was successful; but the popes and several Italian cities took the side of his rival. The Guelf and the Ghilde are said to have used as war-cries in 1140, at a battle before Weinsberg, in Wurttemberg, when Guelf of Bavaria was defeated by the emperor Conrad IV., who came to help the rival duke Leopold.* The Ghideles were almost totally expelled from Italy in 1267, when Conradin, the last son of Hohenstaufen, was beheaded by Charles of Anjou. Guelf (of uncertain origin) is the popular name of the present royal family of England; see Brunswick.

The GUILHE Exhibition of pictures and objects of interest connected with the Royal House of Guelph, was opened in the New Gallery, Recent street, 31 Dec. 1857; closed, 5 April, 1858. The queen contributed greatly to the exhibition, and gave it its name. Guelf Fund, see under Cumberland.

GUERRILLA, Spanish, "a little war"; a term applied to the armed peasants who worried the French armies during the Peninsular war, 1808-14.

GUEUX (beggars), a name given by the comte de Bairmont to the 300 protestant deputies from the Low Countries, headed by Henri de Brederode and Louis of Nassau, who petitioned Margaret, governor of the Low Countries, to abolish the inquisition, 5 April, 1560. The deputies at once assumed the name as honourable, and immediately organised armed resistance to the government; see Holland.

GUIANA (N.E. coast of South America), discovered by Columbus in 1498, visited by the Spaniards in the 16th century; and explored by sir Walter Raleigh in 1596 and 1617. The French settlements here were formed in 1626-43; (protected post established under officers, 1815) and the Dutch, 1627-97. Demerara, Essequibo, and Berbice were ceded to Great Britain in 1814; see Demerara. Governor of British Guiana. John Scott, 1806; James Robert Longden, 1874; C. H. Kortright, 1876; Sir Henry T. Irving, 1882; Viscount Gormanstown, Dec. 1887; Sir C. Cameron Lees, April, 1883; Sir Augustus W. L. Henning, Dec. 1895; Sir Walter J. Soudail, Nov. 1897; Sir J. A. Swettenham, Sept. 1901; Sir F. M. Hodgson, July, 1904. Revenue, 1893, 505,865£; expenditure, 511,231£.; debt, £83,610; imports, 125,675; exports, 1,558,514£; gold produced, 349,560£.; revenue, 1898, 545,035£.; expenditure, 1898, 530,000£; debt, 1898, 1,838,047£.; exports, 2,104,176£.; gold produced, 2,455,530£. Area, 90,000 sq. m. Population, 1904, 301,000; 1910 (est.), 305,120 (Georgetown, 53,000; New Amsterdam, 14,900). See Venezuela, 1895; Brazil, 1904.

Mr. Kafmann discovered in the goldfields 633 valuable diamonds near Essequibo, 1871; Revolt in Dutch Guiana of the lower against the upper classes; much alarm, 13 May, 1891.

CENTURY of capture of colony from the Dutch, celebrated, 24 Apr., 1903.

Award of the king of Italy in the controversy between Great Britain and Brazil respecting the frontiers of British Guiana (see Brazil), announced 11 June, 1904.

GUIDE-BOOKS FOR travellers are an English invention. Paterson's "British Itinerary," appeared in 1776; the last edition in 1810; when it was superseded by railway guides. Galignani's "Picture of Paris," 1814. Murray's "Handbook for Travellers on the Continent," the parent of the series, appeared in 1816. The publication of Carl and Fritz Baedeker's foreign guide-books began in 1828 with a handbook for the Rhine in German-French. This was followed by German handbooks for other parts of the continent, which owed much to Murray's handbooks, and included much original matter.

GUIDES, a corps in the French army, especially charged with the protection of the person of the general, was formed by Bessières, under the direction of M. Bonaparte, who had been nearly carried off by the enemy, 30 May, 1793. Several squadrons of "guides" were formed in 1848, to guard the ministers. They formed a portion of the imperial guard till Sept. 1870. A regiment of the Indian Army terms the Guides.

GUITRENE, a French province, was part of the dominions of Henry II. in right of his wife Eleanor, 1152. Philip of France seized it in 1253, which led to war. It was alternately held by England and France till 1435, when John Talbot, earl of Shrewsbury, in vain attempted to retake it from the latter.
GUILDSHALL. (London) was built in 1411. When it was rebuilt (1669), after the great fire of 1666, no part of the ancient building remained, except the interior of the porch and the walls of the hall. The front was erected in 1789, and a new roof built, 1864-5. Beneath the west window are the colossal figures of Gog and Magog, said to represent a Saxon and an ancient Briton; replaced older ones, 1708; renewed, 1837. The hall can contain 15,000 persons. Here entertained the allied sovereigns in 1814, and Napoleon III., 19 April, 1855; and here the city industrial exhibition was held, 6 March, 1866, and the International Botanical banquet, 22 May, 1866. A memorial window, the gift of the cotton workers of Lancashire, to commemorate the munificence of the metropolis towards them in the famine of 1862-4, was uncovered, 15 July, 1868. The prince consort memorial window was unveiled in the presence of prince Arthur, 3 Nov. 1870. A library existed in the Guildhall in 1426, from which books were taken by the protector Somerset in the reign of Edward VI. A new library was founded, 2 June, 1824. This library is open to the public. The new handsome building in Holborn, from which it was opened by the lord chancellor Selborne, 5 Nov. 1872; see London. The law sittings which had been removed to the Royal law courts, were resumed in the Guildhall, 28 Oct. 1891, when the lord chief justice was received by the lord mayor; discontinued, Dec. 1894.

GUILDS. Associations of men of the same class or trade, formed for mutual aid and protection; in England, of Saxon origin, about the 5th century. In the middle ages there were religious, social, mercantile, and craft guilds. Some of the London lively companies were formed out of the merchant and craft guilds in the 13th century. See Companies. The guild of Corpus Christi, York, had 14,500 members when a return respecting these guilds was ordered to be made, 1428. The Early English Text Society published the "Ordnances" of more than 100 guilds, 1870. "The Guild Merchant," by Charles Cross, Ph.D., published in 1821, is a valuable work. The "Guild of Literature and Art" (including sir E. B. Lytton, C. Dickens, and others) founded an institution consisting of thirteen dwellings, retreats for artists, scholars, and men of letters, which were completed on 1 May, 1851. The renewal of religious guilds began in 1851, with that of St. Alban, which held its 21st anniversary 20 June, 1872. Guilds Inquiry Commission, see Companies.

GUILLOTINE, an instrument for causing instantaneous and painless death, named after its supposed inventor, a physician named Joseph Ignatius Guillotin. In 1866 M. Dubois, of Amiens, stated that the idea only was due to Guillotin, who at a meeting of the legislative assembly in 1789 expressed an opinion that capital punishment should be the same for all classes. Accordingly, at the request of the Directoire, M. Lalande, secretary of the "Académie de Chirurgie," submitted to it on 20 March, 1792, a mode of capital punishment, "sure, quick, and uniform," which he had invented. The first person executed by it was a highway robber named Pelletier, on 25 April; and Dangremont was its first political victim, 21 Aug. following. Guillotin died in 1814. The guillotine at Paris was burnt by the communist insurgents, 7 April, 1791. A similar instrument (called the Manoir) is said to have been used in Italy, at Halifac in England (see Halifac), and in Scotland, there called the Maiden and the Widow. See Ganging.

GUINEA, (S. W. coast of Africa), said to have been visited by the Genoese about 1291, and by the French in 1364. Portuguese settlements founded by prince Henry of Portugal; much gold found, 1441 et seq. Other European traders arrive; successfully repelled, with cruelty, by the Portuguese till the arrival of the Dutch, 1595. Sir John Hawkins, with adventurers, visits Guinea, carries off 300 negroes, whom he sells at Hispaniola, and returns home with a profitable cargo, 1593. Cape Coast Castle (which see) settled, 1619. Slave trade with America carried on by English companies, 1678, et seq. The Portuguese expelled by the Dutch, 1649. Cape Coast Castle seized by the Dutch; recovered by adm. Holmes, who takes the Dutch settlements, which are retained by Ruyter, who captures all the English settlements except Cape Coast Castle, 1669-73. The Dutch settlements declined during the war with Napoleon; all ceded to Great Britain; signed by treaty, Feb. 1872. War with Aschantes (which see), 1874 et seq. Gold Coast Colony (which see), formed 1724. French Guinea constituted a colony, 17 March, 1893.

GUINEA, English gold coin, so named from having been first coined of gold brought by the African company from the coast of Guinea in 1663, valued then at 20s.; but worth 30s. in 1695. Reduced at various times; in 1717 to 21s. In 1810 guineas were sold for 22s. 6d.; in 1810, for 27s. In 1811 an act was passed forbidding their exportation, and their sale at a price above the current value, 21s. The first guineas bore the impression of an elephant, having been coined of this African gold. Since the issue of sovereigns, 1 July, 1817, guineas have not been coined.

GUINEATE, BATTLES OF, 11 July, 1302, and 16 Aug. 1513. See Spurs.

GUISE, a French ducal family:—Claude de Lorraine, first duke, a brave warrior, favoured by Francis I., died 1540. April 1550; Francis, the great general, born 1519; assassinated, 24 Feb. 1563; Henry, head of the Catholic league; born 1559; revenge his father's death; assassinated by order of Henry III., 21 Dec. 1588; Charles, first opposed, and then submitted to. Henry IV.; died 1660; Henry died without issue 1661.

GUN, see Artillery, Cannon, Fire-arms. — GUN-CLUB, for pigeon-shooting, founded by sir Gilbert East in 1862.
GUNPOWDER.

The invention of gunpowder is generally ascribed to Berthold or Michael Schwartz, a Cordeliers monk of Gushar, south of Brunswick, in Germany, about 1200. But many writers maintain that it was known much earlier in various parts of the world. Some say that the Chinese and Hindus possessed it centuries before. Its discovery, however, is only ascribed to Roger Bacon, in his treatise De Nullitate Magiae. He died in 1292 or 1294. Various substitutes for gunpowder have been invented, such as the white gunpowder of Mr. Horstey and Dr. Ehruhrdt, and gun-paper by Mr. Heschold. A new gunpowder by Mr. Newmayer, of Teya, was discussed in Nov. 1866. "Pellet gunpowder" was ordered to be used in gun-charges in the army, March, 1868. An act to amend the law concerning the making, keeping, and carriage of gunpowder, &c. was passed 28 Aug., 1860, and other acts since. See Bingham, 1870.

In May, 1872, a company was formed to manufacture Mr. R. Punshon's patent gunpowder, which was assayed to be very safe and controllable. The manufacture of the German "brown" or "cocoa" powder was set up at Chilworth in Surrey, 1886. See Chromoscope.

The use of gunpowder was denounced by Ariosto, 1516; by Jean Marot, 1522; and Ceraveses, 1604; termed "villinous sub-petre" by Shakespeare, about 1598.

English War Gunpowder: 75 parts nitrate of potash (sulphate of sulphur); 15 carbon. These proportions may be slightly varied.

W. Hunter, after a careful examination of the question, in 1847, thus states the result:—"July and August, 1846, may be safely assumed to be the time when the explosive force of gunpowder was first brought to bear on the military operations of the English nation."

Above 10 tons of gunpowder on board the Lottie Sleigh in the Mersey, exploded; much damage done in Liverpool and Birkenhead, but no lives lost, 16 Jan. 1864.

About 104,000 lbs. of gunpowder exploded at the Belvedere powder magazines at Plymouth, near Plumnwick, near Woolwich; 13 persons perished, and the shock was felt at 50 miles' distance, 1 Oct. 1864.

Searching inquiries were made into the circumstances, and new measures taken to prevent an explosion of powder issued in November; see Burton.

Mr. Gale, a blind gentleman of Plymouth, on 22 June, 1863, patented his method of rendering gunpowder insensitive to ignition, by using and W. R. Prentice, managers, about 2, were dreadfully wounded, and nearly the whole town was destroyed as if by a bombardment, 11 Aug. 1874.

The verdict at the inquest attributed the explosion to the outcome "addition of sulphuric acid to the gunpowder subsequent to its being the tests required by government," 6 Sept. 1874.

A coroner's jury, appointed in Sept. to consider the ignition of gunpowder, reported, in favour of both, with special regard to compressed gunpowder, 1 Dec. 1871.

Another report recommended this gunpowder to be stored wet, with drying apparatus near; and to be kept in lighter boxes, 25 July, 1872.

Mr. E. O. Brown, of the war department, Woolwich, discovers that wet gunpowder can be exploded by concentric Lance firing, 12 Feb. 1873. It is used as an explosive in mining, &c.

GUN-COTTON, made on a similar principle, was patented by Mr. W. A. Dixon, about 1866.

Corrosion Gunpowder, patented by Mr. R. Punshon, 1874.

A trial and result successful, near Faversham, 2 Feb. 1872. See loco.

Fire at the Cotton powder works near Faversham, estimated damage, ½, 9 March, 1874.

GUN POWDER ACT, passed 9 Aug. 1876; annual licence, 75. Licences issued; 60 (1876), 77, 77; 1877, 39, 73; 1878, 41, 72; 1879, 38, 70; 1884, 28; 1885, 25, 112, 113, 947. See under Gun Laws, 1883.

Explosion at Waltham abbey: 9 men killed and others injured, 13 Dec. 1853; inquest, open verdict. 1 Jan. 1855; a committee of inquiry examined some of the arrangements, and recommended additional precautions. 25 April: further changes recommended by a committee, reported 10 Sept. 1854: 4 men killed by an explosion in a nitroglycerine factory for cordite, 7 May, 1854: 3 men killed there, and 2 killed in the cordite factory at Cliffe, Kent, 15 Dec. 1855; explosion at Faversham, Kent: 1 death, several injured, 9 Nov. 1859.

GUNPOWDER PLOT, for springing a mine under the houses of parliament, and destroying the king, lords, and commons there assembled, was discovered on 4 Nov. 1605. It was projected by Robert Catesby early in 1604, and several Roman catholics of rank were in the plot. Guy Faux was detected in the vaults under the house of lords, hired for the purpose, preparing the train of gunpowder on the next day. Catesby and Catesby (of the family of Northumberland) were killed at Holbeach house, whether they had fled, 8 Nov.; and Guy Faux, sir Everard Digby, Rookwood, Winter, and others, were executed, 30, 31 Jan. 1606. Henry Garnet, a Jesuit, suffered as an accomplice, 3 May following. An anonymous letter sent to lord Montague led to the discovery. It contained the following words: "Though there be no appearance of any stir, yet I say they shall receive a terrible blow this parliament, and yet they shall not see who hurts them." The vault called Guy Faux cellar, in which the conspirators lodged the barrels of gunpowder, remained till 1855, when it was converted into offices. The vault was opened with much ceremony at the opening of each session of parliament.

GUNTER'S CHAIN, used in measuring land, invented by Edmund Gunter, in 1606.

GURNEY'S ACT, 31 & 32 Vict., c. 116 (1868), amends the law relating to larceny and embezzlement.

GUTTA PERCHA is procured from the sap of the isomandra gutta, a large forest tree, growing in the Malayan peninsula and on the islands near it. It is used in England by Drs. De Almeida and Montgomery, at the Society of Arts, in 1843. As a non-conductor of electricity it is invaluable in constructing submarine telegraphs, an application suggested by Faraday and Werner Siemens independently, 1847. 70,176 cwt. were imported into the United Kingdom in 1860; in 1890, 126,059 cwt.; in 1905, 31,928 cwt.

GUY'S HOSPITAL (London). Thomas Guy, a wealthy bookseller, after bestowing large sums on St. Thomas's, determined to found a new hospital. At the age of seventy-six, in 1721, he commenced the present building, and lived to see it nearly completed. It cost him 18,793l. and, in addition, he endowed it with 210,396l. In 1829, 196,115l. were bequeathed to this hospital by Mr. Hunt, to provide accommodation for 100 additional patients.

Income much reduced by agricultural depression; 1854; a committee of inquiry examined some of the arrangements, and recommended additional precautions. 25 April; further changes recommended by a committee, reported 10 Sept. 1854: 4 men killed by an explosion in a nitroglycerine factory for cordite, 7 May, 1854: 3 men killed there, and 2 killed in the cordite factory at Cliffe, Kent, 15 Dec. 1855; explosion at Faversham, Kent: 1 death, several injured, 9 Nov. 1859.

GUY'S HOSPITAL, London: Robert L. Raphael gave 20,000 to build a "Nurses' Home," Jan. 1898 (he died 1 May, 1905).

GUZERAT, a state in India, founded by Mahmood the Gauzevide, about 1200, conquered by Akbar in 1572; became subject to the Mahrattas 1732 or 1752. At the battle of Guzerat, near the Chenab, in the Punjab, 21 Feb. 1849, lord Gough totally defeated the Sikhs and captured the town of Guzerat.

GWALIOR, an ancient state in Central India, occupied by the Mahrattas; since 1803, under British protection. Scindia, the maharajah, remained faithful during the revolt of 1857; visit of the prince of Wales, 31 Jan. 1876. His present of carved stone work of a gate, arrived in London in the autumn of 1884. Population, 1881, 1,415,857; 1891, 1,787,774; 1901, 2,913,000.

The ancient citadel was taken by major Popham in the Mahratta war in 1752; seized by the rebels during the Indian mutiny, 15 June; and retaken by sir Hugh Ross, 13 June, 1858. Surrendered to the maharajah by lordholburn, the viceroy, 2 Dec. 1858, for 12 lakhs of rupees; actually surrendered, 10 March, 1858. The maharajah Bhajercat Rao Scindia, aged 51, died 27 June, 1858. Successor by his son, a boy, with a regency. Investiture of the young maharajah with full powers, 15 Dec. 1858.

Visit of the duke and duchess of connaught, Jan. 1902. Visit of the prince of Wales during his Indian tour, Feb. 1906.

GYMNASIUM, a place where the Greeks performed public exercises, and where philosophers, poets, and rhetoricians repeated their compositions. In wrestling and boxing the athletes were often naked (gymnai), whence the name. A London gymnastic society, formed in 1826, did not flourish.

In 1862, M. Ravenstein set up another gymnastic association. The German gymnastic Institution, in St. Pancras-road, London, was opened on 29 Jan. 1865, and a large and perfect gymnasium at Liverpool was inaugurated by lord Stanley, 2 Nov. 1865. A London athletic club existed in Nov. 1866. Since then gymnastics have been much cultivated. An international athletic congress opened in Paris, 16 June, 1894.

International competition at Belfast, won by England with 243 marks. 27 April, 1896.

International gymnastic championship, between Birmingham Baldwin and Cartegne Bonnemine, final tie; Birmingham wins by 356 to 359 points.

The Scotsmen create a new world's record on the high jump, scoring 42 points against a former record of 23.

30 Mar. 1897. Individual Heptathlon, A. Brudia, Italy, 351 points.

16 July, 1897.

GYMNOSOPHIST, a set of naked philosophers in India. Alexander (about 324 B.C.) was astonished at the sight of men who seemed to despise bodily pain, and endured tortures without a groan. Pliny.

GYPSIES, GIPSIES, OR EGYPTIANS (French, Bouhemins; Italian, Zingari; Spanish, Gitanos; German, Zigeuner); vagrants, supposed to be descendants of low-caste Hindoes expelled by Timour, about 1398. They appeared in Germany and Italy early in the 15th century, and in France in 1427. In England an act was made against their itinerancy, in 1530; and in the reign of Charles I. thirteen persons were executed at one assizes for having associated with gypsies for about a month.
The gypsy settlement at Norwood was broken up, and they were treated as vagrants, May, 1797. There were in Spain alone, previously to 1800, more than 120,000 gypsies, and many communities of them yet exist in England. Notwithstanding their intercourse with other nations, their manners, customs, visage, and appearance are almost wholly unchanged, and their pretended knowledge of futurity gives them power over the superstitious.

Esther Faux was crowned queen of the gypsies at Blyth, on 18 Nov. 1860. The Bible has been translated into gypsy dialects. Gypsy parliaments are occasionally held. George Smith, king of the gypsies, Falconhall, Edinburgh, protested against the Movable Dwellings bill, 10 Jan. 1891. The Gypsy Lore society, founded in 1888, had 70 members in 1891, and published a journal.

George Borrow fraternised with the gypsies, and wrote several works describing his adventures, especially "The Zincali" (1841); "The Bible in Spain" (1842); "Lavengro" (1850); and a "Dictionary of the Gypsy Language" (1874). He was born in 1803, and died in Aug. 1881.

GYROSCOPE (from gyrere, to revolve), the name of a rotatory apparatus invented by Fessel of Cologne (1852), and improved by professor Wheatstone and M. Foucault of Paris. It is similar in principle to the rotatory apparatus of Bohnenberger of Tübingen (born 1765, died 1831).—The gyroscope, by exhibiting the combined effects of the centrifugal and centripetal forces, and of the cessation of either, illustrates the great law of gravitation.

Tested when fitted to submarines and ships during...1903

The gyroscope applied to a car designed to run on a single track, by Mr. Louis Brennan. A successful demonstration was carried out at the Brennan factory (New Brompton) with a car 40 ft. in length, 22 tons in weight, and a capacity of 10-15 tons. The 2 gyroscopes weighed 13 tons each; diameter, 3 ft. 6 in., and made 3,500 revolutions per minute. 10 Nov. 1909.
HAARLEM, an ancient town in Holland, once the residence of the counts, was taken by the duke of Alva, in July, 1573, after a siege of seven months. He violated the capitulation by butcher ing half the inhabitants. The lake was drained, 1839-51. Population, 1890, 65,189; 1910 (est.), 74,125.

HABEAS CORPUS. The subjects' Writ of Right, passed "for the better securing the liberty of the subject," 31 Charles II. c. 2. 27 May, 1679. If any person be imprisoned by the order of any court, or of the queen herself, he may have a writ of habeas corpus, to bring him before the court of queen's bench or common pleas, which shall determine whether his commital be just. This act (founded on the old common law) is next in importance to Magna Charta. The Habeas Corpus act can be suspended by parliament for a specified time when the emergency is extreme. In such a case the nation parts with a portion of its liberty to secure its own permanent welfare, and suspected persons may then be arrested without cause or purpose being assigned. Blackstone.

Act suspended for a short time in 1689, 1696, 1700
Suspended for Scots' rebellion 1715 6
Suspended for twelve months 1722
Suspended for Scots' rebellion in 1745-6
Suspended for American war 1777-9
Again by Mr. Pitt, owing to French revolution 1794
Suspended in Ireland, on account of the great rebellion 1798
Suspended in England, 23 Aug. 1799; and 19 April, 1801
Again, on account of Irish insurrection 1803
Again, owing to alleged secret meetings (see Green Bay) 29 Mar. 1817
Bill to restore the Habeas Corpus brought into parliament 28 Jan. 1818
Suspended in Ireland (insurrection) 24 July, 1843
Restored there 1 March, 1849
Suspended again (see Fenians), 17 Feb. 1865; 26 Feb. and 31 May, 1867; and 28 Feb. 1868 till 25 March, 1869, and virtually in 1881.

The constitution of the United States provides that "the privilege of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when, in cases of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require it;" but does not specify the department of the government having the power of suspension. A series of contests on this subject between the legal and military authorities began in Maryland, May, 1861.

In consequence of the affair of John Anderson (see Slavery in England, note), an act passed 1862, enacting that no writ of Habeas Corpus should issue out of England into any colony, &c., having a court with authority to grant such writ.

HABITUAL CRIMINALS ACT, for the more effectual prevention of crime, giving powers for the apprehension of habitual criminals on suspicion, passed 11 Aug. 1859.

A black book, printed at Brixton prison, contained the names and aliases of 12,164 criminals, selected from 175,601 entered on the register, 1859-76.

HACKNEY, a parish X.E. of London; by the division of the Tower Hamlets, was made a metropolitan borough by the Reform act, 15 Aug., 1867. Two members were elected. The election 4 Feb. 1876, void, through neglect of officers. Returns three members by the act of 1885. Constituted a municipal borough of London government act 1899 (10 aldermen, 60 councillors). Population, 1901, 226,000.

HACKNEY COACHES, probably from the French cochere-haquinage, a vehicle with a hired horse, haquinage. Their supposed origin in Hackney, near London, is a vulgar error; see Cabriolets, and Omnibuses.

Four were set up in London by a capt. Bailey; their number soon increased 1825.
They were limited by the star-chamber in 1633; restricted in 1659 and in 1652.
The number was raised to 400, in 1662; to 700, in 1694; to 800, in 1715; to 1000, in 1717; to 1100, in 1814; and finally, to 1300, in 1815.
One-horse hackney carriages (hencewards cabriolets) permitted to be licensed 1821.
All restriction as to number ceased, by 2 Will. IV.
They numbered over 66,000, after 1835.

Lost and found office for the recovery of property left in hackney coachses, established by act 53 Geo. III.

All public vehicles to be regulated by the act 16 & 17 Vict. c. 33, 1847, by which they are placed under the control of the commissioners of police.

June and Aug. 1853 by the Metropolitan Carriages act, passed 12 Aug. 1863, various restrictions respecting the amount of fare, &c., were removed, commencing 1 Jan. 1870.
Further regulations for eabs issued by the home secretary.

"Hackney carriages, tables of distances," published 1890.

HAFSFJORD (Norway). Here Harold Har fager, in a sea-fight, finally defeated his enemies; and consolidated his kingdom, 872. A millenary festival was held throughout Norway, and a monument to his memory at Haugesund, inaugurated by Prince Oscar of Sweden, 18 July, 1872.

HAGUE, capital of the kingdom of Holland, once called the finest village in Europe; the place of meeting of the states-general, and residence of the former earls of Holland since 1250, when William II., built the palace here. Population in 1887, 149,447; in 1890, 160,531; in 1897, 191,530; 1900, 212,211; 1910 (est.), 262,000.

HAMPDEN CLUBS, see Radicals, and Chartist.

HAMPSHIRE, N.W. of London, originally a chappelry of Hendon, was made a parish after the Reformation. The ancient chapel was taken down 1745; and a church was consecrated, 8 Oct. 1747. A house on the heath, formerly the Upper Flask Inn, was once the place of resort of the Kit-cat club, where Steele, Addison, and others met to assemble. Hampstead is associated with many distinguished names in literature and art. An act authorising the Metropolitan Board of Works to purchase the heath from Sir John Maryon Wilson, bart., passed 29 June, 1871, and the heath was formally taken possession of by the Metropolitan Board of Works, 13 Jan. 1872, 45,000l. being paid. Hampstead made a municipal borough (6 aldermen, 42 councillors) by London government act, 1896. Hampstead returns one M.P. by act of 1885. Population, 1901, 81,415; 1911 (est.), 111,185.

Temporary small-pox hospital established 1871.

Charges of mismanagement against the officers; official inquiry (33 meetings, from 23 Sept. to 3 Nov.); inquiry respecting disappearance of a child, Elizabeth Bolline; medical officers exonerated from blame 1 Dec.

A small-pox hospital erected here by Metropolitan District Asylum Board was much opposed, and led to litigation, see Trials, 1873; the house of lords on appeal decided against the inhabitants 24 March, 1874.

Finally the board agreed to buy the property affected for 20,000l. 1 Dec. 1874.

The Board of Works voted 153,000l. towards the purchase of "Parliament Hill" fields, about 250 acres, as an addition to the heath; the parishes of Hampstead and St. Pancras having voted 50,000l. 1877.

50,000l. given by the Charity Commissioners and above 46,000l. subscribed by the public; final meeting of the Hampstead Heath Extension Committee, 23 March, 1881. The duke of Sutherland, chairman, and Mr. Shaw Lefevre, vice-chairman.

The Baroness de Hirsch gave 70,000L. to endow Tudor houses as a convivental house; she died 2 April, 1899

Princess Christian lays the first stone of new hospital buildings.

HAMPION COURT PALACE (Middlesex), built by cardinal Wolsey on the site of the manor-house of the knights-hospitallers, and in 1525 presented to Henry VIII.; perhaps the most splendid offering ever made by a subject to a sovereign. Here Edward VI. was born, 12 Oct. 1537; here his mother, Jane Seymour, died, 24 Oct. following; and here Mary, Elizabeth, Charles, and others of our sovereigns resided. Much was pulled down, and the grand inner court built by William III. of England, which contained the gardens, consisting of 19 acres, were laid out. The vine was planted 1769. (See Grapes.) Here was held, 14, 16, 18 Jan. 1604, the Conference between the Puritans and the Established church clergy, which led to a new translation of the Bible; see Conference. An alarming fire in apartments over the picture gallery extinguished; and a considerable portion was destroyed, 14 Dec. 1882.

By another fire many apartments were destroyed and injured, 15 Nov. 1885; estimated damage, 20,000L.

Alterations and changes in the palace; pictures removed to Kensington palace; Queen Anne's dressing-room opened to the public, 15 July, 1895; Indian troops unchambered here, summer, last 15 Aug. 1892.

Visit of the German municipal representatives, 17 May, 1896.

HANAPER OFFICE (of the court of chancery), where writs relating to the business of the subject, and their returns, were anciently kept in hanaperio (in a wicker hamper); and those relating to the crown, in parata bana (a little bag). Hence the names Hanaper and Petty Bag Office.

The office was abolished in 1842.

HANAU (Hesse-Cassel), incorporated 1303. Here a division of the combined armies of Austria and Bavaria, of 30,000 men, under general Wrede, encountered the French, 70,000 strong, under Napoleon I., on their retreat from Leipzig, 30 Oct., 1813. Both armies suffered severely, but the allies most, and were compelled to retire. The county of Hanau was made a principality in 1803; seized by the French in 1806; incorporated with the duchy of Frankfort in 1809; restored to Hesse in 1813; which was annexed to Prussia in 1866.

HANDEL'S COMMEMORATIONS. The first was held in Westminster abbey, 26 May, 1784; king George III. and queen Charlotte, and above 2000 persons being present. The band contained 208 vocal and 215 instrumental performers, and there were present of these successive days were 13,546. These concerts were repeated in 1785, 1786, 1787, and 1791.

Second great commemoration, in the presence of King William IV. and queen Adelaide, when there were 744 performers, 24, 25, 26 June, and 1 July, 1834.

Great Hanover Festival at the Crystal Palace on the centenary of his death, projected by the Sacred Harmony Society. Grand Rehearsal at the Crystal Palace, 15, 17, 19 June, 1875, and 2 July, 1888.

Performances: Messiah, 20 June; Selections, 22 June; Israel in Egypt, 24 June, when the prince-consort, the king of the Belgians, and 28,672 persons were present. There were 276 vocal and 391 instrumental performers, and the performance was highly successful. The receipts amounted to about 25,000L., from which there were deducted 18,000L. for expenses; of the residue (15,000L.), two parts accrued to the Crystal Palace Company, and one part to the Sacred Harmony Society. Handel's birthday was observed by the prince-consort, and other interesting reliefs, were exhibited.

Handel festivals at the Crystal Palace: 4000 performers; highly successful: 23, 25, 27 June, 1884; again, 20, 26, 28, 30 June, 1885; frequently since.

HANDEL SOCIETIES; for publication of Handel's works —

Founded in London, 1843; first volume issued, 1844; society dissolved, 1848; work continued by Cranmer & Co., completed, 1855.

Founded at Leipzig, in 1856; publications began, 1858.

Handel and Haydn Society, Boston, U.S. for performances on the continent, 1854.

HANDBERCHIEFS, wrought and edged with gold, used to be worn in England by gentlemen in their hats, as favours from young ladies, the value of them being from five to twelve pence for each in the reign of Elizabeth, 1558. Stowe's Choron. Paisley handkerchiefs were first made in 1743.

HANDS, imposition of, was performed by Moses in setting apart his successor Joshua (Num. xxvii. 23); in reception into the church, and in ordination, by the apostles (Acts viii. 17; 1 Tim. iv. 14).

HANGING, DRAWING, AND QUARTERING, said to have been first inflicted upon William Marise, a pirate, a nobleman's son, 25 Hen. III., 1241. Five gentlemen attached to the duke of Gloucester were arraigned and condemned for treason, and at the place of execution were hanged, cut down alive instantly, stripped naked, and their bodies marked for quartering, and then pardoned, 25 Hen. IV. 1447. Stowe. The Cato-street conspirators (which see) were beheaded after death by hanging, 1 May, 1820. Hanging in chains (pirates, murderers, and others), an old custom, was abolished in 1834; see Death.

HANGING BAY (Finland). On 5 June, 1855, a boat commanded by lieut. Geneste left the British steamer Cosswell with a flag of truce to land some Russian prisoners. They were fired on by a body of Cossacks, five were killed, several wounded, and the rest made prisoners. The Russian account, asserting the irregularity to have been on the side of the English, was not substantiated.

HANOVER (N. W. Germany), successively an electorate, and a kingdom, chiefly composed of territories which once belonged to the dukes of Brunswick (which see). Population of the province in 1890, 1,820,000; in 1875, 2,017,303; in 1885, 2,172,702; 1890, 2,200,491; 1895, 2,290,039; 1905, 2,356,597; 1910, 2,423,532; 1915, 2,503,281; 1920, 2,580,039; 1925, 2,650,525; 1930, 2,720,000. It was annexed to Prussia (which see) at the close of the war, 20 Sept. 1866; see Geldsp.

ELECTORS,

1692. Ernest-Augustus, youngest son of George, that son of William, duke of Brunswick-Luneburg, who obtained by lot the right to marry (see Brunswick). He became bishop of Osnaburg in 1692, and in 1706 inherited the possessions of his uncle John, duke of Calenberg; created Elector of Hanover in 1702.
[He married, in 1695, the princess Sophia, daughter of Frederick, elector palatine, and of Elizabeth, the daughter of James I. of England. In 1701 he was created next heir to the British crown, after William III., Anne, and their descendants.]

1727. George-Augustus, his son (George II. of England), 11 June, KINGS,

1814. George-William-Frederick (the preceding sovereign), first king of Hanover, 12 Oct.
1820. George-Augustus-Frederick, his son (George IV. of England), 29 Jan.

1830. William-Henry, his brother (William IV. of England), 26 June; died, 20 June, 1837
[Hanover separated from the crown of Great Britain.]

1837. Ernest-Augustus, duke of Cumberland, brother to William IV. of England, on whose death he succeeded (as a distinct inheritance) to the throne of Hanover, 20 June.

HANSARD'S DEBATES and UNION, see Reporting.

HANSE TOWNS. The Hanseatic league (from Hanau, a-sociation), formed by port towns in Germany against the pirates of the Swedes and Danes; began about 1140; the league signed 1241.
At first it consisted only of towns situate on the coasts of the Baltic sea, but in 1570 it was composed of sixty-six cities and forty-four confederates. The league proclaimed war against Waldemar, king of Denmark, about the year 1348, and against Eric in 1428, with forty ships and 12,000 regular troops, besides seamen. On this several princes ordered the merchants of their respective kingdoms to withdraw their effects. The Thirty Years' War in Germany (1618-48) broke up the strength of the association, and in 1630 the only towns retaining the name were Liebeck, Hamburg, and Bremen. The league suffered also by the rise of the commerce of the Low Countries in the 15th century. Their privileges by treaty in England were abolished by Elizabeth in 1578.

HANSON, see Cabriolts.

HANWELL LUNATIC ASYLUM, for Middlesex, established 1831.

HAPSBURG (HABSBURG or HABICHTS-BURG), HOUSE OF, the family from which the imperial house of Austria sprang in the 11th century, Werner being the first named count of Habsburg, 1096. Hapsburg was an ancient castle of Switzerland, on a lofty eminence near Schinznach. Rudolph, count of Hapsburg, became archduke of Austria, and emperor of Germany, 1273; see Austria, and Germany.

HARBOURS, England has many fine natural harbours, the Thames (harbour, dock, and depot), Portsmouth, Plymouth, &c. Acts for the improvement of harbours, &c., were passed in 1847, 1861, and 1862.

HARES AND RABBITS ACT. See Game.

HARFLEUR, seaport, N.W. France, taken by Henry V., 22 Sept. 1415.

HARLAW (Aberdeenshire), the site of a desperate indemnitive battle between the earl of Mar, with the royal army, and Donald, the lord of the Isles, who aimed at independence, 23 July, 1111. This conflict was very disastrous to the nobility, some houses losing all their males.

HARLEIAN LIBRARY, containing 7000 manuscripts, besides rare printed books, collected by Robert Harle, afterwards earl of Oxford and Mortimer, 1705, et seq., is now in the British Museum. A large portion of his life and wealth was spent on the collection. He died 21 May, 1724. The Harleian Miscellany, a selection from the MSS. and Tracts of his library, was published in 1744 and 1748. See Harleian Society, founded in 1860 for the publication of heraldic visitations, &c.

HARLEY ADMINISTRATION, see Oxford.

HARLEY STREET, London, W. At No. 139, the house inhabited by Mr. Henriques, the de-HARMONICA, or musical glasses (tuned by regulating the amount of water, and played by a moistened finger on the rim), were played on by Gluck in London, 23 April, 1749; "arranged" by Prince de Conti Delaval, and improved by Dr. Franklin in 1760; Mozart, Beethoven, and others composed for this instrument: see Copophone. "Harmonicon," an excellent musical periodical, edited by W. Ayrton, Jan. 1825—Sept. 1853.

HARMONICORD, a keyed instrument, in which sounds are produced by friction, invented by Th. Kaulthoff in 1810.

HARMONISTS, a sect, founded in Württemberg by George and Frederick Rapp, about 1780. Not much is known of their tenets, but they held their property in common, and considered marriage a civil contract. They emigrated to America, and built New Harmony in Indiana in 1815. Robert Owen purchased this town about 1825; but failed in his scheme of establishing a "social" community and returned to England: see Socialists. The Harmonists removed to Pittsburg in Pennsylvania in 1822.

HARMONIUM, a keyed instrument, resembling the accordion, the tones being generated by the action of wind upon metallic reeds. The Chinese were well acquainted with the effects produced by vibrating tongues of metal. M. Biot stated, in 1810, that they were used musically by M. Grenié; and in 1827-29, free reed stops were employed in organs at Rouen and Paris. The best known harmoniums in England are those of Alexandre and Deblain, the latter claiming to be the original maker of the French instrument. In 1841, Mr. W. E. Evans, of Cheltenham, produced his English harmonium, then termed the Organ-Harmonium, and by successive improvements he produced a fine instrument, with disposition quality, and great rapidity of sound, without loss of power. Davies' melody attachment patented 1863.

HARMONY, the combination of musical notes of different pitch, appears not to have been practised by the Greeks. Huchard, a Flemish monk, published combinations in his "Echirihon Musiz," 4th century. Harmony greatly promoted by Palestina, and especially by Monteverdi. Jean de Mains wrote "Ars Contrapunti" in 14th century. Francis of Cologne described "devent," 1600. Beethoven greatly elevated the range of harmonic bases.

HARNESS, the leather and the beaten dressings used for horses to draw them, are said to have been the invention of Erchehthinus of Athens, who was made a constellation after his death, under the name of Botaeus (Greek for ploughman), about 1487 B.C.

HARPO, Cry of (Clameur de Haro), traditionally derived from Bourbon, or Sainte-Normandy, ancestor of our Norman princes of England. He was administered justice so well, that injured persons uttered the cry "Ha Ro! Ha Ro! A mon aide, mon prince, on me fat tout!" The cry was raised in a church in Jersey in 1859.

HARP. Invented by Jubal, 3875 B.C. (Gen. iv. 21). David played the harp before Saul, 1063 B.C. (1 Sam. xvi. 23.) The Cimbr. or English Saxons, had this instrument. The celebrated Welsh harp was strong with gut; and the Irish harp, like the more ancient harps, with wire. Erard's improved harps were first patented in 1765.

One of the most ancient harps existing is that of Brian Borome, monarch of Ireland; it was given by his son Domhgh in hope John XVIII. together with the crown and other regalia of his father, in order to obtain absolution for the murder of his brother Tog. Adrian IX. alleged this as being one of his principal titles to the kingdom of Ireland in his bull transferring it to Henry II. This harp was given by Leo X. to Henry VIII., who presented it to the first earl of Chichester; it then came into possession of the family of Erchurh, next to that of Mac Mahon of Cenagh, county of Clare; afterwards into that of Mac Namara of Limerick; and was at last deposited by the right hon. William Conyngham in the College Museum, Dublin, in 1782. The cither or harp, fitted like the pianoforte with a keyboard, and played like the pianoforte, was introduced into Brussels and Antwerp by Mollie Drezet, and played on by her at Prince's Hall, London, 13 March, 1728.

HARPER'S FERRY (Virginia), see United States, 1859-62.

HARPSICHORD, see Pianoforte, note.

HARRISON'S TIME-PIECE, made by John Harrison, of Foulby, near Pontefract. In 1714, the government offered rewards for methods of determining the longitude at sea; to obviate the irregularities in the rate of clocks by variations of temperature, Harrison invented the method of compensation, before 1720. He came to London, and produced his first time-piece in 1725; his second in 1739; his third in 1758; and his fourth, which procured him the reward of 20,000$, offered by the Board of Longitude, a few years after. He obtained 10,000$, of his reward in 1764, and other sums, more than 24,000$, in all, for further improvements in following years. He was born, May, 1693, and died in 1776.

In the patent museum at South Kensington is an eight-day clock made by Harrison in 1755. It strikes the hour, indicates the day of the month, and with one exception (the escapement) its wheels are entirely made of wood.

HARROGATE (Yorkshire). The first or old spa in Knaresborough forest was discovered by cap. Slingsby in 1751: a dome was erected over the well by Lord Roskell in 1780. The other chief healing springs are the Alum well and the Tovit spa. Sulphurous well discovered 1783. Theatre was erected 1788. Bath hospital erected by subscription 1825. Kursaal (cost 40,000£) opened 27 May, 1893. Pop. 1901, 28,253.

HARROW-ON-THE-HILL SCHOOL (Middlesex), founded and endowed by John Lyon in 1571. To encourage archery, the founder instituted a prize of a silver arrow to be shot for annually on the 4th of August; but the custom has been abolished. Lord Palmerston, sir R. Peel, the statesman, and Lord Byron, the poet, were educated here. The school building suffered by fire, 22 Oct. 1838. The school arrangements were modified by the public schools act, 1808. Charles II. called Harrow "the visible church." Fire, 8, 9 Feb. 1890.

Visit of the king and queen to celebrate the opening of the new harrow. The first acres, ced. of land, were given by the school; the king unfurls a flag at the boundary . . . 30 June, 1905 Fire at one of the houses—burnt 3,000£. 3 April, 1908.

HARLEPOOL. E. Durham, an ancient seaport, said to have been burnt by the Danes, 800, fortified by the Bruce's and others, and chartered by John. The foundation of West Hartlepool, with its harbour, docks, churches, &c., is due to the sagacity, skill, and energy of Mr. Ralph Ward Jackson. The work began in 1841, and the harbour was opened 1 June, 1847. The population, about 400 in 1843, was 6,698 in 1888, and 22,723 in 1901. West Hartlepool, 1891, 62,614.

HARTLEP COAL MINE (Northumberland). On 16 Jan. 1862, one of the iron beams, about 20 tons weight, at the mouth of the ventilating shaft, broke and fell, destroying the bell, and divided the shaft into two sections. The blast was divided between the two sections and sufficient timber to kill five men who were ascending the shaft, and buried alive 202 persons, men and boys. Several days elapsed before the bodies could be removed. Much sympathy was shown by Queen Victoria and the public, and about 70,000l. were collected for the bereaved families. The coroner's verdict asserted the necessity of two shafts to coal mines, and recommended that the beams of colliery engines should be of malleable instead of cast iron.

HARTWELL (Buckinghamshire), the retreat of Louis XVIII., king of France, 1807-14. He landed in England at Yarmouth, 6 Oct. 1807, took up his residence at Godfield-hall, in Essex, and afterwards came to Hartwell, as the count de Lille. His consort died here in 1810. On his restoration, he embarked at Dover for France, 24 April, 1814. See France.

HARUSPICES, priests or soothsayers, of Etruscan origin, who foretold events from observing entrails of animals. They were introduced to Rome by Romulus (about 750 B.C.), and abolished by Constantine, A.D. 337, at which time they were seventy in number.

HARVARD COLLEGE, Cambridge (Massachusetts, North America), was founded by the general court at Boston, on 28 Oct. 1636. It derived its name from John Harvard, of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, who bequeathed to it his library and 779l. in 1638. Present annual income now (1881) over 81,000l. Chiefly under the management of the state until 1865, when the government was vested in a board of 30 overseers. Among the university buildings is the Agassiz museum of comparative zoology, the Peabody museum of American archaeology, the memorial hall erected in honour of the alumni who fell in the Civil war, and the theatre. 250th anniversary of its foundation kept 6-8 Nov. 1886. 850,000l. given for the foundation of a museum of Sicilian antiquities, 1860.

HARVEIAN ORATION. William Harvey bequeathed his property to the Royal College of Physicmen. The annual delivery of the oration began in 1636. See under Blood.

HARWICH, a sea-port, Essex, a Roman station, and the Saxon Harewe; chartered by Edw. 2nd; absorbed into Essex, 1885.

Near here Alfred defeated the Danish fleet. Parkston, the new port near Harwich, was constructed in 1882.

HASTINGS, a cinque-port, Sussex; said to owe its name to the Danish pirate Hasting, who built forts here, about 893; but Mr. Kemble thinks it was the seat of a Saxon tribe named Hastings. At Senlac, now Battle, near Hastings, more than 30,000 were slain in the conflict between Harold II., of England and William duke of Normandy, the former losing his life and kingdom, 14 Oct. 1066, his birthday. He and his two brothers were interred at Waltham abbey, Essex. The new town, St. Leonard's-on-sea, was begun in 1828. Population, 1881, 42,258; 1881, 52,340; 1901, 65,528.

New pier inaugurated by Earl Granville . Aug. 1872 New town hall closed by Mayor . 5 Sept. 1881 Prince of Wales opens the convictalse site home and Alexandra park . 26 June, 1882 Foundation of new harbour last by magistrates of Dover (work eventually discontinued) 16 June, 1897 Visit of the Norman society . 19 Aug. 1903

HATFIELD'S TRIAL. Warren Hastings, governor-general of India, was tried by the peers of Great Britain for high crimes and misdemeanours. Among other charges was his acceptance of a present of 100,000l. from the nabob of Oude; see Cluny, Treaty of. The trial occupied 145 days, and lasted seven years and three months; commencing 13 Feb. 1788, terminating in his acquittal, 23 April, 1795. Mr. Sheridan's speech on the impeachment excited great admiration.

Hastings was born in 1732; went to India as a writer in 1780; became governor-general of Bengal in 1772; of India, 1773; governed ably, but, it is said, unscrupulously and tyrannically, till he resigned in 1785. The expenses of his trial (70,000l.) were paid by the East India Company; and a pension was granted to him. He died a privy-councillor in 1818.

HATTLEY FIELD, see Shrewbury.

HATFIELD'S ATTEMPT. On 15 May, 1800, during a review in Hyde-park, a shot from an undiscovered hand was fired, which wounded a young gentleman who stood near king Geo. III. In the evening, when his majesty was at Drury-lane theatre, Hatfield fired a pistol at him. Hatfield was confined as a lunatic till his death, 23 Jan. 1841, aged 69 years.

HATHERLEY'S ACT. see Bankrupt.

HATS, first made by a Swiss at Paris, 1404. When Charles VII. made his triumphal entry into Rouen, in 1449, he wore a hat lined with red velvet, and surmounted with a rich plume of feathers. Henceforward, hats and caps, at least in France, began to take the place of capes and hoods. Humeott. Hats were first manufactured in England by Spaniards in 1510. Stour. Very high-crowned hats were worn by queen Elizabeth's courtiers; and high crowns were again introduced in 1753. A stamp-duty laid upon hats in 1764, and in 1790, was repealed in 1811. Silk hats began to supersede beaver about 1826. None allowed to sell any hat for above 20d. nor cap for above 28s. 6d. Henry VII. 1485. Every person above seven years of age to wear on Sundays and holidays, a cap of wool, knit, made, thickeened, and dressed in England by the order of the trade of capyers, under the forfeiture of three farthings for every day's neglect, 1571. Excepted: maidens, ballys, and gentwomens, and every lord, knight, and gentleman, of any rank of blood, and their dependants, and all persons having livery of worship, in any city, town, or place, and the wardens of London companies, 1571.

The study of their language and translations, advocated by the abp. of Canterbury, lord Aberdare, prof. Max Muller, and others in 1872. The work was begun by the rev. J. A. Robinson, member of the Church Missionary Society. Annual meetings held.

HAVANA, capital of Cuba, West Indies, founded by Velasquez, 1492; taken by lord Albermarle, 14 Aug. 1762; restored, 1763; the remains of Columbus were brought from St. Domingo and deposited in the Cathedral here, 1795; exhumered, in the presence of gen. Blanco and others, 20 Sept.; taken to Seville, mid Dec. 1808; deposited in a special mausoleum, 17 Nov. 1822. By an explosion of gunpowder here, 21 persons were killed, and about 150 injured, 1 May, 1890. American cruiser Maine (which see) blown up, 15 Feb. 1898.

HAVRE-DE-GRAÇE (N. W. France), was defended for the Huguenots by the English in 1682; who, however, were repulsed in 1688. It was besieged by Rodney, 6 to 9 July, 1758; by sir Richard Strachan, 25 May, 1758; and blockaded, 6 Sept. 1803. The attempts of the British to burn the shipping here failed, 7 Aug. 1803. The International Maritime Exhibition here opened, 1 June, 1858; another exhibition, 7 May, 1887. The volunteers visited Havre: began to shoot, 20 May; 59 British received prizes, 26 June, 1875. Population, 1861, 169,911; 1871, 130,143; 1891, 132,450. Great landslip of the cliff near Cap de la Hove, 5 deaths, 3 Sept. 1895.

HAWAI or OWHYIHEE, the chief of the 12 island-which constitute the territory of Hawaii, situated in the N. Pacific Ocean. The islands are said to have been discovered in 1512 by Gaetano, and were rediscovered by capt. Cook in 1778, who named them the Sandwich islands, after lord Sandwich, then the first lord of the admiralty. Capt. Cook was killed at Owhyhee by the natives 1779. King Kamehameha I., who died 1814, united the 12 island-into one monarchy, and under his successor, Kamehameha II., idolatry was abolished, 1819-20; the king and his queen visited England, and died in London 1824. In 1838, Kamehameha III. established a constitution, which included an assembly of nobles, and a representative council. The independence of the kingdom was guaranteed by the English and French governments in 1843. A more popular constitution was granted in 1857, but in 1863 a revolution broke out, and the queen Liholokalani was deposed, and a republic was proclaimed in 1864. Hawaii was formally annexed to the United States 1888, and became one of its territories in 1900. Population about 100,000, three-fourths of which are Japanese. Honolulu is the capital of the Hawaiian group; population about 30,000.

Eruption of the volcano Mauo Loa ceased, about 20 miles of lava, 2 Feb.; there have been frequent out-breaks of volcanoes on the island with occasional shocks of earthquake; earthquake shocks 5 May, 1887.

et seq.; 167 persons killed; violent eruption of Mauo Loa and Kilauea, 4 July, 1899. Japanese in Hawaii strongly protest against their exclusion from the United States by the Immigration bill, 20 Feb. 1897.

HAWKERS AND PEDLERS were first licensed in 1618. Licensing commissioners were appointed in 1810. The expense of licensing was reduced in 1801, and regulated by the Pedlars' act, 1871. Exemptions from charges on licenses granted by the Hawkers act, 1888.

History of the Haymarket theatre, by Mr. Cyril Maude, published ........ Oct. 1903

HAYTI or HAITI, Indian name of a West Indian island, discovered by Columbus in Dec. 1492, and named Hispaniola, and afterwards St. Domingo. Before the Spaniards fully conquered it, they are said to have destroyed, in battle or cold blood, three million of its inhabitants, including women and children, 1495. The island now comprises the Dominican republic (which see) in the east; and the republic of Hayti (area, 4,200 sq. miles) in the west. The population of Hayti in 1887 was about 550,000; 1901, about 1,264,440; 1910 (est.), 2,032,250; capital, Port-au-Prince, 1910 (est.), 100,000. Revenue, 1902, 4,391,108 dollars; expenditure, 7,333,376 dollars; debt, 3,984,145. Revenue, 1908, 2,700,000; expenditure, 7,408,512; debt, 5,181,830.

Faustin abdicates 15 Jan. 1859.

Gerfard takes oath as president of Hayti 23 Jan.

Spanish insurgents hold a declaration of formation with Spain signed 15 March, decree by the queen 20 May, 1856.

Insurrection against Spain in St. Domingo, 15 Aug. 1853.

A Spanish force sent; the insurgents generally defeated.

Great fire at Port-au-Prince; 669 houses destroyed, 23 Feb. 1856.

St. Domingo renounced by Spain, 3 May.

Military instruction under Salnave, against Ger- frard, 7 May; Cape Hayti seized 3 May.

Cabral provisional president of St. Domingo, Sept. 1856; B. Baez proclaimed president 11 Nov.

Vallée, sergeant major, flies into British territories, near Acul, St. Domingo, 22 Oct.; Capt. Wake, H.M.S. Bulldog, threatens Port-au-Prince; Salnave orders the removal of refugees from British consulate at Cape Hayti, shoot them, and destroys the building. The Bulldog, failing to obtain satisfaction, shells the Fort, seizes the Protection, but gets on a reef; the crew is taken out, and she is blown up. H.M.S. Galatea and Lily take the other forts and give them up to Gerfard: the rebels flee inland.

Cabral taken by court-martial for causing his ship to blow up, 1 Jan. 1860.

"Hayti"—another revolt against Gerfard suppressed, 5-21 July.

Revolution: Gerfard flies; banished for ever; Salnave president of Hayti 27 March, 1857.

Revolution caused by Pineliet: Baez flies; Cabral becomes president of St. Domingo, June.

Revolution against Salnave, Sept.

The ex-emperor Faustin (born a slave, 1701), died July, 1862.

City of San Domingo nearly destroyed by a hurricane, 20 Oct.

B. Baez, president of dominican republic, March, 1868.

Insurrection against Salnave, 10 May; said to be successful, 20 May; English consul protecting foreigners.

Salnave defeats insurgents, and kills his prisoners.

Salnave proclaims himself emperor, Aug. 2; offers an annual salute, 2 Oct.

Civil war continued: Saget and Dominguez pro-claimed president by their respective followers, Oct.

Salnave, finally defeated, flies to the woods, 18 Dec.

Gen. Nassau Saget elected president of Hayti for four years from 15 May, 1870.

Baez supports an insurrection against Aug. 1871.

Tranquility of Haiti reported by Saget 5 May, 1872.

Micheil Dominguez elected president of Hayti (from 15 May).

Insurrection in St. Domingo; in favour of Baez, 30 Aug. 1872.

Insurrection headed by Louis Tanis about 7 March, 1873.

Cruel executions of suspected persons by presi-dent Dominguez, March.

Insurrection successful, Dominguez flies to St.

Thomas's middle of April;

Election of Boisrond Canal as president of Hayti, 15 July.

Peaceful revolution in St. Domingo; president Espilat replaced by Gonzales.

29 April, about 15 July, 1873.

Guillermo declared president.

Revolution; hard fighting; Boisrond Canal resigns, about 17 July, 1873.

[re-elected 14 July, 1886]

Hayti reported tranquil.

Don Fernando de Murrieta Marin, a priest, president of San Domingo, Oct. 1880; said to become dic-tator June, 1881.

Revolution broke out March 25, and general massacre of prisoners.

Troops defeated 21 March, 1883.

Bridge exploded by rebels, about 2000 killed; May.

San Domingo, plot against the government discovered; gen. Bonaparte ordered to be shot 2 July, 1894.

Dispute with France settled; indemnities to be paid, reported 1 March, 1895.

Death of gen. Hipolite, president, announced 25 March, 1899.
HEAT.

HEAT, GENERAL BOARD OF, was appointed by the Act for the promotion of the public health, passed in 1838. This board was reconstructed in Aug. 1854, and Sir Benjamin Hall was placed at its head, with a salary of £600. Sir W. F. Cowper, Aug. 1855, and by Ch. B. Alderley in 1858. In 1858 this board was incorporated into the Privy Council establishment. Dr. Smith was retained as medical officer. See Hygiene, Hydropathy, Sanitation, Exhibitions, Public Health, &c.

HEARTH, or CHIMNEYS, TAX, on every fire-place or hearth in England, was imposed by Charles II. in 1662, when it produced about 200,000 a year. It was abolished by William and Mary in the Revolution of 1689; imposed again, and again abolished.

HEAT (called by French chemists Calorie). Little progress had been made in the study of the phenomena of heat till about 1757, when Joseph Black put forward his theory of latent heat, he said, being absorbed by melting ice, and of specific heat. Cavendish, Lavoisier, and others, continued Black's researches. Sir John Leslie put forth his views on radiant heat in 1804. Count Rumford put forth the theory that heat consists by motion among the particles of matter, which view he supported by experiments on friction (recorded in 1802). This theory (now called the dynamical or mechanical theory of heat, and used to explain all the phenomena of physics and chemistry) has been further substantiated by the independent researches of Dr. J. Meier of Heilbronn and of Mr. James P. Joule of Manchester, who assert that heat is the equivalent of work done. Mr. Joule, in his papers published 1841–2, laid the foundation of the science of thermo-dynamics, on which he worked till his death, 11 Oct. 1889. The Joule Memorial Fund proposed, 30 Nov. 1889, was instituted by the Royal Society, 1 Jan. 1890. Sir William Thomson (after Lord Kelvin), of Glasgow, published his researches on the dynamical power of the sun's rays. Thermo-electricity, produced by heating pieces of copper and bismuth soldered together, was discovered by Seebeck in 1823. A powerful thermo-electric battery was constructed by Marcus von Friesen, in 1865, Professor Tindall's "heat a Mode of Motion," first published Feb. 1863, third edition, 1868, sixth edition, 1880. The researches of philosophers are still devoted to this subject; see Boiling and Caloriscense. Greatest heat in the hot summer of 1868: at Nottingham, in sun, 122°F; in shade, 92°F, 22 July, 1 p.m.; 14 Aug. 1876, 95°, in the shade; 147° in sun; 29 June, 1879, 83°. Sir George Cayley invented a heated-air engine in 1837, and Mr. Stirling applied it to raising water in Ayrshire in 1837. One invented by Mr. Wendham was described in 1873. Improvements have been made by C. Wm. Schmidt. Coal gas is generally employed. See Gas Engines.

Captain John Ericsson constructed a ship, in which caloric, or heat, was used as motive power. It sailed down the bay of New York, at the rate of 14 miles an hour, it is said, at a cost of 50 per cent. less than steam. Although caloric engines were not successful, Capt. Ericsson continued his experiments, and patented an improved engine in 1856. In 1862 he proposed condensation of the sun's rays, and their employment as a motive power; in March, 1859, he exhibited his apparatus in New York shortly before his death, aged 86.

A portable heat radiator, a small vessel containing burnt charcoal, used by the peasantry of Kashmir; adopted by Lord Dunlopd in his "Instra," and recommended by him for the troops (Times), and developed, 1 Dec. 1867.

Dr. Hans Goldschmidt's process of producing high temperatures by the combustion of aluminium and oxide of iron (the mixture termed "thermite") shown in London, 1 May, 1901.

Mr. C. Prince states that on 14 July, 1847, the temperature was 86° in the shade at Uckfield, Sussex. In Prince-town, Dartmoor, 94° in the shade, 24 July, 1885. See United States, 1892 and 1901.

The lava formed several hills, and pieces of pumice stone and scoria of 2 cwt., were thrown to a distance of a league and a half; the ice and snow which had covered the mountain for centuries melted into prodigious floods.

HEGIRA. ERA OF THE. dates from the flight (Arabic hejra) of Mahomet from Mecca to Medina, on the night of Thursday, 15 July, 622. The era commences on the 16th. Some compute this era from the 15th, but Cantemir proves that the 16th was the first day. 33 of its lunar years are equal to 32 of those of the vulgar era.

HEIDELBERG (Germany) was the capital of the Palatinate, 1562-1716. The protestant electoral house becoming extinct in 1663, a war ensued, in which the castle was ruined, and the elector removed his residence to Mannheim. It was annexed to Baden in 1802. Here was the celebrated tan, constructed in 1313, when it contained twenty-one pipes of wine. Another was made in 1654, which held 600 hogheads. It was destroyed by the French in 1688; but a larger one, fabricated in 1751, which held 800 hogheads, and was formerly kept full of the best Rheini-wine, is said to be mouldering in a damp vault, empty, since 1790. Populifoliis, 141; Palatin. Rur., 301; U. C., 156; 253; 257.

The anniversary of the foundation of the university in 1385 was enthusiastically celebrated early in August, 1856.

First international congress for cancer research formally opened by the Prince and Duchess of Baden at Heidelberg, 25 Sept. 1898.

HELEDER POINT (Holland). The fort and the Dutch fleet lying in the Texel surrendered to the British under the duke of York and sir Ralph Abercromby, for the prince of Orange, after a conflict. 540 British were killed, 30 Aug. 1794. The place was left in Oct.: see IRONEN.

HELENA. An island in the South Atlantic Ocean, discovered by the Portuguese under Juan de Nova Castilla, on St. Helena's day, 21 May, 1502. The Dutch afterwards held it until 1660, when they were expelled by the English. The British East India Company settled here in 1651, and the island was alternately possessed by the English and Dutch until 1673, when Charles H., on 12 Dec., assigned it to the company. The name was given in honor of St. Helena, who was the place of Napoleon's captivity, 15 Oct. 1815; and here he died, 5 May, 1821. His remains were removed in 1840, and interred at the Hotel des Invalides, Paris: see FERAC. 1830. The house and tomb have been purchased by the French government. The bishopric was founded in 1830. Governor, adm. Sir Charles, Elbridge, 1833-4; adm. Charles George Edward Pulteney, 1869; Hudson Ralph HELLENS, St., Lancashire, originally a village, now the centre of a large manufacturing district, constituted a municipal borough, 1808, a parliamentary borough, one member, 1885. The town-hall with a public library was opened 1876. Col. Gumble lays foundation stone of a public library, technical school, &c. He gives the site, and covered for the building, 2 Oct. 1873; the institute opened by the earl of Devon, 5 Nov. 1874. The Theatre Royal (built 1796) burnt down, 13 Oct. 1872. Population, 1871, 14,434; 1881, 24,410; 1891 (est.) 35,825.

HELIGOLAND, an island in the North Sea, formerly a dependence of the duchy of Holstein, subject to Denmark, was taken from the Danes by the British, 5 Sept. 1807; made a depot for British vessels; converted to England by the treaty of Kiel, 14 Jan. 1814. In a naval engagement off Heligoland, between the Danes and the Austrians and Russians, the allies were compelled to retire, 6 May, 1814. A fashionable bathing place for Germans. Governor, col. Henry F. B. Maxse, 1861; rt. hon. J. T. N. O'Brien, 1881; Mr. A. C. S. Barkley, Nov. 1888. Heligoland was ceded to Germany by the Anglo-German agreement, 18 June; given up by Mr. Barkley to the new German governor, 1 Aug.; visited by the emperor William II., and proclaimed part of the empire, 10 Aug. 1866. Population, 1851, 2000; 1861, 2089; 1881, 1460 (est. 2129).

HELIOGRAPHY (from helios, the sun). A scientific telegraph by mirrors flashing the rays of the sun, and to have been employed by the ancients in the time of Alexander the Great.

A portable heliograph invented by Mr. H. Maunsell, the Persian telegraph department, was introduced in 1875. It was employed by Prof. LeRoy, 1877; in the Atchafalaya and Zoua campaigns, 1879, and in the Spanish-American campaigns, 1898-99. See also Signal Corp.

HELIOMETER, an instrument for measuring the diameters of the sun, moon, planets, and stars, invented by Savary, in 1713; applied by M. J. T. C. L. in 1714. A fine heliometer, by Repsold of Hamburg, was set up at the Radcliffe observatory, Oct. 1826.

HELOPOLIS, or Bocchoris in Syria. The name was also given to a city in Bocchoris, on the biblical on or Ichcchemesh, in the earliest known times, a chief seat of the worship of the sun. It suffered much by the Persian invasion, 355 B.C., and was in ruins in the time of Strabo, who died about A.D. 24.

HELIOSCOPE, a peculiar sort of telescope, prepared for observing the sun so as not to affect the eye, was invented by Christopher Scheiner in 1627.

HELIOSTAT, an instrument invented to make a sunbeam stationary, or apparently stationary, invented by St-Gravesande about 1710, and greatly improved by Malus and others. One constructed by MM. Foncimet and Duboscq was exhibited at Paris in Oct. 1802.

HELIUM, a gas discovered by prof. Ramsay with argon in the mineral cleavite, 1895. See Hedwigia, 1898.

HELLEAS, in Thessaly, the home of the Hellens and the Greek race, which supplanted the Pelasgians from the 13th to the 11th century B.C., derived its name from Hellen, king of Pthiades, about 1600 B.C. The Hellenes separated into the Dorians, Eolians, Ionians, and Achaeans. The present king of Greece is called "king of the Hellens." See Greece.

HELLENIC SOCIETY, to promote Hellenic studies, formed at a meeting, 10 June, 1876, by Mr. C. T. Newton and others. Journal published 1881, et seq.

HELLESPONT (now the Strait of the Dardanelles) was named after Helle, daughter of Athamas, king of Thessaly, who was drowned here. According to the legendary story the loves of Hero of Scyros, and Leander of Abydos, Leander was drowned in a tempestuous night as he was swimming across the Hellespont (about one mile), and Hero, in despair, threw herself into the sea, dated seventh century B.C. Lord Byron and his acquaintance Ekenhead also swam across, 3 May, 1810. See Naxos.

HELL-FIRE CLUBS. Three of these associations were suppressed, 1721. They met at Somerset-house, and at houses in Westminster and in Conduit-street.

HELLHOFITE, a powerful and safe explosive, composed of nitrates, &c., invented by Hellhoff and Gramas of St. Petersburg, announced August, 1885.

HELMETS, among the Romans, were provided with a visor of gratet bars, to raise above the eyes, and beating to lower for eating; the Greek helmet was round, the Roman square. Richard I. of England wore a plain round helmet; but most of the English kings had crowns above their helmets. Alexander III. of Scotland, 1249, had a flat helmet, with a square grated visor, and the helmet of Robert I. was surmounted by a crown, 1306. The helmet is the general headdress of the British Army, the broad-brimmed Colonial patterns being found most serviceable. Helmets were adopted by the Spanish troops during the Melilla operations against the Moors, 1899. See Gavillim.

HELOTES, captives, derived by some from the Greek helos, to take; by others from Helos, a city which the Spartan-hated for refusing to pay tribute. The Spartans, it is said, ruined the city, reduced the Helots to slavery, and called all their slaves and prisoners of war Helotes, 700 B.C. The number of the Helots was much enlarged by the conquest of Messenia, 668 B.C.; and is considered to have formed four-fifths of the inhabitants of Sparta. In the Peloponnesian war the Helots behaved with uncommon bravery, and were rewarded with liberty, 431 B.C.; but the sudden disappearance of 2000, committed suicide, in the Laconian massacre. See Herodotus. The connection between the Helots and Helos is now considered mythical.
HELSINGFORS, a strongly-fortified seaport, and after Cronstadt the most important naval station on the Baltic. It was founded by Gustavus I., of Sweden, in the 16th century. In 1639, the site of the town was moved nearer to the shore. Became in 1819 the capital of Finland. During the war between Russia and Denmark, a series of formidable batteries, was bombarded by the allied fleet for two days and nights without inflicting material damage, Aug. 1855. Helsingfors has numerous handsome buildings, including the senate-house, the university, removed here from Abo in 1828, three handsome churches, a hospital, and an observatory. It carries on considerable trade in Baltic produce. Population, 1874, 110,000, including Russian garrison troops; 1910 (est.), 122,120.

Gen. Bobrikoff, governor-general of Finland, assassinated by the son of an ex-senator, 16 June, 1904. See Russia, 1904-5.

HELVELTIAN REPUBLIC. Switzerland having been conquered by the French in 1797, a republic was established April, 1798, with this title; see Switzerland.

HELVETI, a Celt-Germanic people, who inhabited part of what is now called Switzerland. They joined the Cimbri, were with them when the Romans were defeated near Geneva, and the consul Longinus killed, 107 B.C., and when they themselves were defeated by Marius and Catulus, 101. Invading Gaul, 61 B.C., they were defeated and massacred by Julius Caesar, 58 B.C., near Geneva.

HEMP AND FLAX. Flax was first planted in England, when it was directed to be sown for fishing-nets, 1532-3. "Romans were paid to encourage its cultivation in 1733, and every exertion should be made by the government and legislature to accomplish such a national good." In 1785 there were imported from Sweden, 700,000 tons of hemp and flax. See John Sinclair. The importation of hemp and flax in 1870, was 3,510,747 cwt.; 1883, 3,082,109 cwt.; 1894, 3,777,304 cwt.; 1900, 3,392,280 cwt.; 1906, 4,093,490 cwt.; 1908, 4,283,240 cwt. The cultivation of flax was revived at the deth of cotton during the American civil war, 1864.

HENGESTDOWN (Cornwall). Here Ethelred is said to have defeated the Danes and West Britons, 835.

HENLEY MURDER. Mr. F. H. Holmes, a brewer, of Fawley, near Henley, shot his wife and daughter and two maidservants, each being shot through the head in their sleep, and then committed suicide. 8 Feb., 1908.

HENOTICON (from the Greek henotes, unity), an edict of union for reconciling the Eutychnians with the church, issued by the emperor Zeno at the instance of Aecius, patriarch of Constantinople, 482. It was zealously opposed by the popes of Rome, and was annulled by Justin I. in 518. The orthodox party triumphed, and many heretic bishops were expelled from their sees.

HEPTARCHY (government of seven rulers) in England was gradually formed from 547, when Hengist became king of Kent. It terminated in 828, when Egbert became sole monarch of England. There were at first nine or ten Saxon kingdoms, but Middlesex soon ceased to exist, and Bernicia and Deira were generally governed by one ruler, as Northumbria; see Britton.

HERACLEA, see Pandion.

HERACLID E, descendants of Heracles, who were expelled from the Peloponnesus about 1200 B.C., but reappeared in 1049-51 or 1019 B.C., a noted epoch in chronology, all the history preceding being accounted fabulous.

HERALDRY. Marks of honour were used in the first ages. Vetus. The Phrygians had a sow; the Thracians, Mars; the Romans, an eagle; the Gauls, a bear; the Flemings, a bull; the Saxons, a horse; and the ancient French a lion, and afterwards the deer-de-lis (urhich see). Heraldry, as an art, is ascribed first to Charlemagne, about 800; and next to Frederick Barbarossa, about 1152; it began and grew with the feudal law. Maccenzie. The great English works on heraldry are those of Barrham or Barkham, published by Gwiliam (1601), Edmundson (1700), and Durfee's "Armories" (1812).

HERALDS OF KINGDOM OF SWITZERLAND. In 1685, contains a history and the arms of above 60,000 British families, &c. See Blazonry, Crests and Armorial Bearings.

Philip and Mary enlarged its privileges, and confirmed them by letters patent 15 July, 1554. Formerly, in many cases, monarch represented the king's person, and therefore wore a crown, and was always a knight. The college has an earl marshal, 3 kings of arms (Garter, Clarenceux, and Norroy), 6 heralds (Richmond, Henley, Chester, Devon, London, and York), 4 pursuivants, and 50 heralds; see Knights of the Garter. The heralds in London, having been suppressed, were resumed to the See of Winchester, 1603; buildings now in Queen Victoria Street, E.C.

HERALDS' VISITATIONS were occasionally held in former times, when the registration of warrants was required to attend to prove their pedigrees, which were then entered in a book. The last is said to have been held in 1587. Some of the records have been printed.

A heraldic exhibition was opened in Edinburgh, July-August, 1891. The Treatise by the Rev. J. Woodward and the late G. Bottrell was completed in two volumes, 1922. Committee appointed by the treasury to inquire into the constitution, duties, and administration of the heralds college, the courts of Lyon and Ulster King-at-arms, and the chancellors of the various orders of knighthood. Jan., 1903. King Edward commands the establishment of a central chancery of the orders of knighthood, the registration of warrants, and issue of insignia, to be carried out in future by the lord chamberlain's department. 4 April, 1904. Commonwealth of Australia, armorial bearings authorized by royal warrant, 7 May, 1903.

HERAT, on the confines of Khorasan, a strong city, called the key of Afghanistan. It was conquered by Persians early in the 16th century; by the Afghans, in 1715; by Nadir Shah, 1731; recovered by the Afghans, 1749. The Persians, baffled in an attempt in 1808, took it 25 Oct. 1836, in violation of the treaty of 1833; and war ensued between Great Britain and Persia. Peace was made in April, 1857; and Herat was restored 27 July following. It was seized by Russians in May, 1863, taken by Yakoob Khan, rebelling against his father, 6 May, 1871. Yakoob, reconciled to his father, was made governor, 10 Sept. 1871.
Ayyub governor for his brother Yakoub, amir at Cubul. May, 1879.
Mutiny, many officials killed. Sept. 9.
Ayyub invades Palestine (which he had conquered). Sept. 10.
Returns to Herat. Sept. 20.
His troops defeated in several conflicts; Ayyub flees to Persia; and the Amir's general defects. Oct. 10.

HEREDITY.
Hereditary, which was supposed to have been founded in 1513 by John Kellet, in his "Studies in the Theory of Race," translated, 1873, and in his "Essays on Heredity," 1882, set forth his reasons for opposing the theory, and referred to his researches on the lowest forms of animal life, proceus, &c., and to Darwin's principle of natural selection, which be considers as the only possible theory for explaining the difficulties connected with metamorphoses of species. Much controversy ensued, in which the late Prof. G. J. Romanes took a leading part.

HEREFORD was made the seat of a bishopric about 1760. Putsa being first bishop. The cathedral was founded by a nobleman named Milfride, in honour of Ethelbert, king of the East Saxons, who was treacherously slain by his intended mother-in-law, the queen of Mericia. The tower fell in 1760, and was rebuilt by Mr. Wyatt. The cathedral was re-opened after very extensive repairs, on 30 June, 1803. The see is valued in the king's books at 708l. per annum. Present income, 4,200l. St. Nicholas's church, the cathedral, and other buildings damaged by earthquake, 5 a.m. 17 Dec. 1807. St. James's church, rebuilt about 1771, burnt 23 Dec. 1811. Princess Henry of Battenberg was married in the cathedral and lays the first stone of new municipal buildings, 11 May, 1822. New front of the cathedral dedicated by the archb. of Canterbury, 25 March, 1824. Population, 1801, 21,832.

HERBARIES.
1825. George Bache Huntingford, died 2 April, 1825.
1857. Rev. H. H. Bushee, the bishop was elected (which he opposed on account of his opinions), died 25 April, 1876.

HERITAGE.
1888. James Atlay; consecrated 24 June; died 24 Dec., 1884, aged 77.
1893. John Percival; consecrated 25 March.

HEREROS, see German S. W. Africa, 1893-5.

HERETICS (from the Greek hairitis, choice).
Paul says, "After the way they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers," (Acts xxiv. 14). Heresy was unknown to the Greek and Roman religions. Simon Magus is said to have preached the Gnostic heresy about 41. This was followed by the Manichees, Nestorians, Arians, &c. See Inquisition. It is stated that the promulgation of laws for prosecuting heretics was begun by the emperor Frederick II, in 1220; and immediately adopted by pope Honorius III.

Epiphanius, bishop of Constantia in Cyprus, 477, wrote "Pamantia," a discourse against heretics, died 1757-92.

Thirty heretics came from Germany to England to propagate their opinions, and were branded in the foreheads, whipped, and thrust naked into the streets in the depth of winter, where, none daring to relieve them, they died of hunger and cold. (Cypich)

Laws against heretics repealed, 25 Henry VIII. 1534-5
The last person executed for heresy in Britain was Thomas Alkenhead, at Edingburgh, 1856.
The orthodox Maronites, and Sunnites: the heretics—Shiites, Brunes, &c.

HERITABLE JURISDICTIONS (i. e. feudal rights) in Scotland, valued at 164,232l., were abolished by the act 20 Geo. II. c. 43 (1747), and restored to the crown for money compensation after 25 March, 1748. Heritable and Movable Rights, in the Scottish law, denote what in England is meant by real and personal property: real property in England answering nearly to heritable rights in Scotland, and personal property to the movable rights.

HERMANDAD, SANTA (Spanish for holy brotherhood), associations of cities of Carstie and Aragon to defend their liberties, began about the middle of the 13th century. The brotherhood was disorganized in 1498, order having been firmly established. It is said to have been continued as a species of voluntary police.

HERMAS, author of the "Shepherd," a Christian apocryphal book, supposed to have been written about 131. Some believe Hermes to be mentioned in Romans xvi. 14.

HERMETIC BOOKS, the name of forty-two books forming the sacred canon of the ancient Egyptians, and constituting a synopsis of Egyptian wisdom. The name is derived from Hermes Trismegistus, the Greek name of Thoth, the Egyptian god of wisdom.

HERMETIC SOCIETY, a mystical, spiritual, philanthropic association, based upon Christianity, founded by Dr. Anna Kingsford, early in 1883, purposed author of "The Perfect Way" (lectures delivered in 1881, and since published).

Mrs. Anna Kingsford died 22 Feb., 1888. See under Theosophists.

HERMITS, see Monachism.

HERNE BAY, Kent, a watering-place, begun 1830; the pier, five-eighths of a mile long, having been completed, a new one was opened, 27 Aug., 1853, by lord mayor of Westminster; it was strengthened in 1858. The Passmore Edwards convalescent home (railway men) opened 8 June, 1901. Population, 1881, 2,810; 1901, 6,098.
HERO.

HERO, BRITISH MAN-OF-WAR, see Weeks, 1811.

HERRERA (Arragon). Here don Carlos, of Spain, in his struggle for his hereditary right to the throne, at the head of 12,000 men, encountered and defeated general Bueroo, who had not much above half that number of the queen of Spain's troops. Bueroo lost about 1000 in killed and wounded, 24 Aug. 1837.

HERRING-FISHERY was largely encouraged by the English and Scotch in very early times. The "statute of herrings," passed in 1357, placed the trade under government control. The mode of preserving herrings by pickling was discovered about 1597. Anderson. The British Herring-Fishery company was instituted 2 Sept. 1750. A scientific commission in relation to the fishery was appointed in 1862.

HERRINGS, BATTLE OF THE, fought 12 Feb. 1429, obtained its name from the due de Bourbon being defeated while attempting to intercept a convoy of salt fish, on the road to the Englishbesiging Orleans.

HERSCHEL TELESCOPE, see Telescopes.

HERTFORD, Hertfordshire, a Saxon town. Castles were erected here by Alfred and by Edward the Elder. Charters were granted in 1588 and 1680. All Saints' church burnt, 21 Dec. 1841. Population, 1901, 9,322; 1910 (est.), 10,753.

HERTFORD COLLEGE, Oxford; founded in 1312; dissolved, 1803; revived, and Magdalen hall incorporated with it, 1874.

HERULI, a German tribe, which ravaged Greece and Asia Minor in the 3rd century after Christ. Odocer, their leader, overthrew the western empire and became king of Italy, 476. He was defeated and put to death by Theodoric the Ostrogoth, 491-3.

HERVEY ISLANDS (Pacific Ocean), Karotonga, &c. British protectorate proclaimed, 20 Sept. 1888.

HERZEGOVINA or HERTSEK (European Turkey), originally a part of Croatia, was united with Bosnia in 1526, and made the duchy of St. Sabra by the emperer Frederick III. in the following century. It was ceded to Turkey in 1699 at the peace of Carlowitz. In Dec. 1681 an insurrection against the Turks broke out, fostered by the prince of Montenegro. It was subdued; and on 23 Sept. 1682, Vucatovitch, chief of the insurgents, surrendered on behalf of his countrymen to Kurschid Pasha, and an amnesty was granted.

Insurrection against the Turks; conflicts with varying results. 18 July, 1735. The European Powers counsel to send a commission to redress grievances. 22 Aug. Server Pacha unsuccessful; Turkish victories Aug. The insurgents in a document describe their sufferings, as Christians; demand full and free freedom, and declare that they will not be subject to the Turks again. 12 Sept. Futil interveion of foreign consuls. 20 Sept. Sanguinary engagements; various results. 29 Sept. Negotiations of the Austrian gen. Redich fail; the insurgents ask too much. 12 Sept. Makhtar Pasha said to have defeated insurgents, and retiuculated Nikisias besieged. 20 April. Other engagements reported. 20 April. The new Sultan, Murad, grants an armistice for negotiation. 3 Oct. 1735.

HESSE (W. Germany), the seat of the Catti, formed part of the empire of Charlemagne; from the rulers of it in his time, the present are descended. It was joined to Thuringia till about 1263, when Henry I. (son of duke of Brabant and Sophia, daughter of the landgrave of Thuringia) became landgrave of Hesse. The most remarkable of his successors was Philip the Magnanimous (1509), an eminent warrior and energetic supporter of the Reformation, who signed the Augsburg Confession in 1530 and the League of Smalcald in 1531. At his death, in 1578, Hesse was divided into Hesse-Cassel and Hesse-Darmstadt, under his sons William and George, and their descendants played an eminent part in the convulsions of Germany during the 17th and 18th centuries. In 1592 Hesse-Cassel became an electorate, and in 1606 Hesse-Darmstadt a grand duchy; which titles were retained in 1814. In 1850 Hesse-Cassel was incorporated with the kingdom of Westphalia, but in 1813 the electorate was re-established. Capital, Darmstadt. Population (1875), grand duchy, 84,218; 1890, 1,230,135; 1895, 1,259,175.

Hesse-Cassel (made an electorate, 1552; incorporated with Westphalia, 1807; restored, 1813).

ELECTORS.

1553. William I.; born 3 June, 1571; succeeded as landgrave, 1573; died 1622.

1622. William I.; born 28 July, 1577; died 2 Nov. 1647.

The elector, in 1650, remodeled the constitution given him by his father (by which he had the exclusive right of voting the tax), and did not concern the chamber until the usual time for closing the session had arrived, when his demand for money was tied to his caprice. The chamber called for a regular budget, that it might discuss its items. The elector dissolved the chamber, and declared his dominions in a state of war. 2 Sept. 1831.

He fled to Hanover, and subsequently to Frankfort, and on 14 Oct. he formally applied to the Frankfort diet for assistance to re-establish his authority in Hesse. On 8 Nov. an Austro-Bavarian force of 10,000 men entered Hesse-Cassel, under the command of Prince Thann-And-Taxis, who fixed his headquarters at Hanover; and on the next day a Prussian force entered Casel. The elector returned to his capital, the taxes having been collected under threats of imprisonment, 37 Dec.

The constitution of 1831 was abolished, and a new one established, 1852.

The conflict was soon resumed, and continued till, by law of 20 Sept. 1855, Hesse-Cassel was annexed to Prussia, 8 Oct. 1856.

The elector's property sequestered for intriguing against Prussia, 2 Nov. 1855 and Feb. 1856. He died 6 Jan. 1855.

* Six thousand Hessian troops arrived in England, in consequence of an invasion being expected in 1756. The sum of 941,000 was paid to them. The stock was transferred to the landsgrave of Hesse, for Hessian auxiliaries lost in the American war, at 36d. per man, Nov. 1786. The Hessian soldiers were again brought to this realm at the close of the 18th century, and served in Ireland during the rebellion in 1798.
HESSIAN FLY (Chloridion destructor), the American wheat maggot, very destructive to the corn in the United States in 1768, whether it is said to have been brought by the Hessians solders in British pay—hence its name.

The crops suffered severely in New York state in 1847 and 1848. It appeared in England in 1847, and was described by Dr. William Banks. Its appearance here in 1852 occasioned much alarm throughout the country. Its action and spread is very much like that of the Corn Earworm in the southeastern coast of British, not much inland, transatlantic.

In twenty English and two Scotch counties, the alarm considered to be exaggerated. Per. & R. Sept. 1857.

Presented to the British Museum, Southack, Herts, Berks, etc.

HIEROGLYPHICS, literally sacred sculptures or engravings, the representation of objects to express language, used by the ancient Egyptians, Mexicans, and other nations. The Egyptians used about 1700 hieroglyphs, engraved on stone, painted on wood, and written on papyrus. They were either phonetic or ideographic. Their invention is attributed to Thoth, an Egyptian god, and to Moses, a Hebrew. See "Book of the Dead," in article Death, Young, Champollion, Rosellini, Lepsius, Brugsch, Mariette, Chabas, De Rouge, Bunsen, Birch, Budge, Hilmy, and others (in the 19th century) have much elucidated Egyptian hieroglyphics; see Rosetta Stone. A. Erman's "Egyptian Grammar," English translation by J. H. Breasted, published about July, 1834.

HIGH AND LOW CHURCH sections in the Church of England became prominent in the reign of Elizabeth. High church principles were maintained by Dr. Whitgift, and set forth by Richard Hooker "the judicious" in his Ecclesiastical Polity, 1553-7. They were opposed by the Puritans. The contest, but in the reign of Anne, has continued since. Dr. Sacheverell, preacher at St. Saviour's, Southwark, was prosecuted for two sedition[s] sermons preached (14 Aug. and 9 Nov. 1700) to create apprehension for the safety of the church, and to excite hostility against dissenters. His friends were called High Church and his opponents Low Church, or moderate men, 1720. The queen favoured Sacheverell, and presented him with the rectory of St. Andrew's, Holborn. He died in 1724.

HIGH COMMISSION, Court of, an ecclesiastical court, erected by Eliza, 1. 1559, by which all spiritual jurisdiction was vested in the crown. It originally had no power to fine or imprison; but under Charles I., and archbishop Laud it assumed illegal powers, was confounded by the parliament, and abolished in 1641.

HIGHER CRITICISM. The terms "higher" and "lower" criticism were adopted and are used with specific reference to the criticism of the Bible. Higher criticism is the criticism of the literary forms and contents of the Bible, lower criticism is the criticism of the text of the Bible—of the original languages in which it was written. The Bible was written by many men and in the languages of Hebrew, Chaldee, and Greek. These languages have become dead languages, but they survive in written documents, and in these languages the Bible in the original is preserved to us. Criticism of the literary forms and contents of the Bible is necessary in order to establish true principles of Biblical interpretation, and to get at the intended and expressed meaning of the Bible. The work of the divine inspiration of the divine does not cease with the letter of the Bible, for that would mean the creation of a special and holy language through which to give the Bible to man. The Bible comes to us through human language as it is, and not as we imagine it might be or ought to be. The language is the language of man, and therefore fallible. The text of the Bible therefore depends for its accuracy upon the attention and care of successive generations of copyists. Thus Bible criticism is necessary to ascertain the true text of the Bible, and what its contents really are. In the higher criticism of the Bible there are four questions to be determined: (1) Its integrity—whether the writing in question is the work of a single author or a combination of writings by more than one author; whether it has received additions by editors in later times; or is in its original condition. What the parts are—which original and which added, and how and when the additions were made. (2) Its authenticity: this asks the question, does the writing bear the author's hand? Is it anonymous? If the name is given, is the title a true one or a forgery, or is it anonymous? And if anonymous, what is its use as a writing? (3) Its literary forms: to determine the style and literary method of the various writers. (4) Its credibility: the answer to the question, are the writings which compose the Bible true? The path of the investigations of the higher criticism, so far as it has gone, has been partly destructive, for there were undoubtedly errors both in the Bible itself and also, and to a much greater extent, in its traditional interpretation by orthodox Christians; but this work has also been constructive, by clearing away from the Bible what was untrue, and establishing what is true and divine. The Reformation in the 16th century released the critical mind of Europe, and gave it liberty to work, with the result that a new spirit and method of inquiry arose, and were made use of in the search for the true meaning and worth of the Bible. At this time, it is true, the main effort was put forth in the defence of the original text, and for the simple grammatical exegesis of the Bible as against that of the Vulgate and traditional authority; but both Luther and Calvin worked upon questions of the higher criticism. Calvin, for example, denied that St. Paul was the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews. He also claimed that Psalms was the collection of the ancient psalms, and that David was not the author or even editor of the entire book. Luther denied that the Epistle of St. James was by an apostle, and was quite willing, apparently, to allow that the whole Pentateuch was not written by Moses. But questions of authorship were not the prominent questions at this time in Biblical inquiry and research. The father of the higher criticism is the German Eichhorn, in the last quarter of the 18th century. In the Book of Genesis Eichhorn traces the marks of two sets of documents—one Elohist, and the other J-christian—and thus makes the book the work of two authors. The critical work begun by Eichhorn went on in Germany; but owing to the fact that English divines were at this time engaged in bitter conflict with deism, the higher criticism had very little effect in England. It was not till the 19th century that English scholars really awoke to questions of Biblical criticism. It began with bishop Colenso's attack upon the historical books of the Pentateuch and that of Joshua. Since Colenso's time we have had such scholars as bishop Lightfoot and Robert Low Smith, and in the present day there are at work among us upon questions of the higher criticism such men as professors Driver and Kirkpatrick.

HIGHGATE ARCHWAY, over a road made to avoid the hill; first stone laid by Edward Smith, 31 Oct. 1812; toll through ceased, 1 May, 1876. Rebuilding proposed, 1865; completed, 1890. See London, Nov. 1889.

HIGHGATE COLLEGE, founded by sir Roger Cholmeley, 1565.

HIGHLANDS (of Scotland), long held by semi-barbarous clans, were greatly improved by the construction of military roads by general Wade, about 1725-6; by the abolition of heritable jurisdiction of feudal rights in 1747, and by the establishment of the Highland and Agricultural Society in 1783; centenary celebrated at Edinburgh, July, 1884. See Regiments, Crofters.

HIGHEHNESS. The title of Highness was given to Henry VII.; and this, and sometimes Your Grace, was the manner of addressing Henry VIII.; but about the close of the reign of the latter, the titles of "Highness" and "Your Grace" were absorbed in that of "Majesty." Louis XIII. of France gave the title of Highness to the prince of Orange, in 1614; this title had previously only the distinction of Excellence. Louis XIV. gave the princes of Orange the title of High and Mighty Lords, 1644. Reinst. 1689.

HIGH PRIEST, see Priest.

HIGH TREASON. To regulate the trials for this crime the statute so favourable to liberty, the 25th of Edward III., 1341, which two living witnesses are required. By an act passed 19 April, 1821, this provision was extended to Ireland, parliament having refused to sanction the sentence of death against the duke of Somerset. In 1850, it was enacted that when the overt act was a direct attempt on the life of the sovereign, the trial should be conducted in the same manner as in the case of an indictment for murder. The trial of John Horne Tooke and others for constructive high treason failed, see Horne Tooke, Nov. Dec. 1794. See Treason.

The last two cases of execution for high treason were:
1. William Cundall alias Cound, and John Smith; tried on a special commission, 6 Feb. 1743, being two of fourteen British subjects taken in the enemy's service in the isles of Tramore and Bounton. Mr. Abbot, afterwards lord Tenteden and chief justice, and sir Vicory Gibbs, attorney-general, conducted the prosecution, and Mr. Bewlaken, sir paul Bewlaken, defended the prisoners. The defence was, that they had assumed the French uniform to aid their escape to England. They were charged and several on the lodge of Horsemen's gate and 6Mar. 9.

All the other counts were pleaded, upon condition of serving in colonies beyond the seas.

Himalaya, a range of mountains between India and Tibet. Its highest peak is Mount Everest, height 29,002 ft., the highest known in the world. Mr. W. W. Graham, with four Swiss guides, ascended Mount Kaben (height 21,922 feet) and three other mountains over 21,000 feet in the Sikhim group with much difficulty, Nov. 1878.

Dr. Karl Deity explored the Central Himalayas to the height of 17,000 ft. April-July 1879.

Mr. Cartwright, the Microscopist, published 1854; he ascended great glacier heights.

On 8 Sept., 1870, near Gudm, in the district of Garwhal, British near the foot of the hill Metham fell into the river Brahga Gann, a tributary of the Almaka, stunning it up and forming a long deep lake, which gradually increased in size, and eventually overflowed and drowned the valley. In the destruction of buildings, bridges, etc. of Gudm and Hardwar, etc., 20 Aug. 1874. This event was anticipated by geologists, and through the precautions no loss of life occurred.

Whilst exploring the Nanga Parbat region, Mr. A. F. Munmore and two Greeks were killed by an avalanche, mid. Aug. 1879.

Dr. and Mrs. Bullock Workman explore five new peaks and four glaciers to the W. and S.W. of the Hunza Nugar valley; two new peaks were ascended from the base of the Almaka; the highest peak was reached by Mrs. Bullock Workman and two guides, to a height of 21,922 ft. 18 Aug. 1879.

Dr. and Mrs. Bullock Workman finish a visit to Hunza Nugar and the Hunter glacier; the object of the expedition having been to make a detailed survey of all the branches of this glacier and explore them to their sources. June 17, Oct. 1879.

Himera (Sicily). Here (on 340 B.C.) Gelon of Syracus and Theron of Acragas indentured the Carthaginians; and at Eunomus, near here, the defeated Athenians of Syracus, 310 B.C.

Hindoer (Calahor) was founded 1310 A.D., or 739 before the Deluge, in 2292 B.C. The Hindoestanians count their months by the progress of the sun through the zodiac. The Summer era begins 50 B.C.; the Sacra era A. D. 79.
The castle of Jerabolus, a mound and ruins, 20 miles below Beredijik on the Euphrates; was visited by Henry Maundrell, 1699; by Dr. Pococke, 1745; and by J. H. Skene and Mr. Geo. Smith (died 1795), who agreed in considering the remains to be those of Carchemish, the ancient capital of the Hittites, captured and annexed by Sargon, king of Assyria (about 724 B.C.) when the nation was thoroughly subdued. There it had been held successively by Hittites, Assyrians, Babylonians, Greeks, Romans, and Arabs.

Captain C. R. Condor's discovery of a key to the language of Hittite inscriptions on bas-reliefs, gems, &c., some of which were discovered by Burekhardt, 1838, and rediscovered by Mr. Palmer in 1839, announced 26 Feb. 1887; they consist of invocations, hymns, &c., to the sun, &c. His "Altar Hieroglyphs and Hittite Inscriptions" published 1887.

Prof. A. Sayce, in 1879, considered the Hittites to have been in very early times the predominating power in Asia Minor and N. Syria. The investigations of Messrs. Ramsay, Hogarth, and Headlam, in 1890, supported by the English Asia Minor Exploration Fund, led to many discoveries which are described in the Times of 25 July, 1891. Investigations proceeding, 1905. New discoveries by the French expedition of 1893-94, and by M. E. Chantre, in Cappadocia, in 1898; see capt. Conder's letter, Times, 15 Oct. 1899. 3rd and enlarged edition of "The Hittites," by prof. Sayce, 1903, describes his partial success in interpreting the cuneiform Hittite inscriptions.

Population, 1911, 16,722; 1901 (est.), 12,250.

HOLY MAID of KENT. Elizabeth Barton was invited by the Roman Catholic party to oppose the Government, and to lead a numerical crowd to the chapel of an inn situated in the town of Canterbury. The chapel was burnt down by the mob, and Barton was burned at the stake, 20 May, 1534.

HOLY PLACES in PALESTINE. These places have been a source of contention between the Greek and Latin churches for several centuries. In the reign of Francis I. they were placed under Latin monks, protected by the French government; but the Greeks, from time to time obtained lambs from the Pope invalidating the laws of the Latin Church, who were at last (in 1752) expelled from the sacred buildings, which were committed to the care of the Greeks by a belligerent, or imperial ordinance.

The holy sepulchre, partially destroyed by fire and rebuilt by the Greeks, who claim additional privileges, and some discoveries.

The Russian and French governments sent envoys (M. Dushkoff and M. Marcelle) to adjust the dispute, an arrangement prevented by the Greek revolution.

The subject again agitated, and the Porte proposed that a mixed commission should adjudicate on the rival claims. M. Tell, the Russian envoy, acting on behalf of the Greeks, and M. Landeau, the French envoy, on that of the Latins, took up the question very warmly.

Aarrum granted by the Porte, confirming and consolidating the Edict previously granted to the Greek Christians, and declaring that the Latins had no right to claim exclusive possession of certain holy places, subject to the Porte being, however, left to possess a key of the church of Bethlehem, as in former times.

March, 1822.

The French government required, with much dissatisfaction, that the keys should still remain in the Latin monks.

M. Dushkoff made a formal declaration of the right of Russia to protect the altars of the Church in Jerusalem, and demanded that the keys of the church of Bethlehem be restored.

March, 1833.

Prince Menschikoff arrived at Constantinople as envoy extraordinary, and in full powers respecting the holy places, made demands respecting the protection of the Greek Christians in Turkey, which led to the war of 1840. See Russia. Turkey. REPRODUCTION, Oct. 1840.

HOLY ROAD or Cross. A festival instituted on account of the recovery of a large piece of the cross by the emperor Heraclius, after it had been taken away, on the plundering of Jerusalem, about 615. The feast of the invention (or finding) of the Cross is on 3 May; that of the exaltation of the Cross, 15 Sept. At Boxley abbey, in Kent, was annually called the "Road of Grace;" at the dissolution it was broken in pieces as an imposition by the bishop, bishop of Rochester, at St. Paul's cross, London, 1539.

HOLYROOD PALACE (Edinburgh), formerly an abbey, was for several centuries the residence of the monarchs of Scotland. The abbey, of which some vestiges remain, was founded by David 1. in 1128, and in the burial-place within its walls are interred several of its successors. The palace is a large quadrangular edifice of hewn stone, with a court within surrounded by piazzas. In the north-west tower is the bed-chamber which was occupied by queen Mary; and from an adjoining cabinet to it David Rizzio, her favourite, was dragged forth and murdered, 4 March, 1566. The north-west towers were built by James V., and the remaining part of the palace was abbed during the reign of Charles II. The palace was burnt in 1660, and rebuilt in 1669. Great improvements were made in 1857. Queen Victoria held a court here, 30 Aug., 1857; King Edward VII., 12 May, 1903.

The late lord Leven and Melville bequeathed 40,000L. for the restoration of the chapel at Holyrood palace for use as a chapel for the order of the Thistle, subject to certain specified conditions.

HOLY SEPULCHRE, a Byzantine church in modern Jerusalem. Ferguson, Robinson, and others, consider the true site of the holy sepulchre to be the mosque of Omar, the "dome of the Rock." The question is still undecided. The order of the Holy Sepulchre was founded by Godfrey of Bouillon, 1099; revived by pope Alexander VI., 1599; re-organized, 1837 and 1868.

HOME SECRETARY. see Secretaries, and all the administrations under the name of their premier. New Home Office, Westminster, occupied 6 Aug., 1875.

"HOME, SWEET HOME." The words are attributed to John Howard Payne, an American actor, who died in 1852; the music is said to be Sicilian, but it is probably by sir Henry Bishop, who introduced the song into "Clari, or the Maid of Milan, in 1823."

HOMER'S Iliad and Odyssey, the earliest and most perfect epic poems in the world. The first begins with the wrath of Achilles, and ends with the funeral of Hector; the second recounts the voyages and adventures of Odysseus or Ulysses, after the destruction of Troy. Various dates are assigned to these works, from 602 to 751 B.C.

F. A. Wolf, in his Prolegomena, in 1755, argued that the Homeric poems were composed of independent epic songs, collected and arranged by Pedstratus about 550 B.C. This theory occasioned much controversy between scholars and poets; Mr. Andrew Lang, in "Home and the Epic," vigorously defends the one author theory. March, 1893.

The first English version of the Iliad, by Arthur Hill, appeared in 1581. The present text is attributed to the time of Piers Plowman, who died B.C. 470. The most celebrated versions of Homer's works are Chapman's, 1656; Hobbes', 1673; Pope's, 1725–28; Cowper's, 1727. The translation of the Iliad by the earl of Derby (1864) is much commended.

HOMICIDE is said to have been tried at Athens by the Areopagitae. Among the Jews, willful murder was capital; but for chance-murder the offender was to flee to one of the cities of refuge, and there continue till the death of the high-priest, 1311 B.C. (Num. xxxv). 1 Geo. IV. c. 31 (1828) distinguishes between justifiable homicide and homicide in its various degrees of guilt, and circumstances of provocation and wilfulness; see Murder.

Animals have been tried and punished for killing human beings. A bull was hanged for homicide near the abbey of Beauvais. May, 1429.

HOMILDON HILL (Northumberland), where the Scots, headed by the earl of Douglas, were defeated by the Percies (among them Hotspur), 14 Sept., 1402. Douglas and the earls of Angus, Murray, Orkney, and the earl of Fife, son of the duke of Albany, and nephew of the Scottish king, with many of the nobility and gentry, were taken prisoners.

HOMIILES in early Christian times were discourses delivered by the bishop or presbyter, in a homely manner, for the common people. Charlemae's "Hamilarium" was issued 600. The Book of Homilies drawn up by abp. Cranmer, and published 1547, and another prepared by an order of convocation, 1553, were ordered to be read in those churches that had not a minister able to compose proper discourses.

HOMEOPATHY, a hypothesis promulgated in his "Organon of Medicine," 1810, and in other works, by Dr. Samuel Hahnemann, of Leipsic (died 2 July, 1833), according to which every medicine has a specific power of inducing a certain diseased state of the system (similia similibus curantur, likes are cured by likes); and if such medicine be given to a person suffering under the disease which it has a tendency to induce, such disease disappears, because two similar diseased actions cannot simultaneously subsist in the same organ. Brandy, infinitesimal doses of medicine, such as the mid-thinth of a grain of alees, have been employed; it is said, with efficacy. The system requires the patient to regulate his diet and habits carefully. It has led to a more accurate study of the materia medica.

HORSE. The people of Thessaly were excellent equestrians, and probably first among the Greeks who broke them in for service in war; whence probably arose the fable that Thessaly was originally inhabited by centaurs. "Sloth had 45,000 stalls of horses for his chariots, and 12,000 horsemen," 1044 B.C. 4 Kings iv. 20. The Greeks and Romans had some covering to secure their horses' hoofs from injury "The Horse," by W. Youatt, new edition, 1890. See Races and Carriages, 1890.

British Horse. Their great strength is described by John Cosar about 1720. Henry VIII, established a royal stud, and enacted laws to promote the breed of strong horses in certain shires, hence the term Caxton horse; these afterwards became almost extinct. The horse tax was imposed in 1522. Its operation was extended, and its amount increased, in 1796; and again in 1817. The existing duty upon horses imported into England, amounts to about £5000 per year.

Transformation of the Oxford street entrance to Hyde park, or what is known as the Marblearch improvement, by the formation of the extensive piazza behind the arch and the screens built of freshly-worked Portland stone. The screen was 12 ft. long, and consisted of 20 pilasters. The royal gates, which are said to be the finest specimen of hammered iron work in London, are 15 ft. high in the middle, and 6 ft. wide between the piers. 19 Jan.

In support of the Birmingham bill. 29 July.

Against the licensing bill. 27 Sept.

New royal gates at Marble arch opened without formal ceremony. 16 Feb., 1909.

HYDERABAD (S. India), the territory of the Nizam (the greatest mahommedan potentate in India), who derives his authority from Azof Jah, a chief under Auroungzebe, who in 1727 invited Warren Hastings, as the highest of the British empire, 1799 et seq.: died

Nizam Ali dethroned his brother, 1762; ravaged the Carnatic, 1765; made a treaty with the East India Company, 1766; he joined Hyder Ali; left him, 1768; incorporated parts of Mogul and Sultante territories; and became confidential of the British empire, 1769 et seq.: died

Sir John Jervis, 1783.

One of his successors, Scudder Jah, ruled forby; died, succeeded by an illegitimate son.

This son died, leaving his young son in charge of Salar Jung (of Junz); enriching him to support the British during the mutiny, which he did faithfully.

Sir Charles Clegg, 1857.

Salar Jung made K.C.S.I.; visited Europe; presented to the Queen, 25 June; returned to Bombay, 24 Aug., 1876; died.

Memorial service to Mir Mahabub Ali (2 Feb., 1883) installed at Hyderabad by the viceroy of India, the marquis of Ripon.

The nizam makes an attempt to present 60,000,000 for the defence of the N.W. India territories; declined (see India).

The long-standing disputes between the nizam's government and the Deccan company settled on 1 Dec., 1838.

For the "imperial diamond" case, see Trials, Dec., 1881.

Visit of the viceroy, lord Lumsdaine, 3 Nov., et seq., 1892.

Prince and Princess of Wales' visit.

Nizam contributed a lakh of rupees (6,000,000); Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund, 16 June, 1898.

Serious floods; suburb of Azizi Ganj over-rushed; Nizam's hospital there collapses, burying a number of patients; damage to property (est.), 29 Sept.

Hyderabad described as a "black grave"; heavy mortality; deaths estimated at 50,000.

HYDROGRAPHY, see under Hydrostatics.

HYDROCHLORIC ACID or CHLORHYDRIC ACID, the only known compound of chlorine and hydrogen, was discovered by Dr. Priestley, 1772; its constitution determined by Davy, 1810. It is also called muriatic acid and spirit of salt; see under Alkalies.

HYDROGEN (from hydrogen, Paracelsus observed a gas rise from a solution of iron in oil of vitriol, about 1300; Turquet de Mayerne discovered its inflammability, 1650; as did Boyle, 1672; Lemois noticed its detonating power, 1703. In 1675 Cavendish proved it to be an independent body, and in 1781, he and Watt first showed that in the combination of this gas with oxygen, which takes place when it is burnt, water is produced; subsequently Lavoisier decomposed water into its elements, and gave hydrogen its present name instead of "inflammable air". One volume of oxygen combines with two volumes of hydrogen to form water. Hydrogen is never found in the free state.

In 1877, Callinet and Wroblewski obtained by rapid expansion of the compressed gas, a condensation or mist, which was supposed to be the liquefaction of hydrogen. Osiowski had seen a few drops of an unknown liquid falling in a glass tube and remaining for a few instants unmoved, and subsequently proved to be due to impurities. Prof. Dewar published on the "Density of Hydrogen in Palladium," was published in 1871; "The Absorption of Hydrogen by Palladium at high temperatures, pressures, &c." was published in 1877. On 10 May, 1872, at the Royal Institution, he produced half a wine glassful of liquefied hydrogen at 247 deg. centigrade (below zero) in 5 min., and on the 18th he doubled the quantity. On the 19th he reported it to the Royal Society, and on the 22nd to the French Academy. By means of the liquid he also, on the 20th, liquefied a mixture of helium and other gas or gases.

Lecture on liquid hydrogen at the Royal Institution, 22 Jan., 1893. Further researches; boiling point by exhaustion, 15 of absolute temperature; liquid hydrogen exhaled boiling in a vacuum tube immersed in liquid air, 21 absolute temperature expressed in degrees with liquid hydrogen and the vitality of seeds; see Athenaeum, 19 Dec., 1894; hydrogen obtained in the solid state by Prof. Dewar, 16 absolute scale, reported, Jan., 1895.

HYDROGENIUM, a hypothetical metal. In a paper read before the Royal Society, 7 Jan., 1890, Mr. Thomas Graham, master of the Mint, suggested that a piece of the metal palladium, into which hydrogen had been passed, became an "alloy of the volatile metallic hydrogen."

HYDROGRAPH, an apparatus invented by capt. Neele, for transmitting sound by water, for the purpose of signalling between ships, lighthouses, &c.; it consisted of a transmitter and a receiving apparatus, the former being submerged under the water's surface and the latter fixed on the ship's afterdeck.

HYDROGRAPHY is the description of the surface waters of the earth. The first sea-chart is attributed to Henry the Navigator, in the 15th century. There is a hydrographic department in the British admiralty, by which a series of charts has been issued. International Hydrographic and Biological congress meets at Stockholm, 15 June, 1899. See China, May, 1933.

HYDROMETER, the instrument by which it is measured the gravity, density, and other properties of liquids. The oldest mention of the hydrometer occurs in the 5th century, and may be found in the letters of Synesius to Hypatia; but it is not improbable that Archimedes was the inventor of it, though no proofs of it are to be found. Rebecca was killed in 212 B.C., and Hypatia was torn to pieces at Alexandria, A.D. 415. "Hypatia," by the rev. Charles Kingsley, appeared in 1855. Robert Boyle described a hydrometer in 1675; Baume's (1762) and Sykes' about 1785, have been much employed. Modifications of the apparatus have been invented.

HYDROPATHY, a term applied to the treatment of diseases by cold water, practised by Hippocrates in the 4th century B.C., by the Arabs in the 10th century A.D., and revived by Dr. Currie in 1773, by Dr. Seys in 1825 by Vincent Priessnitz, of Grafenau, in Austrian Silesia. The rational part of the doctrine was understood and maintained by Dr. Sydenham, before 1680. Priessnitz died 26 Nov. 1853. A grand hydropathic establishment at Bushey, Herts., opened 13 Feb. 1883. Many others exist throughout the kingdom. Peebles hydropathic, erected in 1782 at a cost of £100,000, destroyed by fire, 7 July, 1905.

HYDROPHOBIA, in man, rabies in animals, M. Pasteur announced his discovery of a method of checking this disease, analogous to vaccination, the system afterwards applied to various diseases. He operates on monkeys and other animals successfully. May, on dogs, Aug. 1884, on 49 persons 11 Dec. 1885. An international hospital, afterwards termed the Pasteur institute, founded (40,000 subscribed) May, 1886, opened by president Carnot, 14 Nov. 1885. Out of 726 cases treated, 4 deaths reported 12 April, 1886; 1623 persons treated, 1 May, 1885, to 1 May, 1889. The principle much opposed 1886-7. A British commission appointed 1887 (Sir John Park, Dr. Heusden, Sanderson, and others) appointed 12 April, 1885; visits Paris, and reports confidence in M. Pasteur's treatment. 27 June, 1887. M. Pasteur proposes, and various other applications of his principles, 1887-8. The book, "M. Pasteur, Histoire d'un Savant," was published in 1884; and an English translation by lady Claud Hamilton in 1885. Reported number of cases by M. Pasteur (1865) 96 Sept. 17, 1721 since 1855, 2609, to 26 June, 1889; 1,739 patients, 7 deaths in 1889; 1,420 patients, 6 deaths, in 1879; 1,419 patients, 4 deaths in 1886; 1,521 patients, 8 deaths in 1881; 1,714 patients, 4 deaths in 1879; 1,510 patients, 6 deaths in 1879; 6,950, deaths. The 4th institute in France opened at Lyons, 7 Jan. 1879; in many other countries; one at Kasuni, India, opened 1869, reported very successful.

5,000 pipes and 10,000 pipes from sir Charles H. to the Indian Pasteur institute at Kasuni; also Drumheller house from the Punjab government, and other grants, reported 9 Aug., 1895.

HYDROPHONE, an electrical, telephonic apparatus for sound, called by secret communication between ships and the shore, of the approach of a torpedo-boat, invented by capt. M. Eryv; announced, Nov. 1892.

HYDROSTATICS, &c., were probably first studied in the Alexandrian school about 300 B.C.

Pleasure, discovered by Archimedes, about 6 B.C.

The forming pump and air fountain invented by Hero about 120.

Water mills were known about 1 B.C.

The science revolved by Galilei, Castellio, Torricelli, and Pascal (who suggested the principle of the hydraulic press) 17th century.

The theory of fluids scientifically understood 1697.

The correct theory of fluids and oscillation of waves explained by Newton 1714.

An invention was given to hydro-dynamics by Bernoulli 1739.

Joseph Bramah's hydrospheric, or hydraulic press patented first in 1745.

Sir Wi. White's hydraulic engine patented 1846.

John Crowther's 1823.

Dr. Emil Fleischer's Hydrofons successfully applied to the propulsion of ships on the Elbe, near Dresden 11 Oct. 1887.

HYGEIOPOLIS (city of health), planned by Dr. B. Ward Richardson, in 1875. A company was proposed for its erection, Jan. 1877. No result.

HYGIENE (Hygeia, goddess of health), see Sanitation. International congresses are held.

HYGROMETER, an instrument for measuring the moisture in the atmosphere. That by Sauvage (who died in 1798) is most employed. It consists of a human hair boiled in caustic lye, and placed on an instrument of absorption. Characterized by Danieli's hygrometer (1820) is much esteemed. M. Crova's new hygrometer, said to be very accurate, described, June, 1882.

HYKSOS, a race, probably of Tatar origin, who overthrew the dynasty of lower Egypt, captured Memphis, and made Avaris (Tanis) the seat of their kingdom. Joseph is supposed to have been vizier to Apopi, one of the Hyksos, or "Shepherd Kings," as they are also called. They were overthrown by Ahmes I. of the 18th dynasty, c. 1700 B.C. See Egypt. XV. Dynasty, &c. sec.

HYMNS. The song of Moses is the most ancient, 1491 B.C. (Exod. xvi.) The Psalms date from about 1000 B.C. to about 444 B.C. (from David to Ezra). The hymns of the Jews were frequently accompanied by instrumental music. Paul (A.D. 64) speaks of Christians adorning one another "in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs" (Col. iii. 16). The composition of hymns for the Christian church is very ancient. The hymns of Dr. Watts (died 1748), of John Wesley (died 1791), and of his brother Charles (died 1788), are used by English churchmen and dissenters.

HYPOPTISM. 697

Death of Mrs. Cousins, author of "The Sands of Time are Sinking" and other hymns, in her 3rd year, June 30, 1906.

Death of Mr. David Sankey, b. 1849, Aug. 14, 1907.

Death of Mr. Albert Midlane, one of the most prolific hymn-writers of the time, and author of "There's a Friend for little children," b. 1821, Feb. 27, 1909.

HYNOTISM (Greek hypnos, sleep) or nervous sleep, terms given by Mr. Braid (in 1843) to a sleep-like condition, produced in a person by steadily fixing his mind on one particular object. Minor surgical operations have been performed without pain on persons in this state. Used successfully in cases of mental hysteria, melancholia, morphinomania, certain neurotic skin diseases, functional neurosis, &c. The lecture by R. Heidenhain, at Breslau 19 Jan. 1889, on "Hypnotism or Animal Magnetism," was translated by L. C. Wooldridge, and published in 1888. See also "Suggestive Therapeutics," by Bernheim, translated by Herter, 1889; Björnström, on Hypnotism, 1892; "Psychotherapeutics," by Tucker, 1891; Binet and Pézé's "Animal Magnetism," 1887; "Hypnotism," by Bramwell in the "Encyclopaedia Medica," vol. v., 1890; Moll's "Hypnotism," 1900, and "The Subliminal Consciousness," by Myers, in the Proceedings of the Soc. Psych. Research, 1892 et seq.

See Mesmerism—Tracts 1898.

"The use of hypnotical suggestion" (the entire concentration of the mind on one subject caused by the suggestion of another person) in medical practice, has been advocated by Bernheim, Beaunis and other foreign physicians, Oct. 1889; but strongly opposed by other eminent physiologists, especially Du Bois Reymond, Oct. 1890.

The first meeting of the International Congress on Hypnotism took place at Paris, Aug. 1889; and, 1889-1892, 1900-1903.

Prof. Germaine's experiments were exhibited at the Aquarium, Westminster, Nov. 1891.

HYPSOMATIC, an instrument for measuring altitudes, invented by F. J. Woolston in 1817; improved by Regnault about 1847.

HYRAZI, Asia, near the Caspian, a province subject to Persia, n.c. 334; held by Parthians, 244. It is now Mazenderan, a Persian province.

HYTHE, Kent, a cinque-port. The haven has been choked up with sand since the end of the 16th century. A school of musketry which still exists was established here in 1834, under the charge of major-gen. Charles Crawford Hay. He resigned in 1857. Railway to Sandgate opened, Oct. 1874. Population, 1601, 5557; 1910 (est.), 6500.
IAMBIC VERSE. mythically named from the poetical elusions of Lambe, an attendant of Metanira, wife of Celtic, king of Sparta. Archilochus is said to have been the first who wrote satirical iambic verses. B.C. 700.

IBERIA, see Georgia and Spain.

IBERUS, a river in N E. Spain, now called Ebro, soch sev. It was very important during the second Punic war. 218—201 B.C.

ICE. Galileo observed ice to be lighter than water, about 1597. See Congelation, where is a notice of the ice-making machines of Harrison and of Siebe. In 1841 there were sixteen companies in Boston, U.S., engaged in exporting ice, brought from Wincham Lake and Fresh and Spy Ponds, about 18 miles from that city. The trade was begun by Mr. Tudor in 1826. 154,540 tons were sent from Boston alone in 1825. 384,123 tons, value 247,3171, imported 1841; 328,867 tons, value 203,1271, (1002; 39,6101 tons, value 811,3011, 1848.

A vessel called The Spring, Captain Clare, went to sea from Yarmouth on March 17, 1822, proceeded to Norway, and, north of Trondhjem, took on board a cargo of about 20,000 tons of ice; arriving in the Thames on May 2, Mr. William Lettow chartered the vessel, which was stopped at the Thames by the custom-house officers, who demanded duty on the ice and detained the ship so long before permitting it to unload that her crews were exhausted by the cold, and the vessel had to sell in small lots, which realised much higher prices.

ICELAND (North Sea), discovered by Norwegian chieftains about 801; according to some accounts, it had been previously visited by a Scandinavian pirate. Population, 1891, 78,470; 1910 (est.), 85,250.

Geographically about 1,060. The annual general assembly was termed Althing, there were four great schools, like universities, founded in the 12th century; and education was general. The great warrior, statesman, and poet, Snorri Stur- jonson was murdered 22 Sept. 1221.

Had a republican government, and a flourishing literature, which was super-intended by Hakon, king of Norway.

Protestantism introduced about 1562.

Thousands perished by famine through failure of the crops. 1574.

A new constitution signed by the king, 5 Jan. 1574, came into operation 1 Aug. when king Christian of Denmark visited Iceland, and the thousandth anniversary of the colonisation was celebrated at the capital, Reykjavik.

Iceland has suffered much by violence eruptions, especially in 1875; and whole districts of pasture land were devastated 30th March, 1757.

Constitutional (by which an independent and responsible minister shall reside in Reykjavik) and other bills adopted; session closed 26 Aug. 1902.

The Althing accepts the bill of the Danish government amending the constitution of Iceland, reported 29 mid Aug. 1903.

Icelandic parliament (Althing) opened for the first time since the extended measure of self-government was bestowed on the island, with a minister residing in Reykjavik, who is practically vice-regent, king Christian's speech received in Iceland, 10 July, 1903.

In furtherance of king Frederick VIII.'s desire after his accession to strengthen the bonds of union between Iceland and Denmark, all the members of the Althing, accompanied by their wives, arrived in Copenhagen as guests of the king and the Danish state; numerous banquets and festivities arranged for the entertainment of the visitors on his visit, of 14 days' duration, is the first official visit of the representatives of the Icelandic nation to Denmark, 17 July.

Completion of the telegraph cable to Iceland from the Shetland Islands 28 Aug.

Shocks of earthquake felt at Akureyri 8 Nov.

The different parties in Iceland claim that that country should become a free state, united with Denmark, but only by a law made by Danish and Icelandic deputies treating on an equal footing, reported 28 Nov.

Visit of king Christian to Iceland, July 1897.

Hundslod, on the IJs Fjord, overwhelmed by an avalanche 7 Nov.

ICENY, a British tribe which inhabited chiefly Suffolk and Norfolk. In 61, while Sueno of Pinnillus was reducing Mona (Anglesey) they marched southwards and destroyed Verulam, London, and other places, with great slaughter of the Romans; but were defeated by Sueno near London, and their leader 'Capua' Bedaeca or Boulicca died or committed suicide.

"ICHI DIEN," I serve, the motto under the plume of ostrich feathers found in the helmet of the king of Iberia, slabs of the beach of Cressey, at which he served as a volunteer in the French army, 26 Aug. 1546. Edward the Black Prince, in respect to his father, Edward III, who commanded that day, though the prince won the battle, adopted the motto, which has since been borne with the feathers, by the heirs to the crown of England.

ICHILOGY, the science of footprints, treats of the impression made in mud or sand by the animals of former ages. Dr. Duncian discovered the footprints of a tortoise in the sandstone of Aminaldale, in 1828; since then numerous discoveries have been made by Owen, Lyell, Huxley, and others.
ICHTHYOLOGY, the science of fish. Eminent authors are Aristotle (384–322 B.C.), Willoughby, Ray, Valenciennes, Cuvier, Owen, Agassiz, &c. Yarrell's "British Fishes" (1839–59) is a classical work; see Fish.

ICONIUM (Syria). Here Paul and Barnabas preached, 38. Solomon the Seljuk founded a kingdom here in 1074, which lasted till 1307, when it was conquered by the Turks. It had been subdued by the Crusaders in 1097 and 1190; see Konia.

ICONOCLASTS (image-breakers). The controversy respecting images (which had been introduced into churches for popular instruction about 300) was begun about 726, and occasioned much disturbance and loss of life in the Eastern Empire. Leo Isauricus published two edicts for demolishing images in churches in that year, and enforced them with great rigour in 730. The defenders of images were again persecuted in 752 and 761, when Constantine forbade his subjects becoming monks. The worship of images was restored by Irene in 780. This schism was the occasion of the second council of Nice, 787. Theophylactus banished all the painters and statuaries from the Eastern Empire, 823. The Iconoclasts were finally excommunicated at the 8th general council at Constantinople, 869–870. This controversy led to the separation of the Greek and Latin churches. Many images in churches were destroyed in Scotland and the Netherlands in the 16th century, and in England during the Reformation and the civil war, 1641–8.

IDAHO, a northern "territory" of the United States of North America, was organised in 1863; as a state, 1890. Capital Boise. Conflicts among the miners at Cour d'Alene, 4 non-union men killed, 11 July; union men victors, state of rebellion declared; several soldiers and unionists killed; martial law; railroads blazed up to 1,000 troops coming. 14, 15 July; insurrection suppressed by president Harrison's proclamation, 15–18 July, 1892. Great fire at Wardner; hundreds homeless, 21 April, 1893. Population in 1900, 164,724; 1910 (est.), 275,000.

IDEALISM, see Philosophy No. of "Nature," 29 Sept. 1808.

IDENTISCOPES, an optical apparatus for combining two photograph portraits into one, sold in 1884. See Composite Portraits.

IDES (Latin Idus), were eight days in the Roman and church calendar, following the Nones. They were reckoned backward. In March, May, July, and October, the 8th Idus was the 8th of the month, the 7th on the 9th, &c., the first, or Id, being the 15th. In the other months the 8th Id fell on the 6th, and the first on the 13th. On the Idas of March (the 15th) 44 B.C. Julius Caesar was assassinated.

IDIOTS. The Idiot Asylum at Earlswood, near Reigate, Surrey, began in 1847. It was chartered, 1862; additional buildings were founded by the prince of Wales, 28 June, 1869. The foundation of the Imbecile Asylum, Caterham, was 1611 by Dr. Brewer, M.P., 17 April, 1869. Idiots Act passed, 1886. Insane in hospitals 1900, 72,207; 1909, 91,591.

IDOLS. Images are mentioned in Gen. xxxi. 19, 30. 1739 B.C. The Jews frequently deserted the worship of God for idols till their captivity, 588 B.C.

Edict of Theodotius for the suppression of idolatry, 392. Idolatry was revived in Britain by the Saxons about 473, but it gave way after the coming of Augustine, in 597. See Iconoclasts, Week.

IDSTEDT (N. Germany). Here the insurgent army of Holstein and Schleswig, commanded by Willisen, was defeated by the Danes, 25 July, 1850.

IDUMÆA, the country of the Edomites, the descendants of Edom, the brother of Jacob: see Gen. xxxvi. Josh. xxiv. 4.

The Edomites prevent the Israelites from passing through their country. They were subdued by David 1040 B.C. They revolt against Ahaziah, 892; and were severely defeated by Amaziah 827 B.C. They join the Chaldeans against Judah, and are anathematized in Psalms xxviii. about 579 B.C. John Hyrcanus, the Macabeus, subjugates and degrades to incorporate them with the Jews. Heed the great son of Antipater an Isthmian, king of Judah 15 B.C.

ILLINOIS, a western state of North America, was settled by the French in 1745; acquired by the British, 1763; made a territory, 1809; and admitted into the Union as a state, 3 Dec. 1818. Capital, Springfield. Population, 1890, 4,321,400; 1910 (est.), 5,625,330. See Railway Accidents, 11 Aug. 1887.

By flooding of a coal mine 75 men drowned 15 Feb. 1883. Convent and school at Belleville burnt, about 27 young persons perish 30 Jan. 1884. Great fire at Keokuk's flour mills at Litchfield, estimated loss, $1,000,000 21 March, 1894. Shawneetown destroyed by a flood, 1,000 deaths 3 April, 1849. Fatal surprise at Viroqua, troops sent, 16 Oct., "race riot; attempt to Lynch two negroes; consequent collision with the troops results in two men being killed and about 20 wounded; the two negroes were afterwards murdered, 14, 15 Aug. 1898.

ILLUMINATED BOOKS. The practice of adopting ornaments, drawings, and emblematical figures, and even portraits, to enrich MSS., is of great antiquity. Varro wrote the lives of 700 illustrious Romans, which he embellished with their portraits, about 70 B.C. Flum. Nat. Hist. Some beautiful missiles and other works were printed in the 15th and 16th centuries seq., and fine imitations have lately appeared.

ILLUMINATI, heretics who sprang up in Spain, where they were called Alombrados, about 1575. After their suppression in Spain, they appeared in France. One of their leaders was friar Anthony Bachel. They professed to obtain grace and perfection by their sublime manner of prayer. A secret society bearing this name, opposed to tyranny and priestcraft, was founded at Ingolstadt, Bavaria, by Dr. Adam Weishaupt, in May, 1776, and was suppressed in 1784–5.

Johnathan Southworth, who proclaimed her conception of the Messiah, and had a multitude of followers; she died 27 Dec. 1844; see W. Thom., see Tithes. Louis XVII., see France, list of sovereigns.

Impressionistes, a name given to artists who aim at producing rapid unstudied effects independent of the conventions of art, such as Manet, Duret, and others in France. In England Mr. Whistler exhibited such pictures in 1877, including moonlight scenes, &c., painted in two days, showing great sense of colour. For Mr. Ruskin's criticisms see Trials, 1878. The Impressionists are also characterized as illustrators of their own times by pure art; M.M. Manet, Durand, Ricol, Degas, and Renoir, are French examples; they exhibited in London in June, 1882 and since, especially in April, 1889.

Impression of Seamen, affirmed by Sir M. Foster to be of ancient practice. The stat. 2 Rich. II, speaks of impression as a matter well known, 1278. The first commission for it was issued 20 Edw. III. 1355 Pressing, either for the sea or land service, declared to be illegal by the parliament, Dec. 1641, but practised till present times. Impression was not resorted to in the Russian war, 1853-5.

Inclosure Act, to facilitate the inclosure and improvement of commons, appointing commissioners, &c., 8 & 9 Vict. c. 118, passed 8 Aug. 1845; another act passed in 1879; see Commons.

INCOME TAX. In 1312, parliament granted a subsidy of two-twentieths from the commons, and two-thirteenths from the clergy, to enable the king to enter on a war with France. In Dec. 1798, Mr. Pitt proposed and carried, amid great opposition, resolutions for increased taxes "as an aid for the prosecution of the war" with France. Graduated duties on income imposed, beginning with 62 per cent on the act passed 5 Jan. 1799. The "property tax" passed which levied a rate of 5 per cent on all incomes above 150. and lower rates on smaller incomes. 11 Aug. 1803. increased to 64 per cent. 1805; 10 per cent, embracing the dividends at the bank, 1869.

INDIA OR HINDEOSTAN. THE HINDOES HISTORY ABBREVIATES ITS ORIGIN TO A PERIOD AGES BEFORE THE ORDINARY CHRONOLOGIES, THE TYRIANS, EGYPTIANS, AND ROMANS CARRIED ON COMMERCE WITH INDIA.
The expansion, consolidation, and corruption of India were greatly effected during the reign of Queen Victoria, 1837 to 1901. Native states were reduced by British force and by treaty. The Great Indian Rebellion, under Sir Roger Casement, was put down with great severity, and the Mahommedans, in the 18th century, saw the beginning of British India, vol. i., published, March, 1899.

Religious: The pre-historic Hindu or Vedite system was reformed and superseded by Buddhism about B.C. 500. The reformed and modified Vedite system, primarily Brahmanism, was restored about A.D. 500. and produced wide spread Mahommedan influence in the 17th century; see: Population in footnote, below.

Provinces, Bengal, Bombay, Madras, Punjab, N.W. India, Assam, and Burmah. Northern India is said to have been invaded and conquered by an Arian race from central Asia, between B.C. 1500 and 1000.

Invasion of Alexander the great: king Porus is defeated, submit, and retains his kingdom.

Irrigation of the Mahabharata, under Mahum Ghuzni, 1001-24. He captured Sumnat, A.D. 1024. Exclusion of the house of Ghuzni, 1036, rule of the slave dynasty of Delhi, 1206-28; of the house of Tutkaghal, 1288-1412; of the Nyvars, 1412-50; of the house of Lodii, 1459-1526.

Pathan, or Afghan empire, founded by Alexander of Ghuzni, 1236; he died, 1237. The Mogul Tatars, under the rule of Timur, 1300-1377; of Tamerlane, invade Hindustan, and take Delhi; defeat the Indian army, 1565; conquer Hindustan, and establish his empire, 1566.

The Cape route to India discovered by Vasco da Gama; he left Lisbon, 7 July, 1497, arrived at Calicut, 20 May, 1498, and returned to Lisbon, Aug. 2, 1499.

The first European settlement (Portuguese) established by him at Cochin (S. Coast). 1502.

Albuquerque governor-general, 1508; dies at Goa, 1514. Conquest of India completed by the sultan Bahar, 1526.

Mogul empire, founded by Ghiyas-ud-Din, 1290; he died, 1297. The Mogul Tartars, under the rule of Tamerlane, invade Hindustan, and take Delhi; defeat the Indian army, 1565; conquer Hindustan, and establish his empire, 1566.

Mahomed Shah dies; 1748.

The Mogul empire now became merely nominal, independent sovereignty being formed by petty princes. In 1761, Shah Alam II., attacking the English, was defeated at Patna, 12 Jan. In 1764, after the battle of Buxar, he was thrown upon the protection of the English, who established him at Allahabad. After the victory at Delhi in 1803, Lord Lake restored the aged monarch to nominal sovereignty, who died desponded at his death to his son, Akbar Shah. Akbar died in 1837, and was succeeded by the last king of Delhi (his son), who received a pension of about 1,250,000. per annum.

[He joined the mutiny in 1857; was tried in 1858, and transported to Rangoon; died there, 1 Nov. 1862.]

INDIAN NATIONAL CONGRESS, advocating legislative and administrative changes in favour of the natives, met at Bombay, end of Dec., 1885, and annually since. Not favoured by Brahmanics. See India. 1885 & seq.

INDIANS occupying the south-western parts of the United States, termed Indians, in direct connection with the government, were numbered at 285,506 in 1881; 291,012 in 1882; 291,525 in 1883; 290,890 in 1885; 287,694 in 1887. There are the Cherokees (22,000), the Chickasaws (18,000), the Choctaws (13,530), the Chickasaws (3,000); and the Sioux (3,000). A large proportion are in comfortable circumstances, and have schools and churches; other tribes are the Delawares, Sac, Foxes, Shawnees, and Ioways. During the American civil war in 1861, the Chickasaws joined the confederates, who permitted two Chickasaw delegates to sit in congress, the first being Sampson Folsom and Eastman Lo- man; but the principal chief of the Chickasaws, on 4 May, 1861, issued a proclamation of neutrality, which was maintained with great difficulty. In a war provoked by outrages general Sheridan defeated the Indians, and they surrendered unconditionally Dec. 1868. Negotiations were undertaken by the Indians had no effect, and the war was renewed June, 1869. As a chastisement for murders and other outrages major Baker killed 173 Indians, including women and children, Jan., 1870. In June following a deputation of eminent chiefs was received by the president at Washington, and promises and presents were made to them. On 24 June, 1870, prince Arthur (afterwards duke of Connaught) visited the villages of the Canadian Indians, and was made a chief of the six nations. A deputation of Indian chiefs was well received by the president at Washington, Jan., 1870. A meeting of delegates from various tribes met at Omemoo, 5-17.

INDIRECT CLAIMS.

Good Hope, in 1497, it was gradually superseded by the eastern indigo, got from the indicof era. The mention of indigo occurs in English statutes in 1581. Its cultivation was begun in Carolina in 1747. The quantity imported into Great Britain in 1840 was 5,581,269 lbs.; in 1850, 70,482 cwt.; in 1860, 82,109 cwt.; in 1871, 106,307 cwt.; in 1881, 81,083 cwt.; cwt. 1890, 31,877 cwt.; 1902, 30,417 cwt.; 1904, 20,759 cwt.; 1905, 7,641 cwt.; 1906, 8,444 cwt.

After long-continued experiments, especially by prof. A. Baeyer, the dye has been prepared artificially from its chemical elements in coal tar. In 1885-86 Professor H. R. Rosewe, at the Royal Institution, proved that the properties of the artificial and natural indigo were identical.

27 May, 1881.

INDIRECT CLAIMS, see Alabama, Washington.

INDU, a metal discovered in the arsenical pyrites of Freiberg by F. Reich and T. Reith in 1863. Its name is due to its giving an indigo blue ray in its spectrum.

INDIVIDUALISM. the principle maintained by Herbert Spencer and others in opposition to too much state control and socialism.

INDO-CHINA, a name given to central Asia. The countries under French government or protection are Annam, Cochinh China, Cambodge, and Tonquin. Burmah is subject to Great Britain, and Siam is independent.

INDORE, a province of British India; the principal native rulers have been the Maharatta chiefs, named Holkar, rivals of the Scindhias at Gwalior. Rao Holkar received a grant of territory from the British in 1753. After severe conflicts the Maharatta chiefs were finally quelled in 1818. The town of Indore, founded in 1767, was destroyed by Scindiah after a battle on 14 Oct. 1801. The maharajah Shivaja Rao Holkar died 17 June, 1866. Succeeded by his son, Tuckaji Rao Holkar, who was present at queen Victoria's jubilee in London in 1887. Indore was visited by the vicarous, the marquis of Lansdowne, 24 Nov. 1891. The maharajah Shivaji Rao Holkar in ill-health, abdicated in favour of his son, Tulogi Rao, aged 12, 31 Jan. 1903. Population, 1901, 850,690.

INDUCTION of electric currents, discovered by Faraday, and announced in his "Experimental Researches," published in 1831-2. Ruhmkord's magneto-electric induction coil was constructed in 1850. See under Electricity.

INDUCTIVE PHILOSOPHY, based on the results of observations and experiments, really common sense, is especially expounded by Bacon in the "Novum Organum," published 1620. Wm. Harvey (1578-1657) endeavoured "to search out the secrets of nature by the way of experiment." See Blood.

INDULGENCES in the early church were the moderation of ecclesiastical punishment. The papal system for the absolution of sin, commenced by Leo, III. about 800, was granted in the 11th century by Gregory VII, and by Urban II, and by others, in the 12th century as rewards to the crusaders. Clement V. was the first pope who made public sale of indulgences, 1313. In 1457, Leo X. published general indulgences throughout Europe, and the resistance to them led to the Reformation.

INDUSTRIAL AND PROVIDENT SOCIETIES ACTS, 1852 and 1862, were amended by acts passed 1867, 1871, and 1876. Acts consolidated in 1891; amended, 1895.

INDUSTRIAL DWELLINGS. see Cottage.

INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITIONS in Great Britain are now frequent. One for South London was opened at Lambeth, 1 March, 1864; for North London, at Earl Russell, at the Agricultural hall, Islington, 17 Oct. 1864; for West London, at the Floral hall, Covent-garden, 1 May, 1865; for the city of London, at Guildhall, 6 March, 1866; one was opened at York, 24 July, 1866. The Workmen's International Exhibition, Agricultural hall, London, was opened 10 July; closed, 1 Oct 1870; one by the Article club at the Crystal palace opened by the duke of Connaught, 30 May, 1894; others since.

INDUSTRIAL FREEDOM LEAGUE, founded 1903.

INDUSTRIAL PROPERTY: an international conference for its protection was opened at Paris, 6 March, 1883, others since.

INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS ACT, 21 & 22 Vict. c. 38 (1857), was enacted to make better provision for the care and education of vagrant, destitute, and disorderly children. Another act was passed, 1891. These acts were consolidated by an act passed in Aug. 1890; amended 1894. Forty-seven of these schools had been certified under these acts up to 29 Sept. 1894. The act was extended to Ireland, 1895. See also Reformatory Schools.

INDUSTRIAL VILLAGES: the formation of these by the removal of workmen from towns, was proposed at a meeting of the Society of Arts, 26 June, 1883.

INDUSTRY, see Scientific. A conference for the christian organisation of industry met in Holborn town hall, 29 Nov. 1893.

INFLAIBILITY OF THE POPE, in regard to faith and morals, was decreed by the Vatican Council, and promulgated, 18 July, 1870. The doctrine was much opposed in Germany, and led to the constitution of the church named "Gia Catholics," which are, Mr. Gladstone's pamphlets, "The Vatican Dogmas in their bearing on Civil Allegiance," published Nov. 1874, and "Vaticanism," in Feb. 1875.

INFANTICIDE, especially female, was very prevalent in barbarous countries. Lord Macartney stated that 20,000 infants were killed annually; it gradually decreased in India. On 12 Nov. 1851, Mr. Raikes induced the Chohan chiefs to agree to resolutions against it, and a great meeting in the Punjab was held for the same purpose, 14 Nov. 1853. Much suspicion was caused in London in 1867 through the deaths of children farmed out to improper persons. The agitation revived, June, 1870. Margaret Waters was convicted of the murder of John Cowen, an illegitimate infant, by poison and neglect, 23 Sept. 1876. She had adopted about 500 of the children, revolving a few pounds as premium; in four years many had died. John and Catherine Barns, of Tranmere, near Birkenhead, convicted of manslaughter (see Trials), 29 Oct. 1876. The Infant Life Protection Act passed 25 July, 1872; amended, 1897. Female infanticide prohibited in China about June, 1873. Amelia E. Peter, a baby farmer, convicted of the murder of an infant child, the bodies having been thrown into the Thames at Reading, 22 May; executed, 10 June, 1876. Two women "baby-farmers" executed at Holloway, 3 Feb. 1903; Daisy Lord, condemned to death in July, 1908, for the murder of her illegitimate child; sentence afterwards commuted to penal servitude for life.

INFANTRY, foot soldiers; their organisation much improved during the wars of Charles V. and Francis I., in the 16th century. The British army comprised 90 regiments of regular infantry in 1858, when the Coldstreamers raised a battalion termed the 100th. The number 100, the old rifle brigade until 1881 included the nine regiments formerly in the pay of the East India company, and several colonial corps. In 1871 the principle of localisation, the linking of battalions, and short service, came into operation; in 1881 the existing 100 regiments and the rifle brigade were reorganised, forming 71 territorial regiments of the line, each regiment comprising usually 2 battalions of its own and linked battalions of the militia and volunteers. The army scheme of reorganisation introduced by Mr. Bredinck, March 1901, increases the strength of the infantry and raises the number of militia, Marshall-Ivory (Baron Buscombe) said the British infantry is the finest in the world; happily, there is not much of it." In 1905, 101,035; in 1901, 151,126 (53,000 stationed in India). Mounted infantry were largely and successfully employed in the operations of the war in S. Africa, 1889-1902.

INFANT SCHOOLS began in New Lanark, Scotland, in 1817; in London in 1818.

INFANTS’ RELIEF ACT, passed 7 Aug. 1874, to amend the law relating to contracts made by persons under age. The powers of wives and widows in respect to the care and training of their children were somewhat enlarged in 1825, more so in 1873, and very much more by a bill brought in by Mr. James Bryce, read a second time 5 March, 1874. Guardianship of Infants Act passed, 1874.

INFECTIOUS DISEASES. By an act passed 30 Aug. 1884, notification of any person suffering from infectious disease is required to be given by the nearest relative or any person in charge, and also by the medical attendant to the nearest authority of the district; extension of same act passed, 20 June, 1897. An act to prevent the spread of infectious disease was passed 4 Aug. 1869.

INFERNAL MACHINES, see France, 1800, 1845, and 1858; Baltic, note; Dalmatia; Russia, 1840-4; Liverpool, 1841; Explosives; India, 1868.

INFIRMARIES. Ancient Rome had no houses for the cure of the sick; diseased persons were carried to the temple of Esculapius for cure. Institutions for the accommodation of travellers, the indigent, and sick were founded by the emperor Julian about 362; and infirmaries or hospitals were frequently built to cathedrals and monasteries. The emperor Louis II. caused infirmaries situated on mountains to be visited, 555. In Jerusalem the knights and brothers attended on the sick. There were hospitals at Constantinople, in the 11th century. The oldest mention of physicians and surgeons established in infirmaries occurs in 1437. Beckmann; see Hospitals. Parish workhouse infirmaries established, 1867.

INFLUENZA, a name given in Italy about 1541 to an epidemic febrile catarrh with variations, probably known to the ancient.

It prevailed in Europe in 1650, and has since frequently appeared, generally commencing in Russia and then spreading over the continent. It appeared in Britain in 1762 and frequently since, especially in 1820-3, 1826-7, and 1847. It appeared at Paris in 1875-7, and at Berlin, 1872-4. In Oct. 1879, it was severe in St. Petersburg, and thence spread over Europe, reaching Great Britain, Canada and the United States, Jan. 1880, causing indirectly the deaths of several eminent persons. In the spring, the disease was severe in India and Australia. In 1879 the disease was severe in Portugal and in London and other parts of England, and also on the Continent. The disease reappeared in Jan. 1882, in the same month in London the general mortality was much increased, all classes being attacked. The death of the duke of Clarence and Avondale, 14 Jan. 1882, was attributed to pneumonia following influenza. The epidemic of 1889-90, by Dr. Parsons, issued by government, 1884-5. Moderate outbreak in London, Feb. 1893, many cases autumn and winter, 1893-94; epidemic in London; prevalent in United States, 1893-94, again in London and other parts, Jan. 1895, and since.

INFORMERS, upon penal statutes, compounding with defendants without leave of the court, were punishable with fine and pillory, by 18 Eliz. c. 5 (1576). Their share of a penalty was regulated by 2 & 3 Vict. c. 71 (1830).

INFUSORIA, see Animalcules.

INGESTRE HALL, Staffordshire, destroyed by fire 12 Oct. 1882. It was built in 1676. Many valuable portraits, &c., were destroyed.

INGOU, a river rising in the Caucasus and falling into the Black Sea. Omar Pasha, marching to the relief of Kars, crossed this river on 6 Nov. 1855, with 10,000 men, and attacked the Russians, 12,000 strong, who, after a struggle, retreated with the loss of 400 men. The Turks had 68 killed and 242 wounded. Kars, however, was not saved.

INK. The ancient black inks were composed of soot and ivory black, and Vitruvius and Pliny mention lamp-black; but they had the taint of various colours, as red, gold, silver, and purple. Red ink was made of vermilion and gum. Indian Ink was brought from China, and must have been in use by the people of the east from the earliest ages. Invisible, or Sympathetic Inks, were known at early periods. Ovid (A.D. 2) teaches young women to write with new milk. Receipts for preparing invisible ink were given by Peter Borel, in 1653, and by Le Mort, in 1669. Beckmann.

INKERMANN (Crimea). The Russian army (about 60,000) having received reinforcements, and being encouraged by the presence of the granddukes Michael and Nicholas, attacked the British (8000) near the old fort of Inkermann, before daybreak, 5 Nov. 1854. They were kept at bay for six hours till the arrival of 6000 French. The Russians were then repulsed, leaving 9000 killed and wounded.
INLAND NAVIGATION.

The loss of the allies was 402 killed, 152 wounded, and 191 missing. Sir George Cathcart, and generals Strangways, Godlie, and Torrens, were among the slain. On 15 Nov. 1855, an explosion of about 100,000 lbs of gunpowder occurred near Inkermann, and caused great loss of life.

INLAND NAVIGATION, see Canals.

INLAND REVENUE BOARD was constituted in Feb. 1839. It comprises the boards of Excise, Stamps, and Taxes (which see). The law respecting the inland revenue amended 1871. Total inland revenue, 1865-7, 64,300,000l. 1868-9, 93,500,000l. 1875-6, 85,400,000l. 1898-9, 96,350,000l.

INNOCENTS' DAY. 28 Dec. in the western church; 29 Dec. in the Greek or eastern church; see Childerahan.

INXS at Rome were regulated by laws; and Edward III, enacted that they should be subjected to inquiry, 1355. See Inquis, and Inquisitions.

INNSBRUCK, capital of the Tyrol, captured by Maurice of Saxony in 1552; by the Bavarians in 1703; by the French and Bavarians, 1805. Much fighting took place in 1866, and Innbruck changed masters several times, being finally taken by the Austrians, 12 Aug.

INNS OF COURT (London) were established at different periods, in some degree as colleges for teaching the law. Annual revenue in 1872 sold to be about 25,000l. See Barristers.

The Temple founded, and the church built by Knights Templars, 1128.

The Inner and Middle Temple made inns of law about 1340; the Outer about (London) 1350.

INOCULATION, see Small Pox. Lady Mary Wortley Montagu introduced inoculation from smallpox to England from Turkey. In 1718 she had her son inoculated at Adrianople with success. She was allowed to have it first tried in England on seven condemned criminals, 1721; and in 1722 two of the royal family were inoculated. The practice was preached against by many of the bishops and clergy until 1752. Dr. Mead practised inoculation very successfully up to 1755, and Dr. Dunsdale, of London, inoculated Catherine H., empress of Russia, in 1768. Of 500 who were inoculated in 1797-99, only three died. An inoculation hospital was established in 1749. Vaccine inoculation was introduced by Dr. Jenner, 21 Jan. 1798; he had discovered its virtue in 1790, and had been making experiments on it during three years. Inoculation was forbidden by law in 1830. Dr. A. E. Wright's typhoid vaccine elaborated in 1890, introduced in the army, reported, June, 1892; satisfactory results obtained at Ladyest, 1890-1900, reported, 5 Sept. 1902; see also Times.

INSECTS. 9 Oct. 1903. M. Halfkine's method of inoculation with cholera and plague used successfully in India; see Brown, Dr. Kitasato's method of treating dysentery by serum inoculation very successul, 1805-93. See Vaccination, Sheep, Hydrophobia, and Diphtheria.

INQUESTS, see Coroner.

INQUISTION or HOLY OFFICE. Previous to Constantine (300), heresy and spiritual offences were punished by excommunication only; but shortly after his death capital punishments were added, and inquisitions were appointed by Theodosius, 382. Priscillian was put to death in 384 by the emperor Maximus. Justinian decreed the doctrine of the four holy synods as to the holy scriptures and their canons to be observed as laws, 529; hence the penal code against heretics. About 800 the power of the western bishops was enlarged, and courts were established for trying and punishing spiritual offenders, even with death; the punishment being termed in Spain auto-da-fe, "an act of faith." In the 12th century many heresies arose, and during the crusades against the Albigenses, Gregory IX., in 1223, established by rules the inquisitorial missions sent out by Innocent III., 1210-15, and committed them to the Dominicans. Pierre da Verona (styled Peter Martyr), the first inquisitor who burnt heretics, assassinated by an ascended gondolier, 6 April, 1552, was canonized.

Pierre de Castelhau sent against the Albigenses, 1210; St. Dominie made the first inquisitor-general.

The Inquisition constituted by Gregory IX., 1232, established in Aragon, 1233; Venice, 1249; France, 1255; Castle.

The Inquisition revived by a bull 1 Nov. 1478.

The Holy Office was reestablished in Spain by Ferdinand and Isabella; Treroncana inquisitor-general.

Nearly 300 persons burnt in Alxandria, and 17,000 suffer other penalties.

"Instructions" of the new tribunal promulgated.

New articles were added

Established in Portugal.

The establishment resisted in Naples, and only introduced into other parts of Italy with jealous limitations by the temporal power.

New ordinances in 81 articles compiled by the inquisitor-general Valdrez.

Suppressed in France by edict of Xantès, 1569.

Carneschi executed at Rome, 1567, and Galileo compelled to abjure his philosophical opinions, 1633.

Louis XIV. revoked the edict of Xantès, but refused to introduce the Inquisition.

20 persons perished at an auto-da-fe at Con.

Gabriel Malagrida, a Jesuit, burnt at Lisbon, 1761.

A woman accused of making a contract with the devil burnt at Seville, 5 Nov. 1758.

The tribunal abolished in Tuscany and Lombardy.

Suppressed in Spain by Napoleon, 4 Dec., 1808, and ordered by the Cortes. 12 Feb., 1813.

Restored by Ferdinand VII. 24 July, 1814.

Finally abolished by the Cortes, 1820.

[Lavrent states that in 280 years the total number of persons put to death in Spain by the Inquisition was about 750,000; 250,000 were subjected to other punishments.]

INSANITY, see Lunatics.

INSECTS. About 200,000 species known, Jan. 1857. An exhibition of these creatures, illustrating their structure, food, and habits, was opened in the gardens of the Tuileries, at Paris, 7 Sept., 1874; at the Westminster Museum, London, 1878; and in the Zoological gardens, Recent's park, 1881. About 8,000 new species of insects named annually. Total estimated 10,000,000 forms, 1892. See Entomology.
INSOLVENCY.

The first insolvent act was passed in 1699, but it was of limited operation; a number of acts of more extensive operation were passed at various periods, and particularly in the reign of George III. The benefit of the act known as the "Statute of Insolvent Life," was taken in England by 50,733 insolvents from the 1st of this year, in 1845, to March, 1827, a period of thirteen years. Since then, the acts relating to insolventy have been several times amended. Persons not traders, or being traders whose debts are less than 300l, might petition the court of bankruptcy, and propose compositions, and have the premium fixed. From all processes against the personal property, by 6 Vict. c. 110 (1832). In 1861, by a new bankrupt act, the business of the insolvent debtors' court was transferred to the court of bankruptcy; and a number of imprisoned debtors were released in Nov. 1861. See Bankrupts.

INSPIRATION.

The term used in theology, derived from the Vulgate translation of 2 Tim. iii. 16, to denote the influence of the Holy Spirit upon the mind of the writers of the Scriptures, "which makes these Scriptures the Word of God." Orthodox theologians all ascribe divine assistance to the writer of the Old and the New Testaments, but differ as to its extent, degree, and manner of interpretation. To these are opposed the theologians of the more modern school, who hold that "the Bible is the book which contains the record of God's dealings with a chosen race, and through them with mankind... it is the book which contains the gospel of His Son and the lessons of salvation. It is not all of the same value, it is not all written on the same level... much of it is written from the imperfect moral and spiritual standpoint of times of ignorance." Others hold that the spirit, ideas, and doctrines of the Bible only are inspired, not the strict form or letter. Prior to the Reformation no definite Church doctrine existed on the subject of inspiration, nor is it a doctrine of the Roman Church. Calvinus (1541-1689) advanced the theory, which became the accepted orthodox Protestant doctrine, "that nothing exists in the Scriptures which is not divinely sug-ggested and inspired." This belief was expanded by the advocates of "plenary inspiration," who asserted that every word, syllable, and letter of the Bible was inspired by God. See Hyper Criticism.

INSURANCE.

The origin of insurance is unknown; it has, on the authority of Scotoines, been ascribed to the Emperor Charlemagne, A.D. 843. Marine insurance was in use in the beginning of the 15th century, and arose from the custom of merchants insuring their vessels and goods against the perils of the sea. Growing out of this form of protection to property was the insurance of the life of the merchant, who usually accompanied the ship, and of the captain of the vessel, both being liable to capture by Moorish and Turkish pirates. The persons to whom the premium was paid were termed underwriters, who agreed to pay a fixed amount, the sum assured, if the person insured died within a year; the document specifying the contract was called the policy, the name it still bears. The premium charged appears to have been not less than 5 per cent. of the sum assured, irrespective of the age of the insurer. In 1574, Robert Chandler, under a patent granted to him by queen Elizabeth, established a chamber of insurance in London to regulate all contracts of insurance. This chamber was destroyed by the great fire of 1666. The earliest life policy of which particulars have been preserved was issued 15 June, 1685, at the "Office of Insurance, within the Royal Exchange, London. This policy gave rise to the first authenticated died claim. It was decided that William Gyblins should die within twelve months the underwriters, thirteen in number, who guaranteed sums from 23l. to 50l. each, should pay to Richard Martin 383l. 6s. 6d., the premium for which was 8 per cent. Gyblins died 28 May, 1584, and the underwriters refused to pay on the ground that he had survived twelve months. The commissioners appointed to determine such cases decided that the twelve months mentioned in the policy meant a calendar year, and ordered payment to be made by the underwriters; on appeal to the court of admiralty, the decision of the commissioners was upheld. 1577. Life insurance as a provision for a wife and children was first known in the Netherlands; policies as collateral security for money advanced for the purchase of appointments were much in vogue in the 17th and 18th centuries. The earliest known life insurance office, named the "Society of Assurance for Widows and Orphans," was established in 1689, and was of the nature of an assessment company up to this time being underwritten. In principle it was to consist of 2,000 members, who were to contribute 5l. each on entry, to pay for the first claim, and the same sum on each subsequent death among the members, 50l. being thus provided for the widow and children. The society came to an end in 1712. The Amicable was started in 1719 by a charter from Queen Anne, 25 July, 1760; the number of its members was to be 2,000, each paying 10l. entrance fee, and an annual subscription of 6l. 13s. Amongst the representatives of those who died in the first year one-sixth of the contributions were to be divided; one-third the second year, and proportionately until in the fifteenth and all subsequent years five-sixths of the contributions were to be divided, the remainder, with all profits made by the sale of annuities, being accumulated as a reserve fund. In 1807, the contribution was made to vary with the age of entry. The Amicable existed as an independent institution until 1866, when it was transferred to the Norwich Union Life Insurance Society, its policies being finally merged, 30 June, 1886, with those of the Norwich Union. Numerous life offices of the assessment type came into existence shortly after the foundation of the Amicable, all of which, except the Amicable, collapsed at the bursting of the South Sea Bubble, 1720. The London Assurance Corporation and the London Exchange Assurance Corporation, chartered in 1720, received additional powers authorising them to transact life business; these two institutions are now the oldest life offices extant. The Equitable, founded 1760, was the first life insurance office to transact its business on a scientific basis. The Scottish life assurance companies, founded at the time, were peculiar in the time of making the assurance, securing at death the payment of a definite sum, the rate of premium being regulated by the age at entry. Owing to the Northampton tables of mortality, which overestimated the death-rate percentage, having been used as the basis of calculation, a surplus accumulated in many claims, and the Scottish companies, the former of which is mentioned above, the latter 40 other offices; the Albert failing for 8,000,000.

The Life Assurance Companies Act, 1870, passed to protect the public against unsound companies, requires each office to publish a statement of its affairs in the form of an annual balance sheet, and a periodical valuation of its liabilities and securities, the sum of 200,000, must also be deposited with the board of trade by every new company as a guarantee to its policy holders. A scheme for effecting life insurances through the medium of the post office was inaugurated in 1804, the amount insured being not less than 5l, nor more than 100l. for either sex between the ages of 14 and 65, and 5l. on children under 14, and was carried on to a large extent in life policies of small amount, the premiums varying from 5d. to 56d. per week; the Prudential, founded 1848, which has a very extensive business of this class, is the largest office of the kind, its funds exceeding 30,000,000.
An early attempt to guarantee fidelity of employees by this method was made in 1810. The fidelity office, The Guarantee Society, was established in 1810, the Provident Clerks Guarantee in 1815, the Law Guarantee and Trust in 1828. Among the developments of modern life assurance are endorsement policies; policies at reduced and modified premiums; insurance without medical examination, the sum under 2000l. must also be deposited with the office and since adopted by other companies; annuities; partnership policies; policies as trusts for married women in connection with the Married Women's Property Acts of 1870 and 1882; and the Married Women's Policies Insurance (Scotland) Act of 1880; insurance for special classes, as the Clergy Mutual, founded in 1820, the University of London Temperance, 1835; the United Kingdom Temperance, 1840; and the Abstinence and General, 1852, which grants special advantages to vegetarians.
Insurance against accident has largely increased as a result of the Workmen's Compensation Acts, 1897 and 1900. The coupon system entitles persons transacted under the most special cases, in newspapers, diaries, railway guides, &c., continuing accident coupons, to the payment of certain sums for injuries specified. Special risks are provided against by insurances effected with various offices, such as the National Burglary Insurance Company, 1892, which issues a combination burglary and fire policy, as well as special policies for the use of victuallers, cyclists, and the army; school epidemics can also be insured against in certain offices. The first Mortality Table was prepared by Halley, astronomer-royal of Eng-lnd, 1693; the first table of premiums used by the Equitable Society was prepared from the mortality of the year 1731 by John Dodson, author of the "Mathematical Repository," who, with Robert Simpson, was the founder of that society, which later adopted the "Northampton" tables, constructed by Dr. Price from statistics of the Church of All Saints, Hackney, collected since 1735-80. Joshua Milne, actuary to the Sun Office, constructed the "Carlisle" table, based on the population of the parishes of St. Mary and St. Guthrie, Carlisle, in 1870 and 1875. The Equitable assurance table was compiled by Griffith Davies, F.R.S., 1825. In 1835, a committee of actuaries collected the data of a number of offices by the system of investigations in 1843. The Institute of Actuaries, founded in 1835 (incorporated by royal charter in 1834), published in 1840 a table compiled on the basis of the experience of 21 insurance companies; tables deduced from these results by Drs.
Sprague were published in 1852. A vast business in life assurance has transacted through the Mutual Insurance Company of New York being the largest in the world. A feature in American insurance is the tontine system (which see), which is in extensive operation. Insurance offices are under state control, and are required to maintain a standard of solvency, the company being compelled to close if its assets are not sufficient to cover its liabilities according to the legal estimate. Fire Insurance appears to have had its origin in Anglo-Saxon times in connection with the gilds, the extent rules of some of these speculating that in consideration of certain contributions, the members guaranteed each other against loss by fire, water, robbery, and other contingencies. The oldest fire insurance company is the Sun, founded in 1710. See also Lloyd's and Lloyd's

INTENDMENT OF CRIMES. In cases of treason, wounding, burglary, &c., intention proved was made as punishable as crime completed, by 25 Geo. II. 1754. The rigour was modified by Sir Robert Peel's revision of the statutes, 1-10 Geo. IV. 1823-29.

INTERDICTION or ECCLESIASTICAL CENSURE, seldom decreed in Europe till the time of Gregory VII. 1073, but often afterwards. When a prince was excommunicated, all his subjects retaining their allegiance were excommunicated also, and the clergy were forbidden to perform any part of divine service, or any clerical duties, save the baptism of infants, and taking the confessions of dying penitents. In 1170, pope Alexander put all England under an interdict; and when king John was excommunicated in 1208, the kingdom lay under a papal interdict for six years. England was put under an interdict, on Henry VIII. shaming of the pope's sentence, 1539; and another pope, St. Victor V., published a crusade against queen Elizabeth of England in 1538; see Excommunication.

INTEREST, see Usury. The word interest was first used in an act of parliament of the 21st James I. 1623, wherein it was made to signify a lawful increase by way of compensation for the use of money lent. The rate fixed by the act was 8l. for the use of 100l. for a year, in place of usury at 10l. before taken. The Commonwealth lowered the rate to 6l. in 1651, confirmed in 1660; and by an act of the 13th of queen Anne, 1713, it was reduced to 6l. The restraint being found prejudicial to commerce was somewhat relaxed in 1839, and was totally removed by 17 & 18 Vict. c. 90 (1854).

INTERIM OF AUGSBURG, a decree issued by the emperor Charles V. in 1548, with the view of attempting to reconcile the Catholics and Protestants, in which it entirely failed. It was revoked in 1552. The term Interim has been applied to other decrees and treaties.

INTERMEZZI, light dramatic entertainments, introduced between the acts of a tragedy, comedy, or farce; opera; or burlesque. They became more important in the 16th century. Those connected with Bardi's "Amico Fido," 1589, were very fine.

INTERMITTENT FILTRATION of Sewage, a process much advocated by Professor E. Frankland and others, in 1875, and stated to have been successful at Merthyr Tydfil.

INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF ACADEMIES proposed at Gothenburg in 1868; met in Paris 10 to 20 April, 1901; 18 constituent bodies represented (British delegates, sir Michael Foster, sir Augustus R. Bliss, sir Norman Lockyer, prof. Bay Leaf-inder, and others); M. Darbois, president (M. Berthelet, M. Gaston Bassier, sir Michael Foster, M, de Goede, and Dr. Mommsen, hon. president). The association includes 2 divisions, letters and science, which meet separately, the general assembly afterwards sitting in congress to discuss and act on their decisions; triennial meeting held in London, 1904.

INTERNATIONAL LAW. The professorship of international law, at Cambridge, endowed by bequest of Dr. Wm. Whewell, master of Trinity College, 1857. The Association for the Reform and Codification of the Law of Nations first met at Brussels, 10 Oct. 1873;

The Institute of International Law was organised at Ghent and Bremen, May 1894, and at M. Moyer, in 1875. It has since met at Geneva, 1874; the Hague, 1875; Zurich, 1876; Paris, 1878; and frequently at other places since then; Brussels, 15 Sept., 1885; Antwerp, 26 Sept., 1903; Edinburgh, 22 Sept., 1904; Ghent, 16 Sept., 1905; The Sorbonne, 26 March, 1910. INTERPRETATION ACT, "for consolidating enactments relating to the construction of acts of parliament and for further shortening the language used in acts of parliament" was passed 30 Aug. 1889.

INTRANSIGENTS, or irreconcilables, a party of extreme republicans in Spain, who withdrew from the Cortes and became very troublesome, 1 July, 1873; joined by communists they held Carthagena from August to 12 Jan., 1874.

INUNDATIONS. The following are among the most remarkable:

An inundation of the sea in Lincolnshire "laid under water many thousand acres. Cambridge, A.D.

Another in Cheshire, by which 3000 persons and an innumerable quantity of cattle perished 1833.

An inundation at Glasgow, which drowned more than 400 families. Forbid

The Texel overflowed its banks, and laid waste the country for 30 miles round 1814.

An inundation on the English coasts, demolished a number of farmhouses and houses 1814.

Earl Godwin's lands, exceeding 4000 acres, over flowed by the sea, and an immense sand-bank formed on the coast of Kent, now known by the name of Godwin's sands. 1814.

Flanders inundated by the sea, and the town and harbour of Ostend totally immersed 1815.

More than 500 houses overwhelmed at Winchelsea by an inundation of the sea 1820.

At the Texel, which first raised the commerce of Amsterdam 1490.

The sea broke in at Dort, and drowned 72 villages, and 100,000 people 17 April, 1841.

The Severn overflowed during ten days, and carried away men, women, and children, in their beds, and covered the tops of many hills; the waters settled upon the lands, and were called the Great Waters for 100 years after, 1 Richard II. Holkham.

A general inundation by the failure of the dikes in Holland; the number of drowned said to have been 400,000 1843.

The waters rose above the tops of the houses, and allowed the dikes to be overflowed in Somersetshire and Gloucestershire 1667.

At Calcutta, where 10,000 persons perished 1817.

An inundation in Yorkshire, when a bank opened, and the waters rose up to the height of a church steeple. Tide Phil. Trans. 1866.

Part of Zealand overflowed, 1300 inhabitants were drowned, and incredible damage was done at Ham burg 1717.

At Madrid, several of the Spanish nobility and other persons of distinction perished 1733.

In Yorkshire, a dreadful inundation, called Ripon Flood 1771.

In Navarre, where 2000 persons lost their lives by the torrents from the mountains 1777.

Inundation of the Liffey, which did immense damage in Dublin, 12 Nov., 1857; again, 23 Dec., 1862.

Loire, a city of Mursia, in Spain, destroyed by the bursting of a reservoir, which inundated more than 20 leagues, and killed 1600 persons, besides cattle 14 April, 1872.

At Pesh, near Persburg, the overflow of the Danube, by which 24 villages and their inhabitants were swept away 1874.

In the vicinity of Salop, by the bursting of a cloud during a storm, many persons and much stock perished 1875.

Dreadful inundation in Hungary, Austria, and Poland, in the summer of 1875.

Overload of the Danube; a Turkish corps of 2000 men, on a small island near Woldini, surprised, and met instant death 14 Sept., 1876.

In Silesia, 6000 inhabitants perished, and the ruin of the French army under Macdonald was accelerated by the floods; also in Poland 4000 lives were supposed to have been lost 8 Sept., 1879.

At Stralsund, Ireland, by the melting of the snow on the surrounding mountains, most destructive floods were occasional 15 Jan., 1876.

In Germany, the Vistula overflowed; many villages were laid under water, and great loss of life and property was sustained 21 March, 1879.

In England, 1600 acres were delayed in the Fens 31 March, 1879.

Inundation at Danzig, occasioned by the Vistula breaking through some of its dikes, by which 10,000 head of cattle and 4000 houses were destroyed, and many acres lived in 25 April, 1880.

The "Moray Firths," caused by rain, when the Spey and Findhorn rose in some places 50 feet above their ordinary level, and caused great destruction of property. Many lives were lost, and whole families who took refuge on elevated places were with difficulty rescued 6 and 27 June, 1881.

At Vienna, the dwellings of 20,000 of its inhabitants lay under water 17 Feb., 1880.

19,000 houses swept away, and about 1000 persons perished, at Canton, in China, in consequence of an inundation, occasional, equal or greater calamity was produced by the same cause in other parts of China 1883.

Awful inundation in France; the Seine poured its waters into the Rhine, broke through its banks, and covered 65,000 acres; Lyons was inundated; in Avignon 100 houses were swept away; 216 houses were carried away at La Guillediere; and upsurges of the Rhone at Vaise, Marnes and Lyons, where the Seine had not attained such a height for 200 years 20 Oct. to 4 Nov., 1840.

Lamentable inundation at Brentford and the surrounding country; several lives lost, immensity property destroyed 16 Jan., 1841.

Disastrous inundation in the centre, west, and southwest of France; numerous bridges, with the Orleans and Vienne viaducts, swept away; the latter had cost 6,000,000 of francs. The damage done exceeded 4,000,000, sterling 22 Oct., 1846.

Lamentable catastrophe at Holland 20 Jan., 1851.

Inundation of the Thames, Sept. 1853.

Inundations of the basins of Rhine and Rhone, overflowing the country to a great extent 13 Sept., 1867.

Hamburg half flooded by the Elbe 1 Jan., 1873.

Inundations in south of France, with immense damage 28 Feb., 1874.

In Holland, nearly 10,000 acres submerged 1 Jan., 1875.

Great inundation through the bursting of the outlet full sluice at St. Germain's, near Kingston, in the Genesee, Feb. 1875.

Bursting of the Bradford reservoir (see Shiffield) 1875.
